Sun Brothers' Have Many Features

An unprecedented attraction with the Sun Brothers' Great Tented Shows this season, is the introduction at every performance of Herr Klots's herd of tango and pantomime elephants. These jungle giants give imitations of a brass band, dance the latest tangoes and turkey trots, stand on their heads, play base ball and bowl ten pins; they walk ropes and perform many other equally amusing and difficult tricks. They are truthfully advertised as the most wonderful elephants today in America.

Besides this elephantine display, other attraction, all of a high grade character are shown, and will introduce the leading American and foreign artists, "Tairo Bill," the $10,000 high school horse, also appears at every performance. This beautiful equine is handled and performed by Mlle. Kelland, the well known New York horse woman.

There will be two performance of the Sun Brothers' Shows here on November 25th, with the usual free attractions on the rounds at 12:30 p. m., which are new and highly original.

History Repeats Itself. That a practice resorted to by the desperate and foe enveloped Confederacy should be repeated in the history of a vigorous and resourceful nation like Germany would have seemed incredible a few months ago. The recent appeal of the German Minister of the Interior to the apothecaries of the realm urging the gathering of medicinal plants as substitutes of important drugs that had become or were likely to become inaccessible brings vividly to the memory of those who lived in the South during the civil war groups of women and children gathering yellow jessamine, green nellibone, saffron, oak, and dog wood bark.

Today the German apothecaries are following their example by order of the government to collect digitalis and belladonna leaves, arnica and camomile flowers and other plants designated by the minister of the interior, to be laid away in proper manner against the day of dire need that may come from the isolation of Germany by the Allies.

That the methodical system and foresight by the Germans in the piping time of peace are matched by their activities in war is evidenced by their not waiting for the time of need, but preparing in advance of its possible approach. Herein our people may learn a valuable lesson in an apparently small matter.

One may as reasonably anticipate illness from the storing up of poisonous drugs for its treatment as to insist that the gathering of munitions of war and the training of our citizens for the prevention of possible war, will hasten war's coming.—New York Sun.

Appeal to Our Citizens. Our report shows that we received $1,000 and disbursed over $1,400.00 during the past twelve months, besides articles of clothing, etc., and the president of each ward gave a lot of valuable time in investigating each case. Certainly there would have been much suffering had it not been for your assistance through our association.

Now, we are asking today through each church for volunteers who will meet with us next Thursday afternoon, Nov. 18th, at 3 o'clock at the First M. E. Church, to help us assist for our next year's work and plan in a campaign for raising funds. Just a little time, will you not give it for the sake of suffering humanity? A little assistance by all will greatly relieve our society and aid distressed people during the next 12 months. A period that will surely try men's souls.

"Why is Flubdub growling at you?" "Just a slight coolness, that's all. Seems that I didn't plant enough garden to fatten his poultry properly for Thanksgiving. So now he has to buy feed."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"What do you consider the most despicable creature on earth?" said he by way of uncorking a little conversation.

"The man that knows he can't dance but won't admit it," she said, which showed evidence of frequent contact with his oxford.—Buffalo Express.

GROWN IN MISSISSIPPI HAY WINS NEW VICTORY

As a Hay Johnson grass has still further established its worth by recently winning a victory over Timothy hay in a feeding test conducted by the Mississippi A. and M. College Experiment Station. This home grown Johnson grass hay proved to be not only superior to Timothy in feeding value, but cost only about half as much.

In the experiments separate lots of mules were fed Johnson grass, Timothy, Bermuda grass, Lespedeza, and Alfalfa to determine the feeding value of the five hays. In addition to the hay sufficient oats, corn and cob meal, and cotton seed meal were added to make balanced rations.

All of the hays were well cured and free from foreign matter. They were bought at the market prices, as follows: Johnson grass $11.00 per ton; Timothy $20.00 per ton; Bermuda $11.00; Lespedeza $15.00; Alfalfa $15.00.

According to E. R. Lloyd, director of the station conducting the test, there were twenty-two mules used in the experiment. Five mules were fed Johnson grass, and five received Timothy. The other three lots contained only four mules each. The mules received equal amounts of grain feed, and equal portions of hay. All of the mules remained in splendid condition throughout the entire eighty-nine days the experiment lasted.

The results showed alfalfa to stand first in feeding value, and in producing cheap gains. Lespedeza was a close second, Johnson grass third, Timothy fourth, and Bermuda fifth. The cost of a pound of gain in the mules with the different hays in the otherwise similar rations was as follows: Alfalfa 21 cents, Lespedeza 27 cents, Bermuda 37 cents, Johnson grass 36 cents, Timothy hay 48 cents. The mules fed Johnson grass made slightly greater gains than those fed Timothy.

"Even if both of these hays were figured at the same price of $15.00 a ton," said Director Lloyd, "the Johnson grass still produces cheaper gains."

The Way of Queens. The pride of birth is strong among women of royal and aristocratic European households. It is rare that they do not give preference to the house and country from which they have come rather than to those into which they have entered.

"The Queen of Belgium alone, a Bavarian princess," says Le Cri de Paris, "shows absolute loyalty to the people over whom she has been called to reign. The Queen of Greece is plainly much more proud that she is the sister of the Kaiser than that she is the wife of King Constantine. Some years ago these words of a young prince of a reigning family were quoted: 'When the enemy is victor papa is sad; when the enemy is beaten mama cries.'"

"We have known several times in French history the misfortune of having a queen who used her influence for the profit of the country of her birth."

Bayle says in his dictionary: "The fatality that accompanies the French monarchy, more than any other country in the world, is that the Queens always bear a foreign heart and are the usual instrument made use of by God to humiliate and chasten of the nation."—Ex.

Not the Ocean. "Does not the illimitable ocean vista take you out of yourself?" "No, it is the motion of the boat that does that!"—Houston Post.

A man who writeth for the newspaper, says an exchange, is of few days and lots of grief. He riseth in the morning and knoweth not what the day will bring forth. If he telleth all the news, he runneth great risks of getting a tin ear putteth upon him, and if he telleth not the news the people say he is N. G., and there is no health for him. The crafty man cajoleth him into giving him a fifty cent puff for a five cent cigar, and fond mothers frown upon him if he faileth to flatter their freckled-face brood. And all his ways are ways of woe, and his days are full of sorrow. The life insurance man tackleth him, and the peddler and the book agent heth snares for him; and on the whole he hath a shoel of a time.
