

Consistency's A JEWEL.

But Persistency as applied to advertising is a Whole Diadem. That applies to us; in that we advertise day after day, and week after week the great and good bargains we have, and all for good benefit and profit. Some bright thrifty people come and get them and save money; others who would if they knew how much they could save and how good quality of goods we sell would come, and still others who do not know a bargain when they see it would come if they knew, and so it gives thousands of dollars wasted every month in this community for the above reasons. Are you one of the class that needs to save your money and make every cent go as far as possible? See to it then that you investigate our offerings every week. That bogie of poor goods and low prices does not scare people who patronize our store, they see through it. Self interest of those who cry it. See the money savers for this week.

LAST RITES.

Victims of Railway Collision Laid to Rest.

Twenty-Eight of the Dead Belong to Bridgeton.

Day of Mourning and Sorrow in Bridgeton—Hearses Did Treble Duty and Carriages Carried as Many as Four Separate Groups of Mourners.

BRIDGETON, N. J., Aug. 3.—The bodies of 11 victims of the railroad collision at Atlantic City were buried from this city Sunday. One was buried Saturday; Monday there will be four more burials and Tuesday nine. Thus, if no more succumb to their injuries, there will have been 28 deaths from among this city's population.

Those buried Sunday were H. Frazier Bell and his wife, Charles Sooy, sr., and son, Charles; Joshua Ernst, deputy county clerk, Richard W. Trenchard and his wife; Joseph Peters and his son, Morris, and James Hateman and his wife.

There were so many funerals that the facilities for burial were overtaxed. Hearses did treble duty and carriage drivers carried as many as four separate groups of mourners to the cemeteries. Great crowds, largely made up of tearful women, gathered in the streets outside the funeral houses and flocked in groups about the old stone church, Broad street and Overbrook cemeteries, where the interments took place.

There expressions of sorrow for the dead, words of sympathy for the suffering, and ready offers of succor to the bereaved. Fortunately, though, there are very few, if any, cases of real need, so far as known. The victims of the hapless disaster were in almost all cases so situated as to leave no destitution behind, although there may be one or two cases calling for assistance.

In the churches the deepest sorrow, for in almost every case the dead was a member of some one of the churches of the city. The preachers, with choked voices, drew lessons from the fearful wreck, but while one looked upon it as a visitation of Providence, called forth by the wickedness of thousands who were drifting rapidly to perdition, another said nothing more or less than a calamity due to gross carelessness on somebody's part. Another took the middle ground and spoke of the crash as an appalling disaster which carries its own lessons of fortitude and Christian forbearance, and developed the love and sympathy for this community from the wide world.

One of the saddest cases was that of Sooy. The mangled body of the father was left in the hearse, while that of the son was carried into the house while the services were being held. Within the dwelling there were moans and laments from the stricken widow and mother, and deep wailings from her seven fatherless children. People wept for sympathy for this sorely afflicted woman, whose deep distress carried sorrow to every heart. Amid it all there arose the soft cooing of an infant, a three-weeks' old child, the youngest of the father's flock. As the white casket containing her boy's remains was carried out to the second hearse, the poor woman, leaning on an elder son, moaned: "Oh, why should it have happened! Oh, can I give them up?"

A WONDERFUL SEAWEED.

Has a Stem Sometimes Three Hundred Feet Long.

One of the most extraordinary seaweeds among the Laminariaceae is the Nereocystis, the stem of which occasionally attains a length of 300 feet, though extremely slender, even at the top, where it is surmounted by a huge floating bladder six feet or seven feet in length, that affords a favorite resting place to the sea otter. This plant is found on the northeast coast of America and the opposite shores of Asia. The filiform stem, which is about as thick as pack-thread, suddenly swells above, when two feet or three feet long, into a globe bladder, from the top of which springs a tuft of geminate leaves mostly rising on five petioles. As the plant grows older the stem increases enormously in length, but only slightly in thickness. The globe bladder swells into a turnip-shaped or retort-like cylinder, six feet long and four feet six inches or more in diameter in the widest part, the lower extremity gradually passing into the stem. The leaves, which at first were marked with a few faint nerves, split in the direction of the latter, cover a wide space by their entangled mass, and attain a length of 30 feet or more. When the plant grows in any quantity, it forms large floating islands, and the surface of the sea becomes impassable to boats. The stem, when dry, is employed by the Aleutians for fishing lines, some of which have a length of 40 or more fathoms. The large bladders are used by the same people as syphons for pumping water out of their boats.—Fishing Gazette.
