SENATOR WILLIAMS ADVISES CURTAILING

HEROIC BUT NECESSARY PIECE OF SURGERY

Says It is Perfectly Practical for State Legislatures to Compel Reduction.

Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, member of the senate committee which reported that the supreme court precedents show no federal objection to the cotton states prohibiting the production of cotton in 1915, has given out the following interview:

"I would be perfectly willing to see every cotton state pass a law to prohibit the cultivation of a single acre of cotton for the year 1915. I would not only be willing, but I think that while it would be a heroic piece of surgery it would be advisable from every possible standpoint and would result in incalculable good in not only making the cotton we have on hand worth something, but in repaying us from the 1916 crop all that we had lost by having no cotton at all in 1915, and would, above all, result in the extinction of the boll weevil.

"There is a perfectly practical plan of reducing acreage, and that is for each state legislature, where the state raises cotton, to pass a law forbidding the planting of over so much cotton to a mule, or requiring the acreage to be only 50 per cent of what it was last year, or forbidding the planting of cotton altogether if the legislature thinks it wise and well. The states have power to do that—the federal government has not. Legislation like that was enacted during the war by various cotton states. The object at that time was to save the land to be put into corn and supplies for the Confederacy.

Would Save Price.

"There is nothing in the world except the fact of reduction of acreage, known beforehand which will save the price of this year's crop and of the next year's crop; the carrying over of 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 bales of cotton will not do it. Of course, it will help some but the cotton carried over will be part of the world's visible supply, and must have its effect upon the market. If cotton carried over were to be dumped next year upon a normal crop, or even an 11,000,000-bale crop, cotton would not sell at over six cents a pound—it would be merely postponing a day of bad reckoning to a day of worse reckoning.

"It is perfectly practicable for the states to do what I have suggested, and to make it a crime punishable by fine and imprisonment for anybody who violates the law. If such legislation were upon the statute books anybody everywhere would know it, and spinners would begin to buy hand over fist in order not to be caught at the very height of the market. As I said, the federal government has no power to do it, nor could we do it, even if we had the power, because the senators and representatives from the balance of the Union would not let us do it.

Blow to the Boll Weevil.

"In my own private opinion, it would not be a bad thing if all the cotton states into any part of whose area the boll weevil has thus far made its appearance, or where it threatens to make its appearance next year from being contiguous to boll weevil districts in other states, would forbid absolutely the planting of cotton next year. If this were done it would not only raise the price of this year's crop, but of the crop of year after next to such an extent as to compensate us for the lack of any crop next year at all. It would have another effect, the benefit of which is incalculable, to wit: the expiration of the boll weevil. The scientists all tell us that the boll weevil cannot exist twelve months without cotton to feed on.

"I have joined the 'Buy-a-Bale-of-Cotton Club' and have bought a bale at ten cents; but, in my opinion, even if we could buy five or six million bales in that way and carry it over it would be merely postponing a day of bad reckoning to a day of worse reckoning.

"Nothing is to be hoped in the way of reduction of acreage from the voluntary action of the producer.

"We do not want cotton to go too high. We do not want to maintain a permanent situation where the price is so high as to encourage all parts of the earth to grow cotton to proceed to do it. It is a great mistake to think that the area of land adapted to cotton is very restricted. India, China, and a good part of the temperate zone elsewhere can raise cotton. All the tropics can raise it in a sort of way and a sort of cotton. The reason why there is not more cotton grown in China and India is because it pays better to grow stuff to feed the teeming millions of these countries, and also because they never had had the cotton planting business resting upon the foundation of organization, which we had in slavery times and which has been, in a large measure, perpetuated since.

"If the world knew that cotton would sell at twenty cents a pound, say, or even at sixteen cents for fifteen years to come unless cotton production outside of the United States should be very much increased, we might safely wager that the increase would come. We want to meet this emergency and that desperate situation into which it has thrown us with a desperate remedy and after the emergency is over we want things to take their normal course, as they hitherto have been left to do."

Important Notice!

The Mississippi State Board of Pharmacy will meet in regular session October 6th, 1914, at Jackson, Miss., at 8 a. m., to examine applicants for license to practice pharmacy. Write W. W. Ellis, of Fernwood, Miss., for an application blank. We find that a great many drug stores are not registering the "poisons" that they sell. Now, this is a violation of the State laws, and the Board or Secretary will see to it that this important law is enforced. The State law requires that you keep a poison register and that you record date of sale, name of person, for purpose intended, age, color, sex, amount of poison, and name of dispenser of poison. The Leader, of Brookhaven, Miss., has on hand now an official register book compiled by the Secretary of the Board. You can get one of the registers for a very small sum. This register also has the Mississippi State poison laws printed on same.

We are also informed that there are quite a number of drug stores in the State being run without an active or no registered druggist. The Board will not put up with this any longer and you must put a registered pharmacist in your drug store. It is the duty of every officer of the law from judge down to the constable to see to it that the law is enforced. Any law-abiding citizen should assist us in the matter. Don't you want competent druggists to fill your prescriptions?

Laten, if you were sick and sent for a physician, he diagnoses the case, he writes you a prescription, you take it to a drug store and may be the person or druggist does not know how to fill it or compound the prescription. Now what's the use in this case to send for the physician? Do you know of any doctor or lawyer in the State practicing his profession without a license? All of the doctors, lawyers and dentists that I know have their license.

It is not the desire of the Board of Pharmacy to make it hard on any one. All we ask is that you comply with the law. Yours sincerely,
W. W. ELLIS,
Secretary, Mississippi Board of Pharmacy, Fernwood, Miss.

Herald Advertiser Gets Results.
One of our patrons advertised a place last week and in ten hours after the paper was off of the press the place was sold and the gentleman told us that he had other applicants and could have sold several places that size.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

An Ironing Hint.

Fold a bath towel into four double layers and lay the buttoned fastening face down on it, and the iron will move as easily over them as over the button holes; also in ironing embroidery on the back, use the towel on top of the ironing board, press the design on the wrong side and it will stand out much better than when the towel is not used.—Mothers' Magazine.

Orange Dessert.

Take half as many large juicy oranges as there are people to be served, and cut them in halves crosswise. Scoop out the pulp, leaving the shell nice and smooth. Mix with the orange pulp various fruits; sliced bananas, shredded pineapple, or any other fruits that may be desired. Then refill the shells and on top sprinkle shredded coconut. In the center put a candied or maraschino cherry.—Delineator.

A fruit stain, as a rule, may be quickly removed by sponging it with alcohol. An advantage of alcohol over water treatment is that alcohol does not injure the color or texture of the most delicate fabrics. Of course, a stain on table linen may usually be removed by pouring boiling water through it, and if the water is poured from a height, the additional force it has when reaching the linen, is an aid in the cleaning process.

Always begin at the shoulders in fitting a blouse. If the shoulders fit in the proper manner, you need have no fear about the rest of the bodice.

Always cut the center front of a bodice on the straight of the material. If necessary, it may be taken in very slightly at the waist when being fitted. But if you slope it much the set of the blouse will be wrong and this is true even when it is to fit a very stout figure.

A Good Supper Dish.

One cupful of cooked rice, three cupfuls of canned tomatoes, one-half onion, one slice of bacon cut in small pieces, salt and celery salt to taste. Put the bacon in a frying pan and try out the fat; then slice the onion into it, add the tomatoes and rice and cook until it is a good consistency; then add the seasonings. This takes the place of potatoes, and is exceptionally good served with cooked cold meats.—Exchange.

Bordeaux Sauce.

Wash and chop a half peck green tomatoes, and one hard head of cabbage; put these in a large bowl, sprinkle over two teaspoonfuls of black pepper, three-quarters of a pound of brown sugar, a half cupful of salt, one ounce each of turmeric, ground ginger and crushed celery seed, a level teaspoonful of ground cloves, and a quarter pound of white mustard seed; mix thoroughly, and pour over one gallon of cider vinegar. Cook in a porcelain or granite kettle, 20 minutes, stirring once or twice. Have ready, thoroughly cleansed pint or quart jars, fill them to overflowing, adjust the rubbers and fasten the tops. This will keep all winter.—Good Housekeeping.

Mexican Tamales.

"Will you please give in your department the recipe for true Mexican chicken tamales. D. H."

Select a full grown fowl, put it over the fire in cold water, bring slowly to a boil, and cook until tender, salting the liquor when the fowl is about half done. Strip the meat from the bones, chop fine and season with a little garlic and a liberal supply of red pepper. Make a thick paste of a little boiling water and a cup of corn meal, form the meat into small rolls about the size of your little finger and enclose each in cornmeal paste. Wrap each of these in the inner husk of corn, washing the husks well first, add a couple of Mexican peppers to the liquor in which the chicken was cooked, lay the tamales in this, and simmer for quarter of an hour.

Mock Sweetbreads.

Take one pound of raw veal (a cheap or cut is preferable), grind with the finest knife in the meat chopper, then place in a wooden bowl and pound with a wooden potatoe masher until perfectly smooth. Add two ounces of shredded suet, two ounces of bread crumbs, a pinch of mace, a dash of red pepper and half a teaspoonful of salt. Beat two eggs, add a teaspoonful of sweet milk, stir into the meat, add flour enough to make a stiff paste. Form the shape of sweetbreads, dot with bits of butter, and bake one hour.

Melt one ounce of butter, add one teapoonful of flour; stir until brown; pour in one cupful of boiling water and allow to thicken. Place the mock sweetbreads in a deep dish, pour over the gravy and serve. If prepared according to directions it will be impossible to tell these from the real sweetbreads.

Paprika Chicken.

Paprika chicken is delicious. Select a tender young chicken and after it has been cut into joints rub the flesh with salt and powder it with Paprika. When thus prepared put the chicken into a saucepan with a can of tomatoes and cook them together, without adding a drop of water, until the chicken is done. At this point arrange the chicken on a hot platter, add a cupful of cream to the tomato, season to taste with Paprika, add a little salt if necessary and pour this rich sauce over the chicken just before it is served. Although this is an extremely simple dish, says the New Haven Journal-Courier, it would be difficult to conceive of a more delectable method of serving chicken.

Chocolate Filling.

When melting chocolate for cake-filling, if the inside of the pan is first rubbed with a little butter, it keeps the chocolate from sticking to the pan and prevent waste when removing it.—People's Home Journal.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

The fact that the cotton that sold for the highest price in this section was ginned by us, is proof conclusive that gins operated by steam power obtain the best results.

In soliciting your patronage, we do so strictly on our merits, and not on sentiment.

We have made a close study of the ginning business, and we claim that we are in a position to gin your cotton so that you will get a big turn-out, and at the same time secure a smooth sample, so that you will be assured the highest market price.

We will pay you as much for your seed as any other bona fide buyer of seed will pay you, and we will sell you hulls and meal as cheap as any other oil mill will sell them to you.

You may rest assured that any business entrusted to us will receive the very best of attention, but should you have cause for complaint, do not hesitate to advise us, for though we do our utmost in all matters, we may unintentionally make an error, which we will be only too pleased to correct when brought to our notice.

Hoping that conditions will soon improve and you will be enabled to market your crop at satisfactory prices, we are,

Yours very truly,
