WILD SCENES.

The Kentucky House Ousts Kaufman From His Seat.

The Senate Retaliates by Unseating Senators Walton and James.

The Doorway Blocked by Armed Men, Who Defy the Senators to Enter—Worthington by Force Takes the Gavel—Dunlap Refuses to Qualify.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 11.—The common belief here Wednesday was that the parting of the ways might be reached in the long senatorial deadlock, and politicians were prepared to receive any sort of development without surprise. The crowd which wanted admission to the house galleries was enormous, and showed plainly the great interest felt on the outside, but to prevent a disorderly scene, such as was precipitated Saturday, the speaker kept in force the rule to admit only ladies to the lobbies.

After disposing of some small matters, Mr. Howard, of Butler, got up on what he called a question of the highest privilege and indicated a special order, which was the Dunlap-Kaufman contested election case.

The democrats, led by Carroll and Bickham, claimed that Dunlap's letter of withdrawal, which was read, took the matter beyond the power of the house. Mr. Lyons, of Newport, contended that Dunlap had only asked leave to withdraw, and that it was in the power of the house to decide what disposition should be made of the request.

Speaker Stanford ruled that the contest case was still before the house and should be voted on, notwithstanding Dunlap's action.

The vote came first on the minority report, which proposes to seat Dunlap. The vote resulted in the adoption of the minority report and the unseating of Kaufman (dem.) by a vote of 48 to 46, the two populists voting with the democrats. The vote then came on the majority report, as amended by the minority report, and to prevent the carrying out of the unseating of Kaufman the democrats rushed from the hall in a body, leaving for the purpose of breaking a quorum. Populist Edrington went out with the democrats, but Poor remained in his seat. Kaufman was then unseated, there being 51 yeas, and Dunlap was declared seated.

Sensors Walton and James (rep.) were then unseated in the senate by the democrats in retaliation. A yell went up and a crowd formed at the door of the house to prevent the entrance of either Walton or James. Shouts of "Stand to them, boys!" and cries of "Crowd them over the banisters if they attempt to enter!" were heard.

It was now 11:45. In the mob were several men with their hands holding pistols in their pockets, standing at the door, daring the republicans to attempt to bring the two unseated senators through.

Senator Blackburn was in the crowd, counseling coolness. The crowd was mad when they learned that James had already slipped into the house and had done so while they were unseating him in the senate. The chief of police and many patrolmen were present. Men and women rushed from the building when the yells told that the unseating had been done. At 11:58 one man broke a chair and made a club.

At 12:05 Dunlap approached the door, but was waved back.

Speaker Blanford, of the house, refused to recognize the senate, hoping that Dunlap would come in, but at 12:11 Lieut. Gov. Worthington took the gavel from Blanford almost by force and called the joint session to order.

The republicans disputed the right of the senate clerk to call the roll. The chairman ruled that the democratic senate clerk should call the senate roll and the house clerk the house roll.

The senate clerk did not call the names of James and Walton. The house clerk did not call the name of Kaufman.

The vote stood: Blackburn, 54; Carlisle, 10; Buckner, 1. The chairman announced no quorum voting.

At 1:10 p. m. the session adjourned. The doors were thrown open and the members filed out among the mob, all seemingly in good humor. Not a republican voted.

The Bill Will Carry an Appropriation Outside of Any Authorized Increase in the Navy of About $38,500,000—Prizes for Excellency in Gunnery.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The house committee on naval affairs still has under consideration the naval appropriation bill. While the measure has not been completed, enough of its provisions are known to give an abstract of it approximating the shape in which it will be presented to the house. The important question of increasing the navy has not yet been agreed upon, but it is quite certain that a number of battleships and torpedo boats will be authorized. Members of the committee differ as to what this increase shall be. Some favor six battleships and fifteen torpedo boats, while others want four battleships and from twenty to thirty torpedo boats. The bill will carry an appropriation outside of any authorized increase in the navy of about $38,500,000. As the bill now stands, its principal provisions are as follows:

Her husband was boiling a preparation of oil to be used for vermin on his cattle. The oil caught fire and Huls, seizing the vessel containing it, started for the door. Mrs. Huls was standing in the doorway at the time, but her husband did not see her until it was too late.

He collided with her and the flaming oil was dashed over her clothing.

In her fright she threw her arms about her husband and it was with difficulty that he released himself and was able to assist in extinguishing Mrs. Huls' burning clothing. Huls and his wife's sister were also quite severely burned in putting out the flames.

The chief said that he was getting tired of the present state of affairs, and he will take this method of stopping it.

A ROYAL RECEPTION.

The Grandest Business Function of the Season!

Fair Women and Brave Men Thronged the Buckeye Store's Opening Yesterday.

We desire to take this way of thanking the many friends who honored us with their presence yesterday. It is possible that in the crush attendant on our opening that we may have failed to thank each one personally for his presence; if so, we trust you will now accept our kindest thanks and best wishes, for aiding us to make the event one long to be remembered by all. Our fondest hopes and anticipations were more than realized by the cordiality of the good people of Marietta and vicinity, displayed by their presence with us—we were strangers yesterday, but to-day we feel that we are friends.

Yesterday we sold nothing, but from this on our doors are open to the public as merchants, and we trust that our prices, qualities and goods will merit the approval and patronage of all. We solicit a share of your trade, but whether you desire to buy or not, remember that we shall always welcome you as visitors—as cordially as we did yesterday. It will be our aim to give the best quality possible at lowest reasonable prices; the most careful attention to every customer's wants, and the best satisfaction to every customer that we possibly can. These, it is true, are all "stock phrases," but for proof of our sincerity we ask for but one visit to our store. If we do not convince you that it is to your interest as well as to our own to buy from us, we will be the losers. We have come to stay. Marietta's interest from now on is our own, and we hope to assist as well as to be benefited by our location here.

Come in and see us, whether you ever expect to buy from us or not. We desire to make the acquaintance of everyone. Come in and ask questions. Come in and bother us, trouble us, worry us, annoy us—or at least try to do so, and if you succeed in troubling us more than we want to be troubled, we will confess that we are not good business people. By trouble we expect to prosper; by hard work we expect to succeed. We need your assistance to make work and trouble, so give us your full share, and we shall smile our full approval. No one can forget the place. Remember our Great State of Ohio,
