WHEN YOU'VE BEEN AWAY.
When you've been away for a week or two
And the mail's stacked up like a chimney flue

When you've been away and your desk's piled high
With a lot of stuff that is stale and dry.

When are we going to sign another armistice?
Cut the propaganda, is the slogan of Florida newspapers.

SMOTHERING AN ISSUE.

Not in many years has any city of Florida waged a fight so fraught with personal animosities as in the majority campaign in Tampa.

The fight in Tampa is its own. If the men of that beautiful, progressive and fortunate city have no greater pride for their city, than to bury an issue under the mud of attack against personal character and the private lives of the two candidates, that is Tampa's business.

But such a fight must attract statewide, and even nation-wide attention. And in it can be found a warning for any other city, where men smother their convictions under the lava of prejudice and passion.

The Tampa Tribune, throughout the fight has maintained a high tone, and has made many pleas, editorially, for a sane campaign.

There is a fine challenge in these words. "Mud-slinging" never yet aided any campaign, or helped any people or any community to reach a higher altitude of success.

GETTING AHEAD OF THE GAME.
In a recent news story, the Miami Herald calls attention to the great increase in Miami's export trade, which has tripled during the past year.

On his recent visit to Pensacola, Garard Harris pointed out that in the establishment of trade routes, and particularly with South American countries, we could not hope to sell unless we also bought.

These things will not come about, however, of their own volition; they will come because we compel them to come; because we offer such inducements as will assure them to us.

Now here comes Sir Oliver Lodge and says that Americans are lacking in imagination. Well, we have often heard the Britisher was lacking in humor, and now we know it.

The Plant City Courier wants everybody to sweat the "female mosquito"—that is carrying anti-suffrage propaganda entirely too far.

Now the winter visitors are writing back and telling how cold it is, and how they hate to get up so early to keep the furnace going, and how long it takes to shovel the snow.

Press Comment

Customs Record Broken.
An interesting commentary on the progress of events is supplied by the fact that customs receipts at the port of New York in the month of March established a new monthly record.

The two interesting features of the report lie in the fact that most of the dutiable goods reaching New York in that month were classed as luxuries. This not only shows the American people are buying freely abroad, but they are spending much money for articles which they really could do without if they were short of cash.

"Six Days Shalt Thou Labor and Do All Thy Work."
The same God who laid upon the children of Israel the injunction to observe the sanctity of the Sabbath, proclaimed also the holiness of toil and declared that labor is the law of salvation.

There is nothing in this commandment that we of the present day are warranted in interpreting as Divine sanction for shorter hours or artificial restriction of production.

Okaloosa County and Good Roads.
The progress Okaloosa county has made and is making in the building of hard roads is attracting attention throughout West Florida.

Okaloosa has gone about building hard roads in the right way. That man Davis, who solved the engineering problems of the Crestview-Camp Walton road, has been worth many thousands of dollars to Okaloosa county.

Men who drive over this road say it is the best in the South, and wonder why the digout-and-fill plan was not thought of before.

Florida newspapers, fighting the scarcity of newsprint, present an odd appearance. One day they are six columns and the next seven. One day they appear on fine book paper and the next on a brand that looks very much like the grocer's wrapping paper.

"THE VAMPIRE" MODERNIZED.
A fool there was and his home he sold. Even as you and I; And he laughed as he counted out his gold.

Revelations of a Wife

A Willing Girl Makes a Good Servant.
The chiming of the clock an hour after Dicky had gone to the studio after our gay little noon dinner warned me that I was not dressed and that the cooks whose advertisements I had answered might call at any minute.

Two women, covertly eyeing each other with suspicion, stood in the hallway when I opened the door. To my invitation to come in each responded, "Thank you," and the entrance of both was quiet.

"You came in answer to the advertisement," I queried.
The old woman silently held forth my letter and two or three other papers pinned together. I saw that they were references written in varying feminine cigraphy.

"Oh! yes, Missie," the Polish girl exclaimed, "I put my—what do you call it?—My—"

"What wages do you ask?"
"Thirty-five dollars a month, every other Sunday and every other Thursday out, no washing, no bed-making, no children. If there are only two in the family I will do all the cleaning."

"If you take her, you no want me. I tell nothing while she here. If you no take her, then she go, then I tell you everything."

According to all my theories and my training I should have chosen the older woman. Efficiency always has been an idol of mine.

"Have you much company, and does your husband bring home friends without notice?" the older woman's harsh tones broke in.

The questions turned the scale from the standpoint of strict justice, the standard from which I always had tried to reason, she was perfectly justified in asking the questions before she took the place.

The woman took the car fare with the same stolidity she had shown through the whole interview. "I do not think I would like you for a madam, either," she said quietly as she went out.
