AMERICAN ILLS BE DISCUSSED

UNITED STATES CHAMBER COMMERCE IN THREE-DAY SESSION WILL ATTEMPT REMEDY.

Washington, April 28.--Means of stimulating production of the necessities of life, as a step toward the cure of American economic and social ills, will be sole topic of discussion at the eighth annual conference of the United States Chamber of Commerce which will open in Atlantic City next Monday and continue until Thursday.

Holding that the responsibility for increased production rests equally upon capital, labor and agricultural interests, the program committee, it is announced here today, has arranged to have representatives of each present their views on the question.

While the conference will deal primarily with material methods of increasing production, such as introduction of modern machinery, elimination of waste and the increased efficiency of distribution, the chamber is prepared, it was learned today, to follow with a nation-wide effort to stir individual Americans to their duty to aid the movement in every line of endeavor.

Industrial unrest reported by members of the Chamber is without exception ascribed as the basic cause for the high prices the average worker has to pay for everything he purchases. Against this however, is reported an apparent disposition on the part of the worker to reduce his effort during working hours or of any off a part of each week or month. The convention will endeavor to work out a program by means of which both the manufacturer and the employe will be shown the necessity of augmenting output for the common good rather than as a method of increasing immediate profits.

"Work alone offers a cure for many of the ills left by war," said Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Chamber, "increased production means a larger share of the necessities and comforts for our own people; it means more for Europe, where people are dying for lack of food and clothes. In it lies the only means of making up the wastage of war."

"The duty of America is to produce. The responsibility lies on all alike, the merchant, the farmer, the worker. The connection of effort may be made to revive the proposal for an international financial conference with a view to finding some equitable remedy for the foreign exchange situation. W. D. Simmons, of St. Louis and R. W. Belcher, of Washington, D. C. will address the conference on the subject of "Domestic Distribution," and Secretary Alexander, of the Department of Commerce, is expected to indicate how the government can go to co-operate in the movement. Others speakers will be George A. Post and William Fellowes Morgan, of New York.

The farmer, for the first time in the history of the chamber will be represented as a distinct and important part of the nation's industrial machinery. J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Clemons, Ia., and Secretary Meredith, of the Department of Agriculture will attend the conference.
