The Secret of McKinley's Strength.

In another column is printed a letter to the Philadelphia Press from its New York correspondent, in which "one of the ablest and most prominent railway managers of the United States" narrates the result of his observations in the course of a trip recently made through New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. If anybody wants to know the secret of the strength of Governor McKinley, we advise him to read that letter. "It is what McKinley represents" that makes McKinley strong—this is the substance of what he says.

We recall having said a year ago that we did not think it would be healthy for any one to stand in the way of the McKinley movement. Those that were opposed to him simply did not understand the extent, or measure the force, of the reaction against the Cleveland policy of free trade. We do not especially like the words, but if there ever was a case of the masses against the classes, this McKinley movement is one.

McKinley stands to the people for the prosperity which ruled in 1892, against the disaster and trouble which followed. As we have before shown, there was not a great change in the popular vote between 1888 and 1892. The election of Cleveland can be accounted for, and rightly accounted for, by the change of a comparatively few votes out of the millions which were cast. The masses on both sides stood true and faithful to their allegiance. The evil times which have followed were attributed, and justly, by those who changed, to the Democratic attack on the tariff. They have been waiting ever since to undo the mischief which they did.

But more than that. The contrast between the Republican and the Democratic Administration has been so strong that not only have Republicans been confirmed in the faith, but thousands of Democrats, all over the land, have been won over to the true doctrine. How else can the tremendous falling off in the Democratic vote be accounted for?

William McKinley stands as the representative of the great Nation. In him those that rebelled against prosperity see the man who will restore prosperity. The awful mistake which was made in the defeat of Harrison is to be rectified, and in Bill McKinley the principles of the McKinley Bill are to be vindicated, and that's what the people have made up their minds to.—[Com. Gaz.]

Populist Convention.

A mass meeting will be held at Waterford May 23d, 1896, at 1 o'clock p. m. to elect delegates to the district convention to be held at McConnellsville, May 30th., 1896.

E. B. VINCENT, Secretary.

Pertaining to Oil.

The oil producer has always had a way of his own of which the Pittsburgh Commercial comments. The Commercial, however, says nothing of the thousands of strings of tools the Standard Oil interests keep pounding away with in every field on earth. The Standard allows the festive wild-catter to locate the fluid and then itself hastens to unearth it. The Commercial says: "Whether or not Kanawha's fluid in the Gordon sand, down in Wetzel county, West Virginia, comes up to expectations, it will stimulate the quest there for the greasy fluid. Such finds always do. Wherever there is oil, actual or prospective, there also will be found the festive producer, likewise actual or prospective, doing his level best to exhaust the supply in the shortest possible space of time, and doing so regardless of any effect it may have on the developed production he already possesses.

The motto of a large number of American people, when the fire alarm denotes the location of a fire, is to get there or die. The motto of the oil producers is much the same when a prospective new field or pool is sighted. This of itself is not surprising. If there is any good territory to be had it is natural that they should desire a slice thereof if obtainable. But having obtained the aforesaid slices, it is surprising with what unanimity they proceed to draw all the oil from that portion of the earth with the greatest possible alacrity, at the same time wondering and often protesting, because the market does not hold up or advance in spite of the natural tendency of their own efforts to break it.

It never seems to occur to the most of them when they have territory secured that the earth will be as good a reservoir for its oil in the future as it has been in the past; that it may be drawn therefrom with profit as the markets warrant, and that 100 barrels of production at $1 a barrel is proportionally a better thing than 1,000 barrels of production at 10 cents a barrel. The idea of permitting any oil to remain temporarily in the ground appears so intolerable to him, and all his energies are bent toward getting it out at once, regardless of the direct cost and of the lessening in the value of his production. The most recent exhibition of this kind attended the Cecil pool developments, and history doubtless will continue to repeat itself as long as oil pools are found. It always has been the producer's way, and probably always will be, though he ought to know better.—Bradford Record.

H. B. Beymer has organized a company composed of A. W. Nicholson, John A. Bliss, J. E. McClelland, W. I. Cosgrave, John T. Nicholson, John C. Beckett and H. M. Beymer to drill for shallow oil in Meigs township, Muskingum county. Here is a strong company and if there is anything in the earth in that section it will be brought to light. Our people are fast getting the oil fever and we may expect that all territory that has any promise whatever will be developed. This is the territory, at shallow depth, that produced so much oil about 1861, and of an excellent quality, selling for $16 per barrel and now worth $10. At that time one well drilled in this territory produced 100 barrels.

A movement is now on foot in our bustling little city to organize a gigantic stock company with $1,000,000 capital for the purpose of developing oil territory. The company will have at its head the very best business men of this city and vicinity. The first territory that will be developed or at least is now the objective point, is the Cumberland field. This company will not be confined to that territory however, but at this time we are not at liberty to point out all the territory. It will be so arranged that any person can take shares of stock and the same to be non-assessable.—Cambridge Sun.

Hit By An Engine.

Sistersville, W. Va., May 3.—About 2:30 o'clock this morning a two girls, who reside on the boats just above town, were returning home they found the body of Thad Connolly lying on the lower side of the Ohio River track terribly bruised and insensible. They summoned help and carried him to one of the boats and immediately sent for medical assistance. The well known and popular doctors, R. A. Irwin and W. A. Kahle were soon at the boat and rendered all possible assistance. The right side of Connolly's head was found badly bruised and his ear and face terribly lacerated. His right arm was mashed to a pulp, making amputation necessary just below the elbow. The doctors also stitched up his scalp and sewed his ear on.

At the last account he was resting very easy, but his recovery is very doubtful. He is eighteen years of age and lives with his father, the ferryman, just above the place where the accident occurred. He was under the influence of strong drink and judging from appearances must have been sitting along side the track in a drunken sleep.

Extra engine No. 13, running light, is supposed to have been the train that hit him, but the trainmen say they know nothing of the accident.

Take Warning.

For some time past a few bicycle riders have so far forgotten the rights of other people as to endanger the lives and limbs of pedestrians and themselves by fast and wholly reckless riding. This is going to be stopped and that at once, as the following letter to and resolutions by the Lobdell Cycling Club will show:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
Marietta, O., May 4, 1896.

MR. R. W. RICHARDSON,
President Lobdell Cycling Club.
SIR—Through you I desire to call the attention of your club to the agreement entered into by your organization last fall. Complaints have been made to me that many cyclists, both members of your club and others who are not, have been violating the agreement and the ordinance of the city in reference to bicycle riding. Inasmuch as you agreed to do certain things and to do all you could to get the co-operation of other riders in the matter, I think it due you to give you timely notice that reckless riding must and shall cease—also "coasting," and request your help in enforcing the legal regulations.

Yours truly,
EDW. MEISENHOLDER,
Mayor.
The resolutions adopted by the Lobdell Club last evening are as follows:
Resolved, That we denounce, as a menace to the rights of wheelmen, the reckless riding and coasting practiced by some cyclists of the city.

Resolved, That we will hereafter use the roadway when they are in such condition that they can be used and will keep off the sidewalks as much as possible.

Resolved, That we will assist the Mayor and police forces in enforcing the legal regulations of bicycle riding.

A secret committee of five was appointed, the personnel of which will be known only to the President, whose duty will be to furnish evidence to the authorities of the violations of the city ordinance on bicycle riding. So "scochers," beware, you are treading on dangerous ground.

He Smashed Her Buggy.

About a year ago Miss Birdie L. Farrell, who lives near Williamstown, was driving to this city in a dog cart. Geo. L. Parker was driving along the road and she states, deliberately drove against and broke her vehicle. When she complained about it he threatened to do so again. Last Wednesday she started to come down to Parkersburg to see the show and she noticed Parker driving up behind her. She pulled her horse and buggy to the side of the road, giving him plenty of room to pass and stopped but he refused to pass.

He started again keeping close in the rear until they were several miles out of town when he again deliberately ran into her buggy and damaged it pretty badly. She appeared before Justice Beckwith and swore out a warrant for his arrest for violating the road law and also instituted suit for damages to her buggy.—Sentinel.

About Steam Boats. It might be interesting to the present generation to know the dimensions of the steamboat Mechanic, built at Marietta in 1824 or perhaps a little earlier. She was less than ninety feet in length and by the rule of making a ship five times as long as they were wide, she was probably a little over sixteen feet wide, with less tonnage than the ferryboat Pioneer City, possibly of 75 tons burthen. She was a little less than one-fourth as long as the steamer Eclipse, which was running before the war, forty years or more ago. She was 365 feet in length and would have carried a cargo that would have loaded the Mechanic fifteen times. While the Eclipse was as long a boat as they ever had on the western waters there were others of much more tonnage. But to return to the steamer Mechanic. She was a much traveled boat, having been from Pittsburg to St. Louis and Nashville, from where she started with Gen. Lafayette to take him to Pittsburg in 1825, but was snagged and sunk about 125 miles below Louisville. She was commanded by Willis Hall, father of our fellow townsman, T. F. Hall. The boat was afterwards raised by Major Benjamin Carlisle, who I think was a mill-right and built and owned the mill on Duck Creek known as Carlisle's Mill, near Whipple station. The story goes that Gen. Lafayette's watch was found when the boat was raised and on being wound up started off in good shape. While it was nice for Marietta to have the credit of building some of the first steamboats on the western waters, it was sad for the owners that they were not a financial success, as it broke several of them up.
