

IN THE PALACE.

Gen. Weyler Stirred Up Over a Dynamite Bomb Explosion.

The Noise Was Terrific, But Only One Person Was Injured.

Weyler Left the Room Greatly Excited—It is Believed to Have Been the Work of Laborers—Gen. Gomez Enters the Province of Matanzas.

HAVANA, May 1.—A dynamite bomb caused the explosion in the captain-general's palace Tuesday, and not a gas engine, as reported. The noise was tremendous and caused intense excitement in the palace and vicinity.

Gomez's advance is confirmed. It is now reported he has entered Matanzas province with a strong force of 10,000 or 12,000 men, five pieces of artillery and plenty of ammunition.

News of a bloody battle near Zanjo, province of Santiago de Cuba, has been received. Gen. Munoz tried to prevent Gen. Calixto Garcia from crossing the Canto river. Munoz organized a strong land column and organized gunboats to proceed up the river to co-operate, left Manzanillo to intercept Garcia.

But for the gunboats Munoz's column would have been destroyed. Munoz retreated to Manzanillo and Garcia is now operating without opposition.

WORKMAN KILLED. YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 1.—David Dagan was killed at midnight at the Ohio steel plant by a carload of billets falling on him.

SHAH OF PERSIA

Shot by an Assassin, Disguised as a Woman, While Going to His Devotions. WASHINGTON, May 1.—Secretary Olney at 3 p. m. Friday received the following cable message from United States minister Alex. McDonald, at Teheran.

TEHERAN, Persia, May 1. To Olney, Secretary of State, Washington.

SHAH OF PERSIA.

The Shah, while visiting a shrine near the city Friday for devotion, on entering the inner sanctuary, was shot by an assassin, disguised as a woman, the bullet entering the region of the heart. The shah expired in a few minutes. The regicide is a revolutionary fanatic. Great distress but the city quiet.

Nasr-ed-din, the late shah was born in 1837. He was the eldest son of Muhammed Shah and succeeded to the throne on the death of his father in 1848.

The form of government in Persia in its most important features is similar to that of Turkey. All the laws are based on the precepts of the Koran, and the power of the shah is absolute.

Teheran, the capital, has a population of 210,000.

The population of Persia is estimated at 9,000,000.

BISHOP WILLIAMS. DETROIT, Mich., May 1.—Rev. Gershom Mott Williams, D.D., was consecrated as the first bishop of the new diocese of Marquette, which comprises the upper peninsula of Michigan, at Grace Church here Friday.

SWISS EXHIBITION OPEN. GENEVA, May 1.—The Swiss National exhibition was formally opened here Friday by Dr. Adolph Deucher, vice-president of the Swiss Confederation.

Give Their Testimony in the Celebrated Jackson Trial.

Pearl Bryan Was Decapitated After Death They Claim.

Alleged Mark of a Hypodermic Needle on the Breast of the Dead Girl—A Farmer Testifies Against the Story of Coachman Geo. H. Jackson.

(Thursday's Testimony Continued.) Monday afternoon Jackson says he went to his room to rest and to see Walling; saw a package on his trunk, a woman's skirt, etc., and went to the river and threw them in.

Walling morning he overstepped himself; most of the day was spent with Miss Gans, and took her home to Cumminsville in the evening. In passing Lawrence's barber shop saw Walling. He came out. He asked: "What sort of fellow is this Wood, anyhow?"

Jackson then described his arrest: "I was taken to the police station, and into some room down there. A man whom I have since learned was Col. Deitch, followed us and Major Caldwell came out of another room.

Col. Nelson caused a surprise by refusing to cross-examine the witness. NEWPORT, Ky., May 1.—The defense in the Jackson case Friday began an attack on the expert testimony offered by the prosecution.

An attempt was also made to show that there was a scar on the dead girl's breast made by a hypodermic needle.

Dr. J. A. Clark called: He saw the headless body at White's undertaking establishment in Newport Saturday afternoon. He examined the body. The embalming was over when he got there.

Dr. J. A. Jeaneau, a practitioner for 42 years, next testified. Coagulation of the blood, the witness said, depends more on the nervous system and condition of the patient at the time of death than on anything else.

Under questioning by Judge Helm he said he had never made a hypodermic injection in morphia. He thought that the scar could have been made by an injection of ergotine.

death before the contractility of the muscles has ceased. To cut a head off cleanly, to do a nice job, would take at least ten minutes, said the witness.

The delay of rigor mortis, the witness said, has little to do with coagulation of blood. The condition of the nervous system largely controls this, the doctor repeated.

"Doctor," said Attorney Crawford, "if a person were decapitated and death by asphyxia to the head and trunk placed at an angle of 45 degrees, head downward, would the blood be drained out?"

"Certainly," answered the doctor. "Now, the Hebrews have a law about killing animals for food. They oblige the butcher to cut all the large veins of the neck. Then in order to make a complete depletion of the blood, the law provides that the animal shall be shaken after the voluntary blood flow is stopped.

Dr. J. A. Davis testified that the cuts on the hand of the headless body of Pearl Bryan seemed to be old ones. There was considerable retraction at the stump of the neck, the head being retracted from one-sixteenth to one-quarter of an inch.

There was a great deal of redness about the stump of the neck. It was much redder than the cuts on the hand. I thought the head had been very recently severed. I remarked that the head had been cut off by someone who knew something about surgery.

The deposition of Dr. Ashton B. Heyl, stationed at Ft. Thomas, followed Dr. Davis' testimony. The statement was made by Attorney Crawford, that Dr. Heyl is captain and assistant surgeon in the United States army. He is 31 years old. He graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1888.

He has been in the United States army since 1890. He visited Lock's farm at the scene of the finding of the headless body at about ten a. m. It was lying at an angle of about forty-five degrees. There were no evidences of a struggle.

He saw a small pool of blood, apparently caused from the cutting of the vessel. There was a lot of blood on the clothing. There was another spot said to be blood by some present. He did not recognize it as such.

He saw about a quart or a quart and one-half of blood at the neck. He was anxious to see how much blood was there. As the ground had been probed with a stick, one or two inches he reached the bottom point to which the blood had soaked.

He did not notice the cuts on the hand, there was no blood on the hands. He was not attentive to the palms.

Henry Motz, a young farmer living four miles from Newport on the Licking pike, took the stand.

"I remember," he said, "when Sheriff Plummer, Mc Reaver, some newspaper men and a colored man named Jackson went over the Three-mile road it was one o'clock Sunday morning when the party reached the Three-mile road.

Still, George Jackson insists that he started to drive Jackson and Walling over that way to Fort Saturday night at 1:15 p. m. It is also in evidence that Walling went to Helder's hotel at about 3 a. m. In other words, according to George Jackson's story, the rockaway made the round trip in less than three hours.

David Locke testified to the effect that there were footprints in the vicinity of where the body was found. There was only one kind—that of shoes having a broad toe.
