

Hutchison's Bargain Store.

Effect Follows Cause Just as Sure as Night Follows Day.

A warm October has caused many a merchandise maker to lay awake nights wondering how he would be able to unload his products.

There's only one solution for the problem—he's got to tempt the ready-money merchant by offering his wares at a fraction of early season's prices. We've been tempted and here's the effect. It means beneficial buying for you—that's what pleases us most.

COLORED DRESS STUFFS.—If you've got Dress Goods to buy it would seem almost imperative that you should take advantage of these offerings. Couldn't touch them a month ago at anything like these prices. There'll be busy buying and you should be among the buyers.

64 inch all wool Cloth Novelties at 25c a yard, should be 37½c.
43 inch Novelties at 25c, should be 35c.
40 inch Irresistible and Figured Mohairs at 35c, regular price 55c.
Fine Fancy Novelties at 50, 75, 87½ and 98c a yard.

Special in Silks.—Black Brocade Silks at 50 and 65c are a great bargain; regular price $1.00.

We are sole agents for the Flexibone Moulded Corsets. Said to be the best and finest shaped corsets on the market. We know of other corsets costing more money that will not compare with the Flexibone. Expert fitters at your service. Introductory prices $1.50, 2.00, 2.50 and 2.75.

INFANTS' and CHILDREN'S HOODS in Silk, Wool and Fur. Newest styles for this Fall and Winter wear at 25, 35, 48c to $1.75; very pretty and cheap. Infants' and Children's Short Robes at a Bargain.

Fascinators, Hoods and Shawls in find wool and zephyrs at 25, 35, 50c to $1.25.

All wool pattern skirts, extra long 40 inches and full breadth and of the finest makes. This week only at 65c and 75c, a pattern worth 95c.

November Cloak Selling.

We planned early for the biggest garment business in our history, and were getting in shape now for a few days phenomenal selling. Makers are cleaning up their season's product. Little assorted lots, and many of them at two-thirds of October prices. To hesitate is to lose the best cloak chance of the season. Lots of Jackets, Capes and Coats, running from 50c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $3.50 and $10.

BLANKETS and COMFORTS at closing out prices to make room for Holiday goods.

SEWING MACHINES at the lowest prices made anywhere.

CARPETS and OIL CLOTHS at cut prices this week. We must have room and some goods will be cut to get them out.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS of all kinds at Lower Prices than any competition.

10 CENT COUNTER of novelties third floor (take elevator).

Thanksgiving Coming

Next week and we are prepared to assist in the general rejoicing by supplying the good things to eat at prices that the slimmest purse can supply. Citron at 15c lb., Raisins 6½ and 9c lb., fine prunes 8 and 10c lb. All kinds of Cakes and Crackers at old prices this week. Oyster and Butter crackers 6 lbs for 25c. Sardines 3 boxes for 10c. Canned Soups, Vegetables and Fruits, Maple Syrup 5c a can, a fine fruit can in. Sweeter cheese 12½c lb. Fine Mixed Table Nuts 10c lb. Candy 5, 6, 8 and 10c lb. Oranges, Bananas and Figs at 10c lb. Cocoanuts 4, 5 and 6c each. An elegant assortment of dishes and glassware to decorate the table.

CLOTHING

Overcoats at away down prices. Men's, Youth's, Boy's and Children's Suits.

We just mention this department to let those of our friends know who do not patronize us in clothing that we can and do save our patrons money here as well as in any other department. Call and see and we will convince the most skeptical of our ability to do all we claim.

Underwear, Hosiery, Gloves and Mittens at lowest prices.

A special offering of Toilet Waters, Soaps and perfumes. Want you to know more about this end of our business. No better way of introducing it than have you call and see what we can sell you of reliable goods at less than you've been paying for them.

Call and see the busiest and cheapest store in the city.

THE FINEST DONKEYS.

And Every Donkey-Boy Is a Young Aladda.

Experiences on Donkey-Back—How It Feels When Your Asskins Charge Brays—How Clever Arab Boys Learn English.

(Copyright, 1896.)

Cairo, Egypt.—I believe that there is no place on earth more strange and fascinating than Egypt. And this is the season to visit it, for the Nile has now retired from its excursions over the face of the landscape and is quietly ebbing between its banks; later the river will be full of sandbars and shoals. The climate, too, is perfect now; it is like brilliant fall weather in the United States, with an occasional hot day; yet even out on the desert it is rarely oppressive. But it is not of Egypt, but of Egyptian donkeys and donkey-boys that I wish to write.

There are no other donkeys in all the world like those of Cairo—delightful little animals, gentle, yet as spirited as colts; most of them are kept carefully clipped and groomed, and are furnished with bright red saddles and gaudy trappings. You can't imagine what fun it is to pick one out from the multitude that are thrust upon you the moment you are seen walking, to climb upon his back—assuming a lordly air as you say to the swarthy little donkey-boy: "Imisk er rikab" (hold the stirrup)—and then to ride at will through these wonderful oriental streets and alleys, threading your way amid turbaned heads and sullen, overloaded camels, under overhanging lattices, along avenues of quaint bazars and queer little workshops where they haven't changed their way of doing things since Joseph, poor little wanderer, stared in rustic amazement at the same sights in the days of Pharaoh. It is like actually living out the adventures of a fairy tale.

And the jolly little Arab who runs at your side, or chases behind, always urging your donkey to the top of his speed if you will let him—he is neither more nor less than a charming young Aladdin right out of the middle of the Arabian Nights. I am simply in love with them two plasters (ten cents) back-sheesh, and he is perfectly happy—though, of course, he instantly asks for more. But the men, like the camels, are apt to be morose and surly. The avarece of the boys is amusing; the rapacity of the men is often exasperating. They will brow-beat you if you show the least susceptibility—they frequently intimidate women—but before a firm front they quail instantly. They are little to blame; they have been slaves for ages.

The boys are doubtless wantonly cruel at times—what can you expect from neglected little barbarians?—but in some cases their affection for the beasts they drive is fairly pathetic. I employed one who ran for hours under the hot sun with a sheaf of green clover (kloofar, he called it) under his arm, and the moment I dismounted he made the donkey lie down, caressed him, and fed him the clover by handfuls. That boy got a double back-sheesh when he returned. He almost wept for joy; then followed me to the hotel steps and stood clamoring for more!

To my surprise, I find that many of these young Arabs are able to read and write in their own language, and some of them are very eager to extend their knowledge of English. The other day Achmed, my favorite, began to question me about a friend whom he had seen with me—for he is a most inquisitive youngster. I told him that the man was a physician. That bothered him; he didn't quite understand; so I explained. He listened attentively, and made a memorandum on a scrap of paper. Then he asked me to pronounce the word again. I complied, and he repeated it after me—pheseeshshun—and noted it down phonetically in Arabic characters. Then he prodded up the donkey and raced on close at my stirrup. Achmed had captured a new word, and he acted as exultant as if I had given him an extra piaster.

Such is the Cairo donkey-boy—and a more delightful urchin you will not easily discover. The pity of it is that he can't be a boy always; growing up spoils him. To-day he is full of eagerness and hope; but alas! there is no future for him. He is foredoomed to a life of abject poverty, degradation, and disappointment. What wonder that the both donkeys and donkey-boys. It sounds absurd, doesn't it? But you would talk it in exactly the same way if you were here.

These donkeys will walk, trot, pace, or gallop, and in general are eager to keep at the head of the procession. Of course, they don't understand English, and you must address them through the medium of the boy, who ordinarily does his utterance curiously slow and guttural; it suggests the idea of a big frog trying to talk. If you happen to get separated from the boy, steering the donkey becomes an embarrassing business. The gay little beast soon gets restive, and inclined to bolt into parts unknown; and if he should rush off with you into the tortuous and dusky lanes of the malodorous native quarter, your nights will be lost in the Cretan labyrinth without a clue. Especially difficult is it to get him to turn a corner in the right direction; he is sure to want to go down some other street, and is as mullah as a donkey. If you commit the error of pulling on the rein as you would do to turn a horse, he gets wholly unmanageable; he is both puzzled and offended at such treatment. It was some time before I "enlightened" to the fact that the proper way to guide a Cairo donkey is to press gently on his neck in the direction in which you wish him to go.

Another rather exciting incident is when your donkey happens to stop to bray. If he makes up his mind to this you may just as well keep quiet; no efforts of yours can prevent it. It is a startling experience for a novice to feel the creature stretch himself out beneath you, and with right tail and extended neck emit a rolling canonade of reverberating noises—it sounds as if a big brass band were charging upon a frightened messenger.

Another lively occurrence is when you chance to take a header at full gallop. With all his fine points, the Egyptian donkey will occasionally stumble; and I can sadly testify that Egyptian mud (baked dry as the desert sand) is several degrees harder than American granite blocks. In consequence of this danger from stumbling, most of the natives refuse to entangle their feet in any way, and ride with swinging stirrups and waving legs.

In selecting your donkey-boy, be sure you choose a real boy, not a man. The Arab boys are bright, winsome fellows, brown as a nut and as handsome as fine bronze castings, and they fairly bubble over with good humor. Give one of sunny cheerfulness gradually fades from his face, and the lively, merry boy becomes a sour and stolid man.

THE BULLET FOUND ON THE FLOOR.
WEST UNION, O., Nov. 30.—Doctors could not find the bullet in the shoulder of L. P. Brookover, who was shot by his son. A search of the room disclosed the bullet on the floor. Then investigation showed that the silk lining of the overcoat Brookover wore had not been pierced, although the coat and shirt beneath had been punctured. The silk had been driven into the flesh by the bullet. When the coat was removed the bullet came, too.

Lincoln's Friend Dead.
CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Henry Asbury, an intimate, personal and political friend of Abraham Lincoln and the man who framed for him the four questions propounded to Stephen A. Douglas, at Freeport, in the famous debates of 1858, is dead at the age of 89 years.
