Selected Poetry.

The Origin of Scandal.

Said Mrs. A. To Mrs. J. In quite a confidential way, "It seems to me that Mrs. B. Takes too much—something—in her tea."

That night was overheard to say—The greatest sin to which she fell, "But Mrs. B. took—such and such!"

West straight away And told a friend his all-same day, "Here came a wink—"

That Mrs. B. was fond of drink. The friend's alleged "Was such so much?"

Inform a lady, "twice she asked," "That Mrs. B. At half-past three Was that far gone she couldn't see?"

"This lady we Have mentioned, see Gave needless word to Mrs. B. And all such news Could scarcely choose But further needless-work refuse."

As you'll agree, "To those who would trace The scandal back Through Mrs. B. She got at last to Mrs. A. And asked her why, With cruel lie, She painted her so deep a dye?"

"In so dire a way, "I no such thing could ever say I said that you Had stouter grew On too much sugar—which you do!"

Family Reading.

PEOPLE WHOM I HAVE SEEN.

BY MRS. C. E. K. DAVIS.

A driving storm is this! How the wind howls and shrieks around the house! How fast and thick fall the feathery flakes! God help the poor!

I turned from the window, and sat down to the glowing comfort of a cheerful wood-fire and a new book, prepared to enjoy the brief hours of the winter afternoon to the utmost. But somehow the enjoyment failed to come. Up from the printed pages a group of faces looked wistfully into mine; hungry faces with lean cheeks and hollow eyes; weary faces, bearing the traces of hard and ill-requited labor; sorrowful faces, out which all smiles had faded; despairing faces which had forgotten or were afraid to look up to the heavens; there, and also, most touching of all, patient faces of the poor members of "the household of faith," crowded the pages of my book, and seemed throwing back to me from their quivering lips, my prayer—God pity the poor!

All at ease I certainly was, and yet not quite ready to hearken to the inward voice which bade me go forth and make good my petition, by doing what I could for their relief. It was so rough without—so bitterly cold, so—

"If ye please, ma'am, did ye forget the broth for the ould ladies?" Bridget's head, ducked inside the door, waited an answer.

"I have not forgotten it, but it is so stormy I dislike to go out this afternoon."

"Indade, thin, the poor ould craythurs musn't starve, and it's meself 'll go, ma'am, though I've not folded the clothes, nor—"

"Please put the broth into a tin pail, Bridget," I interrupted, thoroughly ashamed of myself, "and I will take it at once."

Fifteen minutes later I set forth, and soon found myself at Aunt Patty's door. The old lady sat crooning over her fire, with her knitting work in her hands. "Good afternoon, Aunt Patty. How are you feeling to-day?"

"Mis'rable, mis'rable, ma'am, thank you. Didn't sleep a wink last night; wind a-blowing and a-thrashing the blinds,—rain a-driving against the window close to the head of my bed, and such a pain right straight up and down the spine of my back! seemed as though I should give up."

"You look pretty well this afternoon; and how pleasant your room is! You get a great deal of sunlight here."

"Well, when the sun shines, I have it in the afternoon and part of the morning, but we don't seem to have any pleasant weather this winter. I never saw anything like it."

"We need the rain, I suppose, Aunt—"

"Of course we do; but it's drizzle, drizzle, drizzle, for the most part, and now it's a-snowing and wells 'll give out, I don't doubt, for the springs ain't a quarter full."

"I see you have had a present of a new shawl and cap. How pretty they are, Aunt Patty!"

"I'm glad you like 'em, but I didn't need a shawl. I've got two a-ready. I'd liked it if it had been a gown; and as for the cap, I wish it had had a muslin frill instead of lace, and black strings instead of purple. I never did favor purple. But there, beggars mustn't be choosers!"

"What a comfortable fire you have, Aunt Patty? Are you well provided with coal?"

"Well, I've got enough to last a couple of months unless we have a cold snap, and I expect we shall; but I don't know where the next is coming from, I'm sure."

"Take no thought for the morrow, Aunt Patty."

"That's very well for you to say, ma'am, when you have a full pocket-book right to your hand."

"I suppose the Master meant it for the comfort of those who have not a full pocket-book. I am sure he will provide for you, Aunt Patty."

"I hope he will, but I don't feel as sure as you seem to ma'am."

"I was glad to see you at church last Sunday. Mr. Smith was very kind to take you."

"It ain't very often he puts himself out. I don't suppose he'd have thought of calling for me, if he hadn't happened to be a-going right by the door. He couldn't very well help it."

"Didn't you like our new minister? What a good, practical sermon he gave us. It seemed as though every one must be benefitted by it."

"It was good enough I suppose, but it wasn't the kind that suits me. I want strong meat, and then, I don't like his ways at all. He ain't a bit like dear, old Father Senter! What a good old saint he was! But there, we don't have any such preaching nowadays as we used to have when I first made a profession. Times have changed for the worse, for the worse!"

"How many years is it, since you 'made a profession,' Aunt Patty?"

"Well, pretty nigh on to thirty-six years, I believe."

"How much you must have enjoyed, and what experiences of God's loving care you must have had! Don't you love to look back upon them?"

"Well, I don't know. To tell the truth, I haven't enjoyed much. Seems though I've had more'n my share of troubles.—Here I'm a poor, lone widow, living all by myself, with scarce enough to keep soul and body together. I expect I shall come to the poor-house before I die, and it don't seem just right."

"Have you ever wanted food and clothing, Aunt Patty?"

"As to that I've had enough as a general thing—such as it is, but folks like their pick once in awhile. There's them that ain't any better than I—no, nor so good either, that just roll in riches. I can't understand it, and I don't expect I ever shall."

"If you are really a child of God, Aunt Patty, you are sure of an inheritance in heaven, and of riches that shall endure for ever."

"Well—yes—y-e-s, the good Book says that, but it does seem kind of hard that a body has got to wait till they're dead, before they begin to enjoy themselves! Are you going so soon, ma'am? That's always the way. No one ever stays with me more'n ten minutes. If you see the minister you may tell him for me, that when he gets ready, I'd like to have him call; but it ain't likely he will. Poor, dear Father Senter always came once a fortnight, as regular as clock-work, but then it didn't make any difference to him whether a body was rich or poor."

"I will give Mr. Ritchie your message, Aunt Patty, and I think you may expect him to call soon."

"Oh, well, he won't. Nobody ever comes, and when they do, they don't stay. I'm much obliged to you for the broth, ma'am, I'm sure. Good-bye."

I hastened away from Aunt Patty's door, and crossing the street rapped at the one opposite.

"Come in, come in," cried a cheery voice. "Why, is it you, my dear, in such a storm as this! How good you are, and the old lady sat for me a chair, her face beaming with pleasure. I don't believe there's another woman in this town that has such friends as I have," she continued, taking the pail from my hand, and raising the cover. "How good this broth does smell! I knew the Lord would send me my supper, He always does!"

"Why, have you nothing besides in the house, Miss Anne?"

"Oh, my dear, what more do I need? This is just what will do me good, and I am so fond of it."

"But, Miss Anne, please tell me what you had for dinner?"

"I had crackers soaked in warm water, and a little salt sprinkled over. You don't know how I enjoyed them; the salt gave them such a relish!"

"And what will you have for your breakfast?"

"Why, bless you, my dear, I don't look ahead so far as that! I'm sure to have something. The Lord takes care of me, and He never lets me go a-hungry—never."

"How have you been since I saw you last, Miss Anne?"

"Oh, happy, happy, my dear. I've my aches and pains as usual, but only enough for my good."

"Is your room warm enough, Miss Anne? It is very cold weather, and with your dreadful rheumatism and cough, I should think you ought to have more fire."

"Well, my dear, I manage to keep comfortable; you see I have a warm rock to my feet, but I want to be a little careful of my fire, because the coal is about out, and my other hasn't come. I've got on nice thick flannels, that Mrs. Jewis was so kind as to send me, so I don't require quite so much heat in my room."

"Have you ordered more coal, Miss Anne? You said it had not come yet."

"I haven't exactly ordered it, my dear, but I've asked the Lord to send it, and he will—He never lets me get quite out."

"You won't be able to go to church much this winter, I suppose?"

"Well, no, unless some one takes me once in awhile. Mr. Smith has come on purpose for me twice already, the Lord will reward him for it. But then, when I can't go dear, I feel as though I had my church right here in this room. I have some precious times with my Bible and hymn book, and the Lord preaches to me."

"You have heard our new Minister? How did you like him?"

"Very much. He is just the kind of a preacher that we need, so plain and practical, and so earnest. We must pray hard for him, my dear."

"Has he called on you, Miss Anne?"

"Not yet. I haven't expected him, for he has such a large parish, and so much to do, but I shall be glad to see him when he can come."

"I will ask him to call if you wish?"

"No, indeed. I wouldn't have you, my dear. He will come all in good time, I know."

"Miss Anne, do you ever find anything to complain of?"

"Complain of! My dear, how could I, when my cup is running over with blessings? I do think I am one of the happiest women in this town! I believe I have been one of the Lord's children for thirty years, and He has kept me walking in green pastures, and beside the still waters, all the time."

"But you have had sickness and pain to bear, and you have lost dear friends—"

"Not lost," interrupted Miss Anne, with a tender smile. "I have good hope that every one of them is safe in heaven, and that I shall soon be with them. The sickness and the pain, don't hurt my soul; they only worry my poor body a little, but that is of no account, so long as I can hold fast to my Lord."

"But you are poor, Miss Anne!"

"Oh, no, no, my dear. I am rich! I have every thing I need."

"And you have no anxious doubts or fears?"

"Never. I cannot think that after bringing me all this way on my journey, the Lord will leave me to suffer for anything that is needful. He has promised to keep his children to the end, and my dear, He always keeps his word!"

And so I left her, with Heaven's peace shining on her face, and Heaven's peace in her soul
