Visit the Storm-Stricken Districts in St. Louis.

Another Threatened Storm Gave the People a Terrible Fright.

It Passed Away, However, Without Damage—The Number of Missing People Increasing—Precautions Taken to Prevent Vandalism.

St. Louis, June 1.—Shortly before two o'clock Monday morning the two stricken cities, St. Louis and East St. Louis, received a thorough scare. A storm came up from the southwest, accompanied by low rumbling thunder and almost continuous flashes of lightning. Then a few minutes later big black clouds appeared on the northern horizon and rolled up until they covered the city. There was considerable wind, though nothing approaching a hurricane or tornado. The elemental disturbance lasted for nearly an hour and then became a slow, drizzling rain, which had increased to a downpour at ten o'clock Monday morning.

The work of clearing away the ruins is being carried on in a more systematic manner, but the rain makes the work all the more difficult.

Prof. Bauman, an expert insurance adjuster, of Chicago, is in the city and, after looking over the field, he said the total loss will foot up over $20,000,000. Prof. Bauman adjusted the losses caused by the Louisville tornado about five years ago.

A mass meeting of citizens has been called for Tuesday afternoon to consider the advisability of appealing for outside aid for the relief of the storm sufferers.

One of the peculiar features of the storm is the appalling list of missing persons reported to police headquarters. Up to Monday morning 124 persons are reported missing. The police are inclined to believe that many of these will be found with relatives in other portions of the city.

The situation in East St. Louis is one of gloom and misery. There is some fear of an epidemic of disease among the homeless near the river. Under the ruins is a vast quantity of decaying animal and vegetable matter which is sending pestilential clouds up through the debris. The sufferers are weak from exposure and exertion and are in no condition to fight the malaria that is breeding on the island. Another problem is the almost unanimous refusal of the sufferers to leave their belongings and occupy the military tents which have been pitched at Brighton. In spite of the presence of the militia they fear that their goods are not safe and refuse to leave unprotected all their earthly belongings.

Chief of Police Ganey has taken extreme precautions to prevent vandalism and early Monday morning 150 tramps were rounded up and driven out of town.

No additions are reported to the death list up to ten o'clock Monday morning.

At noon Monday the gang of work-house prisoners practically abandoned search for the dead in the city hospital ruins. Not a body was taken from the debris, and every part of the wrecked structure was thoroughly overhauled. The only missing patients from the city hospital unaccounted for are Wm. Bleicher, Patrick O'Connell and Arthur Stettermus. These may have escaped in safety and do not care to return.

Coroner Wait's office has held 110 inquests over victims of the tornado in St. Louis. In all instances the verdict was "death due to shock; accident." There were eight bodies in the morgue at noon Monday awaiting an inquest. The only two deaths from injuries since Sunday are those of Thos. O'Neill and Julius Lancy. Both are infants.

Much to the surprise of the police there has been less crime in St. Louis since the tornado than before, this being a fact notwithstanding that the city has been in darkness and that it was reported that hundreds of crooks from foreign cities had flocked to St. Louis. Chief of Detectives Desmond in an interview Monday said that during Sunday night there was not one report of a theft in the wrecked district.

The river captains and patrolmen along the levee say that a conservative estimate of the number of roustabouts, shanty dwellers and flatboat residents who lost their lives in the storm is less than twenty. The railroad yards on the east side of the river are being rapidly placed in good condition. On this side the damage to railroads was considerably less and the repairs are going on. Plans for reconstruction of round and freight houses that were blown down and crushed to pieces are being made.

Known dead in St. Louis, 196; unknown in St. Louis, 8; fatally injured in St. Louis, 18; missing in St. Louis, 117; known dead in East St. Louis, 145; unknown dead in East St. Louis, 3; fatally injured in East St. Louis, 2. Total fatality, 490.

The chairmen of the four relief districts established in the southern portion of St. Louis, each received $5,000 from headquarters Monday morning for immediate distribution. Such clothing and supplies as were at hand were divided among the wagons and sent to the district headquarters, there to be given out as called for.

What is needed most is shoes, bandage cloths, children's clothing and ladies' underwear. Necessary furniture and coats, together with dry bedding, are also much called for. The additional damage of continuous wet weather resulted in the issuing of another order prohibiting the operation of any electric lights in the district south of Elm and west of the levee.

The work of recovering bodies from the ruins is being pushed by the police. Every district captain has orders, where they have reason to believe bodies are buried, to employ men to prosecute the search and report results immediately to headquarters.

At several points in the ruined district the people of the neighborhood claim there are bodies under the debris, but no work is being done because the city authorities do not think the reports are well founded, and the owners of the property are slow in clearing up the ruins. The situation as to street car service is steadily improving. All lines are now running except Scullin's Cherokee, Tower Grove and California avenue branches of the Union Depot Railway Co. The convention auditorium has been repaired and was turned over to the business men's league Monday. No additional bodies have been recovered from the ruins up to one o'clock Monday afternoon either here or in East St. Louis. The death rate at the hospitals in both cities has not been increased since Saturday and the injured are reported doing as well as can be expected.

The funerals of 127 tornado victims in St. Louis have taken place so far, and it is estimated that at least twenty more were interred Monday afternoon. The 50,000 visitors who had viewed the ruins gathered at the station about eight o'clock. The Midway, the grand hall on the second floor, the waiting rooms and every passage way was packed with humanity. It was impossible to open the gates. Assistant Chief Kelley marshalled his men at the Twentieth street entrance and began forcing the crowd through the baggage tramway to the train sheds. It took half an hour to relieve the pressure. Women fainted, children screamed and men fought. Three women were injured and eight children were separated from their friends. There were probably a thousand strangers in the lower half of the city Sunday night wandering helpless in the dark ruins.

A CENTURY.

One Hundredth Anniversary of Tennessee's Admission into the Union.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 1.—The celebration in this city of the one hundredth anniversary of the approval by George Washington, June 1, 1796, of the act which made Tennessee the 16th state in the union, was marked in its opening spectacular features and parade by rain, which set in early in the morning with every indication of a purpose to continue all day. The city had "keyed" itself up for the occasion with elaborate decorations and it was intended to make a military and civic parade one of the chief features of the early proceedings. Cavalry and infantry and uniformed knights of pythias and numerous civic societies were to form in line, beginning to assemble as early as 8 a. m., the "Hermitage" cavalry escorting 16 young ladies representing the 16 states at the date of Tennessee's admission.

So far as these arrangements could be carried out the programme was fulfilled, but the inclemency of the weather sadly marred the effectiveness of the display.

The procession ended at the auditorium where George Washington's proclamation admitting Tennessee into the union, was read. The orator of the day was Hon. John M. Dickinson, assistant attorney general of the United States, who read a most elaborate historical address of 18,000 words.

At the close of Mr. Dickinson's address, a prize centennial ode by Mrs. Virginia Frazier Boyle of Memphis, was read.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

The One at St. Paul in September Promises to Be One of the Largest Ever Held by the Organization.

WATERBURY, Ct., June 1.—Oscar W. Cornish, of this city, commander of the Connecticut department, G. A. R., has received from Commander-in-Chief Walker, of Indianapolis, orders announcing that the preparations for the 30th annual encampment at St. Paul, September 1-5, are being pushed, with the prospect that the encampment will be one of the largest ever held by the organization. The commander-in-chief lays great stress upon the absolute necessity of keeping the Grand Army of the Republic free from all political action, and he is much grieved to hear that some department commanders and Grand Army posts, as such, have recommended persons for elective offices political in character.

WALLING TRIAL.

The Prisoner Will Take the Stand in His Own Behalf.

New Light May Be Thrown on the Terrible Pearl Bryan Murder.

Walling's Smile Does Not Desert Him—Scott Jackson Taken to the Covington Jail—He Strongly Resists But His Removal Was Thought Best.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 1.—The trial of Alonzo Walling for the murder of Pearl Bryan was resumed in the circuit court of Campbell county Monday morning.

Walling, smiling and cheerful, was brought to court by Jailer Bitzer and took his usual seat near his attorneys, Col. Washington and Mr. Shepherd. Court was called to order shortly after 9:40 o'clock.

It is about settled that Col. Washington will put Walling on the stand to testify in his own behalf, and it is thought the witness can throw much new light on the murder of poor Pearl Bryan.

Col. Washington closely cross-examined Coroner Tingley, who was recalled to the stand, about the blood, the heart's action, nerves and the like.

In several instances the coroner said he could not attempt to answer the questions exactly.

On direct examination the coroner said he found one point where a needle seemed to have punctured the skin, but on closer examination it was found that it was not a needle puncture.

Clotted blood can not flow from a dead body as a hemorrhage.

The state followed the same manner of calling witnesses as in the Jackson trial. Ben Weaver, a soldier at Ft. Thomas, followed the coroner. He told of his visit to the spot of the murder, and the finding of a hairpin and a fascinator nearby. Witness said there was about a pint and a half of blood in the larger clot. The pictures of the dead body taken by Photographer Carlo were handed to the jurors.

The defense had three photographs made of the fence and hillside along the Alexandria pike, between the point where Cochman Jackson says his passengers left the cab, and the point opposite where the body was found. The prosecution strenuously objected to the introduction of the pictures at this time, but the court ruled for the defense. An exception was reserved.

Dr. Carothers was the next witness examined.

Wherever he examined veins, said Dr. Carothers, he could not find blood. The only post-mortem stain to be found in the entire body was on the right side of the heart.

Judge Heim made an order for Scott Jackson's removal to the Covington jail. He said: "I am dissatisfied with the condition of the jail, and find that it is insecure. I therefore order that the defendant, Scott Jackson, shall be taken by the sheriff of this county to the jail in the city of Covington."

Jackson made strong objections to his removal, but to no avail, and at two o'clock the start from the jail to Covington was made in a surrey.

While there was no apparent danger in removing the prisoner, still the sheriff took no chances, and the trip was made as unostentatious as possible.

The national bank note circulation outstanding on June 1 was $225,200,343, an increase of $1,099,003 during May.

The increase of circulation during May based on bonds was $1,812,600.

Died at the Age of 105 Years.

BALTIMORE, June 1.—Wm. Taylor, 105 years and two months old, died Sunday at his home, 817 Stockholm street. He was born in Augusta county, Va. He was a house painter. Up to the time of his death he was active and could walk as erect and with as much ease apparently as any man. During the war of 1812 Mr. Taylor enlisted and served until its close. Fifty-four years ago he left Virginia and resided in Washington until several weeks ago. He enjoyed excellent health until Saturday, when he was stricken with apoplexy. His second wife and eight children survive him, as do 35 grandchildren.

"There is not the least foundation for the story; it is a fake, pure and simple."

James S. Clarkson Much Better.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The condition of James S. Clarkson, of Iowa, who for the past two weeks has been seriously ill in his apartments in the Fifth avenue hotel, was reported Monday to be greatly improved and no doubts of his complete recovery are now entertained.
