The Fantasties.

On July 3rd, at half past two P. M. a procession, that would have caused Barnum, with his celebrated street parade to hunt his winter quarters, wound its way through the principle streets and thoroughfares of the city.
 The characters represented were all well gotten up, and showed that the wearers had not failed to completely disguise themselves.
 The brilliant procession was under the management of Gen. G. G. Gage, and the manner in which it was conducted shows that the Gen. has not forgotten his old war training.
 One great feature of the parade and probably the most interesting in it was the $10,000.00 beauty, who rode in a carriage driven by the "What-is-it."
 After the parade had made the rounds it disappeared as quietly and mysteriously as it came, and everyone resumed their duties well pleased with the exhibition.

After being released from the snake he walked to the house and despatched a messenger for Dr. T. Irwin, of South Perry, but before that gentleman arrived the neighbors had the snake victim completely under the influence of liquor, which alone preserved his life, as the Doctor declares that he could not have lived until his arrival. Mr. McClelland is now all right.—Adelphi Border News.
