Nominate Thomas Watson, of Georgia, for Vice President.

They Reverse the Order by Nominating the Tail of the Ticket First.

William J. Bryan Declines the Nomination for President—Notwithstanding His Name Was Presented to the Convention—Norton (Ill.) Nominated.

(Friday evening's proceedings) At 6.35 the convention was called to order and nominating speeches for vice president began.

The voting for vice-president began at 12:05 a. m. The call of the roll was completed at 12:25.

Finally Texas changed 103 to Watson and settled it. A motion was made to suspend the rules and make Mr. Watson the unanimous choice of the convention.

Gen. Weaver again tried to get the convention to adjourn, but was cried-down.

The chairman announced that the next order of business was the selection of a national committee.

St. Louis, July 25.—As soon as the populist convention decided to nominate the vice-president first, Senator Jones wired Mr. Bryan at his home in Lincoln, Neb., as follows.

St. Louis, July 24.—The populists have decided to nominate the vice-president first. If it is not Sewall what shall we do? I favor your declaration in that event.

Senator Jones within sixteen minutes after he sent his message had the following reply handed to him in his room at the Platters' hotel:

LINCOLN, Neb., July 24.—I agree with you fully. If Sewall is not nominated have my name withdrawn.

Senator Jones made no secret of the receipt of this telegram and it was shown to a number of the senator's personal friends and then sent to the convention hall to be read at the right time.

To a reporter of the United Press Senator Jones said it was manifestly impossible for Mr. Bryan to accept a nomination from the populists upon a ticket which repudiated his associate.

St. Louis, July 25.—The convention was called to order by the permanent chairman, Senator Allen, at 9:40 Saturday, and Rev. Mr. Kent, of Washington, was introduced to say prayer.

The chairman repeated his ruling of Friday night that the amendment adopted by the convention giving the nomination of a vice-president the preference over the nomination of president made the results of national committees the next order of business.

order of business Mr. J. K. Burnett, of California, protested that this was not so, and contended that the convention simply transposed the nomination of vice-president and president.

The sergeant-at-arms announced that their contract with the Business Men's association (which included the supply of music) had run out so that there would be no band Saturday.

When Alabama was called Mr. George Gaither, of that state, addressing his brother and sisters of the convention, yielded to James B. Weaver, who, he said, would name the man who would be the running mate of Tom Watson and run the goldbugs out of existence.

Mr. Bryan's name was received with applause, the whole convention standing on chairs and waving hats.

The chairman put the question and two-thirds of the delegates rose with vociferous shouts of "aye, aye." This cry, however, was accompanied by the counter cry of "no, no."

Several of the most excited opponents got on the platform and angrily prevented the chairman from declaring the result of the vote.

Mr. S. F. Norton, of Chicago, was placed in nomination for president.

The Texas delegation held a conference and decided to support Norton, of Illinois, a "middle of the road" man, until "the last ditch" is reached.

Missouri being called the chairman of the delegation, Mr. Livingston, nominated Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota.

At 7 p. m. a greenish-colored cloud was noticed hanging above Mt. Look-out. Inside of ten minutes the worst storm which has ever happened in this section began.

No trains will be able to get up the canyon for some days. This will cut off the towns of Central city, Georgetown, Idaho Springs and other mining camps from communication with the outside world.

The water came down in a perfect wall, sweeping everything before it. It is reported that there were several people on the Ford-street bridge at the time it was torn from its piling and swept down the stream.

Golden lies at the end of a canyon, where it debouches into the plains. The water caught by a half dozen mountains came into the streets and coursed through them, taking everything of a movable character with it.

Reports are out that the whole country east of here was flooded and the crops cut to pieces by hail which fell during the storm.
