E. E. SMITH, G. A. MEBANE, J. H. WILLIAMSON, EDITORS.

LOCAL BRIEFS. Railroad has been quite cheap during the week.

The people refused to issue bonds to have the streets paved.

We are to be buried in mud, or suffocated by the dust a while longer.

We have a communication from a Lincoln student, which we will publish in our next.

Several articles from friends which we desire to publish, but cannot do so for the want of space.

Forward your subscription to this paper as soon as you receive a specimen copy, or sooner if you will.

In another column will be found "ESTA," or "ESTRANGED," from the facile pen of Miss Ada A. Newton.

Mr. Lewis H. Smith, colored, was appointed on the 3rd inst. postmaster at Maple Cypress, Craven county.

Teachers of Wake will notice elsewhere a call for a meeting of the teachers' association of this county.

J. C. Daney, Esq., editor of N. C. Sentinel, was in the city Monday looking after subscribers for his paper.

For fresh and first class groceries, don't forget to call at Andrews & Ferrall's. They sell at bottom prices.

Mr. A. A. Williams closed his school in Wayne county on last Friday after a session of several weeks.

For fine brands of cigars, tobacco, snuff, &c., go and see S. M. Richardson. You are referred to his card in this paper.

Alfred Williams & Co's down-town book store, is attracting attention. Drop in when you want goods in their line.

Owing to a continual falling barometer, we suppose the railroad election passed off very quietly on the 17th inst.

The subscription to the Albemarle and Raleigh Railroad was carried in Raleigh Township, but it was defeated in the county.

Patronize those merchants who advertise in the BANNER-ENTERPRISE. They are friendly to our advancement in the race of life.

The Hesperian Social Club, we are informed, will give an entertainment some time next week, complimentary to L. W. Nash and lady.

The ladies' building association of St. Paul's A. M. Church, will give an entertainment on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week.

The attention of our readers is directed to the advertisement of S. L. Alderman, Esq., photographer. It is a real treat to visit his gallery and examine his artistic work.

See the card of I. G. Hayes, Esq., Attorney at Law, in another column. And should you become involved with the powers that be—you will do well to consult him.

A correspondent at Warrenton informs us that Mr. Christmas, father of Mr. L. T. Christmas, died last Sunday evening; and that it is quite sickly in that section.

The Executive Committee of the State Board of Agriculture have been in session several days this week preparing to have North Carolina properly represented at the Boston Exhibition.

If you wish a clean shave, neat hair cut, or anything done pertaining to the tonsorial art, go to Tom Taylor's. He does his work according to the latest style. Also fine cigars and tobacco.

A communication from Mr. E. G. Calhoun, of Wilson, is crowded out of this issue. We would say, however, that Mr. C. is enterprising and fully alive to the necessity of elevating the race.

The attention of those desiring handsome furniture, picture frames, &c., is respectfully called to the advertisement of Messrs. Mack W. Brown & Co., to be found elsewhere in this paper. Give them a call.

Messrs. Baker & Hoover, saloonists, keep constantly on hand a well assorted stock of goods not "dry," and promise to satisfy the "thirst" of all who will favor them with a call. Read their advertisement.

J. W. Watson, Esq., the old reliable photographer, has had his gallery remodeled, and is now executing the finest work in the art. If you can't get a good picture he will sit for you. Give him a trial.

For fine picture frames, window shades, cornices, curtains, &c., you are directed to Mr. Fred A. Watson's manufacturing establishment. He has a fine and well assorted stock of goods at prices to suit the times.

Those desiring the pleasure of an evening's ride or the use of a fine "turnout" at any time will do no better than by ordering of Melvin Nobles, Esq. He will furnish them at the most reasonable terms. When you visit this city don't forget his name.

The town of Mt. Olive, on the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, is one of the most flourishing between Wilmington and Weldon. Its population is about four hundred. It has two schools, five churches, twelve stores, three saloons, five physicians, one judge and a crank. Three of the merchants of this borough are colored men who seem to be doing a fair trade. The postmaster is a colored man.

Education.

The State Normal School at Franklinton closed its second session last week. The closing exercises were splendid, and we will give an extended notice of the exhibition next week.

Probable Murder. Yesterday morning some parties found the body of one Simon Mitchner, colored, lying under the large wheel at Johnson & Barbour's mill near Auburn, in St. Mary's Township, with a large gash across his throat, and it is supposed that he had been murdered. He was at the election at Auburn yesterday and voted and left there late in the afternoon, accompanied by two colored men. Just before dark his nephew and another colored boy found his umbrella on a bridge near the place where his body was found this morning. He was 47 years old, and was very quiet, industrious and inoffensive. The coroner was notified, and has gone out to investigate the case.

State Fair and Public Schools Again. We recently published the offer of a $30 set of maps as a special premium to be competed for at the State Fair this fall by the public schools, outside of incorporated cities, for the best map drawing. We now take great pleasure in stating for the further benefit of the schools, that Messrs. Alfred Williams & Co., book-sellers of this city, offer one Johnson Revolving Book Case, valued at $15, for the best county maps, drawn by any pupil of a public school located in an incorporated town; the map to be of the county in which the pupil resides, and on the scale of one mile to the inch. Also Baker, Pratt & Co., New York, manufacturers of school furniture, through Messrs. A. Williams & Co., offer one handsome walnut teacher's desk, valued at $40, for the best drawn map of North Carolina, by any teacher in the State, on a scale of six miles to the inch. All maps to be drawn in 1883. These are most elegant and useful premiums and are well worth competing for.—News and Observer.

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE. Among the prominent gentlemen visiting the city during the week were: Col. John L. Morehead, A. Burwell, Charlotte; M. L. Holmes, Esq., Kerr Craige, Esq., Salisbury; Col. T. M. Holt, Haw River; P. B. Ruffin, James Mullen, Halifax; Capt. A. H. A. Williams, Oxford; Col. J. D. Whitford, New Bern; Col. L. W. Humphrey, Goldsboro; C. C. Clark, Esq., New Bern.

The directors of the N. C. Railroad held a special meeting on the 17th. The principal object was to consider matters pertaining to the purchase of the Governor's mansion property. A committee was appointed to make a survey, &c.

Prof. C. H. Moore, of the State Normal School at Salisbury, is spending a few days in the city, and is "suspect" on very important business.

We have the very excellent address of Prof. Harris, delivered before the Hesperians, which will appear in our next.

Mr. L. W. Nash and bride arrived on the 12:15 train yesterday from Wilmington.

Prof. M. A. Hopkins, of the State Normal School, at Franklinton, is in the city.

The city schools are well attended and progressing finely.

The election on Tuesday passed off quietly, no disturbance of any kind occurring in the city. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather quite a good vote was polled. The following is the vote of the city and county on the railroad question so far as heard from:

Table with 5 columns: ward, For, Agt, Reg'n, Raleigh. Rows include First ward, Second ward, Third ward, Fourth ward, Fifth ward, Outside, East, Outside, West, Barton's Creek, Hutchins's store, Rogers' store, Buckhorn, Cary, Cedar Fork, Morrisville, Pollard's, Henshaw's store, Harris' store, Little River, Mitchell's Mill, Wakefield, Mark's Creek, Middle Creek, Neuse River, New Light, Oak Grove, Farmer Branch, St. Mary's, St. Matthews, Swift Creek, Wake Forest, Forestville, Rolesville, White Oak.

Attention, Colored Men and Women of North Carolina. Is your life insured? If not, insure at once. Don't wait any longer. All persons who desire to insure in the Valley Mutual Association of Virginia, can do so by calling on me at my office, in this city, or town which I may visit, in this State.

The Valley Mutual is one of the best Insurance Companies in the country, and affords easy access for all.

It is safe and reliable, and one strong feature in its favor is that the best men in the State are insuring in it daily. I am a duly authorized agent, and will be pleased to converse with those wishing to insure, and give any information at my disposal.

J. H. WILLIAMSON, Securing Agent Valley Mutual Life Association of Virginia, for the State at Large. Raleigh, N. C., April 7, 1883.

ESTA;

—OR—

ESTRANGED.

BY ADA A. NEWTON.

A very pretty cottage near the sea; a vine-covered porch, a garden of the choicest flowers and walks strewn with gravel. From the rear of the cottage could be seen mountains, the peaks of which could be seen in the hazy distance; from the front could be seen the blue, blue sea. On the porch sat a young lady gazing at the sea; one would not have called her handsome, for the mouth was too wide, and the nose somewhat inclined to turn up; but her fine, intellectual forehead and her dreamy, brown eyes spoke for her more than beauty.

Esta Morton was an earnest, noble, unselfish, Christian girl; she sat with her eyes fixed on the sea as if in deep meditation; ere long she broke the silence that surrounded her by saying, "How calm and beautiful is the sea! and yet it contains dead men's bones; so also does it conceal precious gems. What are those lines of Mrs. Hemans'?"

"To thee the love of woman hath gone down; Dark flow thy tides o'er manhood's noble head. O'er Youth's bright locks and beauty's flowery crown. Yet muse thou hear a voice—Restore the dead!"

Earth shall restore her precious things from thee; Restore the dead, thou sea!"

"How often life seem calm and placid as that water; yet how often is hidden that which, if revealed, would be as terrible to look upon as the bones that this sea covered." She arose, went in the house, seated herself at the piano and sang:

"I stood where the summertime flowing Homeward the bark gaily bore; But I know the same ocean was throwing Tokens of wreck on the shore. Still a voice through the song of gladness, Hopes fraught with joy came to me, And it filled all my heart with a sadness By the blue sea."

"Why, Essie, where have you been? I have looked the house through for you; where were you hidden?"

"Well, Allena, had you have glanced through the window you would have seen me on the porch. Oh! yes, I forgot that you are always out there dreaming; but I tell you what I want. Mama has gone over to Lillie Lowne's and has brought us invitations to Lillie's party, and Esta, there is to be a stranger present, a Mr. Paul DeMott, and mama says that I may go if you will go."

"Let me see, Lena; a party, with a stranger present to play the agreeable to my sister. Well, I cannot say that I care much for the party, neither can I say that I am interested in the stranger; but to please my sweet little sister, we will go to this party, and mind, Lena, you are to make eyes at none but this stranger."

"Now, Essie, I care nothing at all for the stranger, but Lillie always gives such splendid parties; but say, sister, when have you heard from Charlie? I do not hear you speak of him now. What have I done, sister?" continued Allena, seeing that her sister had turned very pale, "I did not mean to hurt you."

"Well, Lena, run away; tell mama I will go with you."

After her sister had gone, Esta laid her head on the piano, and murmured, "How strange it is, what has happened to him? Is he false? No, I cannot believe that of him. What is it, that is what the waves ask always, 'What is it?' 'What is it?' Only God knows; the past is in His keeping; the future, His presence will clear. Esta Morton had been wooed and won by Charlie Leslie, a merchant's son. He had to come to New York as a lawyer. While there he met Esta, whose parents in the winter season resided in the city. The young man was welcomed as a visitor to the family, but when it became known that he was to be the hand of Esta, he was not so warmly received. The young man knowing that his love was returned, felt unwilling to release her. So he left her, saying as he pressed his kisses on her brow, 'Esta, I love you; no woman ever can be to me what you are; I am going away to gain wealth for you; cheer up, my darling, be true to the end, and remember that all is well that ends well.' He had left her to go out into the world and seek a fortune; since then she had heard from him but once. Winter had passed, and summer had come laden with its burden of fruit and flowers; how dreary the days seemed to her! Even the waves seemed to grieve with her; 'what is it?' what is it?' they seemed to say, and but the one answer could be returned, God alone knows.

"How our Esta has altered, mother," said Mr. Morton to his wife as he watched Esta and Allena wandering by the sea. "I wonder if she grieves for that fellow? I wish she had never seen him; a good enough fellow to be sure, but so poor; how foolish in her to want to marry him."

"Ah, my husband," mildly replied the wife, "his love that makes the world go ahead. I should hate to see my daughter wedded to wealth and misery. You forget that we were once poor; we lived in apartments, but were we not happy even then?"

"Esta, our children have been reared in wealth; would you like to see Allie in the kitchen baking, securing a draught in general, while Essie darned and patched? No, Esta, it was our misfortune to be poor, but our children, let us seek better things for them."

"But Allen, my husband, let our children choose for themselves. Essie loves Charlie, Leslie, and we ought to let her marry him. Do not let us cause our daughter's life to be happy as we were; 'tis a dreary life we have to lead; let us brighten it as much as we can."

"Well, you women never look further than your nose; it is as it is; I guess she will be contented. Marion Harland says, 'Hearts are at a discount in the market to-day, and hypocrisy may above par.' But we are not hypocrites, were we good wife? We have passed life together happily, even then."

"There's never a day so sunny but a little cloud appears, There's never a life so happy but has its time of tears; Yet the sun shines but the brighter When the storm-tempet clears."

Esta sat down by the beach while Lena gathered shells; she gazed at the water as though she would find out from it the cause of her trouble; that young brow was pale and worn and the flushed tear stood on her lash as she wearily sighed. How the water played at her feet! over and over it seemed to ask 'what is it? what is it?' and ever and anon the burden of song would change as the waves came rushing to her with the answer, 'God knows! Ah! the anguish hidden in that young breast. Could any one take away that dull, aching pain? Could they take away the sorrow that was stamped on that countenance? It was the old, old story. Autumn had brought to her its sad and yellow leaves, Spring had brought its roses. (TO BE CONTINUED.)
