NEW CUBAN STAMPS.

Series of Four Issued by the Insurgent Government.

We hear and read a great deal about the Cuban revolution, but, owing to conflicting reports, it is difficult to determine the true state of affairs on the island.

But when we hear from good authority that the insurgent government is endeavoring to form a government as nearly patterned after our own as possible...

These revolutionary stamps are not yet recognized by the postal authorities of the world. The series consists of four types: one for two centavos, brown in color; another blue, and valued at five centavos; a third red, worth ten centavos; and the fourth green, which is reckoned at twenty-five centavos.

They are the size of ordinary stamps, but crudely printed. At the top of the stamp is the word "correo," which simply means "postage;" at the bottom is the value, marked in centavos.

The center of the stamp bears the inscription, "Rep. de Cuba." There are other devices on the margin, surrounding the center inscription, a palm tree, the national flower, to the left, diagonal alternating lines of dark and light, and finally a sun rising out of the ocean.

SETTLED OUT OF COURT.

It Was Much Better Because "Nobody Got Mad."

Here is a story of a railroad claim agent—a gentleman who goes about the country settling with farmers who have had horses and cows killed by the cars...

"Now, you old fool, will you take $22.50 for your claim?" "I guess so," doggedly replied the farmer, after considerable squirming and hesitation.

OBSERVING THE PROPRIETIES.

A Long But Successful Search for a Suitable Name.

The colored man had tied his mule to a telegraph pole while he went into the feed store. When he came out he found the animal industriously gnawing a hole in the wood, according to the Washington Star.

"Why don't you feed your mule?" a bystander inquired.

"Feed 'um! Mistub, I gibs dat mule five meals er day, an' dat's three mor'n whut I gits. He's wuss'n'er goat. Serap iron don't stop 'im no mo'n ez it 'twus short'nin' bread."

"He must have a remarkable digestion." "De only ting dat makes dat anamile er mule is an accident of birth. Ef he'd happened ter hab two lings 'stid o' four 'ed of been er ostrich."

While the hitching strap was being untied the mule became restless and his owner cried:

"When, dar, Sulphuric Acid!"

"What's that you eat him?"

"Sulphuric Acid. His name useter be Julius Caesar."

"How did you happen to change it?"

"Wal, suk, I didn't name 'im Julius Caesar in de fust place, an' I nebber did 'tink dat wif er lop-eared, no-count mule dat name made sense. So I kep' me ears open fer sumpin' mo' 'prop'riate. I was wulkin' foh er drug stoh man, an' one day when I done broke er big dem'john I hyund 'im say dat sulphuric acid am de best'n'ost ting dat is. I didn't look no fuder, but I went home an' 'bel' er christen'n' den an' dar."

HAS CANCER ITS MICROBE?

An Interesting Discovery Which May Mean Much.

A highly-interesting discovery, which will, perhaps, afford a clue to the cause of cancer, has been made in Prof. von Leyden's university hospital here, says a Berlin letter to the London Standard. A young woman of 22 and a man of 63, both suffering from dropsy and cancer of the stomach, were brought to the hospital last spring. In order to remove the accumulated fluid tapping was resorted to in both cases. The fluid was examined under the microscope and hitherto unknown living organisms, belonging probably to the protozoa, were discovered.

Prof. Waldeyer, to whom the preparations were submitted, advised that they should be sent to Dr. Schaudinn, assistant at the Zoological Institute of the Berlin university, who has been investigating the protozoa for years past. He began his examination on July 19 and ascertained that in both cases the fluid contained a rhizopod, which he named Leydenia gemmipara schaudinni. He inferred that it is a pathogenic organism, but both he and Prof. von Leyden still abstain from deciding as to the connection between it and cancer, though they admit the possibility of such a connection. They have made a preliminary communication on the subject to the Berlin Academy of Sciences.

Sat on Eggs.

Offenders of high rank at the Russian court were punished in a singular way by Peter the Great. It was the duty of everybody else at court to consider and treat the delinquent as a fool. When Anne, the daughter of Peter's elder brother, Ivan, came to the throne she originated an even queerer form of punishment. She decreed that a certain prince should become a hen, and for this purpose she had made a large basket, stuffed with straw, and hollowed into a nest, with a quantity of eggs in it. This was placed in a conspicuous place in the queen's palace, and there, under pain of death, the unfortunate prince was obliged to set day after day, imitating the cackling of the fowl he was supposed to represent.

Microbes Devour Sewage.

A novel disposition of sewage is made at Exeter, England. The method consists of four tanks, a fourth of the sewage passing into each. Light and air are excluded from the tanks; putrefaction and decomposition are rapidly set up; the microbes multiply and the solid portions of the sewage are consumed, and the outflow from the tanks is nothing but slightly colored water, which, after passing through filters, loses all color and taste. No chemical is used and no attention to the tanks of any sort is needed. Each filter bed automatically cleanses itself by being out of use for a short time.

The Dyke No. 4, owned by Kilduff & Co., is doing 50 barrels a day, but will probably require a double packer to bring it to its full capacity.

The Henderson Oil Co. drilled in a beauty on the Carver farm at Long Run Monday. The well makes a splendid showing for a 75-barrel producer.

The Clark Oil Company's Carroll No. 5 at Cairo is completed and reported a duster.

The continued slump in the price of oil has greatly discouraged operators, and if it continues there will be a curtailment of work all around. The effects of the fall in prices are distinctly observable in some fields but it has not yet reached the new fields being opened up in this county. There is an increasing demand for supplies and material in the Hendershot field and the tappers are kept going at a lively rate. If the cold weather continues and the ground gets dried out and frozen the roads will be all right. The wells which came in out there last week indicate that there is plenty of undeveloped territory that is considered gilt-edged. There is a great deal of work under way which will be heard from in a few days, while there have been a number of locations made for new wells.—Sentinel.

NEW YORK, November 29.—It may surprise many friends in Cincinnati and throughout the West to learn that Mr. James McDonald has proved one of the most successful financial agents that ever set his foot down upon English soil from a foreign clime. Such, however, is the case. Not long after his marriage, a few years ago, McDonald gave up his beautiful home and went to London as the foreign agent of the Standard Oil Company, with the fortunes of which great corporation the McDonald name has always been closely identified. He set up a big establishment in London, and in time was living at a rate approximating $50,000 a year. Men who shape the destinies of countries across the ocean were those most found enjoying his hospitality. At times it came a little high for the Standard Oil Company managers, it is said, even though they are used to handing out thousands of dollars to accomplish a purpose. But it wasn't long before their London agent was heard from.

Little by little the Standard was getting a firm foothold in Europe. Tally upon tally was marked up for the Cincinnati. Then he made a few bigger plays for his company and won out easily. He astonished all who knew what was transpiring, some of them themselves as against long odds. But theirs was as child's play to what the new master was bringing about. At last came Mr. McDonald's great stroke. This was the driving out of Russia and its territories and those of several surrounding nations all oils that compete in any way with those of the Standard. By legal and by commercial enactment the Standard Oil Company was given those countries, and a richer prize was never awarded. When the news was first flashed over the cables a few weeks ago there was no one who deals in matters of the gigantic corporation or financial kind to believe it. It was pronounced impossible of accomplishment. Now it is known to be true. And "Jim" McDonald was the man who brought down this prize pium.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Callonette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at W. H. Styer's Drug Store.

IN LONDON BARBER SHOPS.

Shaving Mugs Adorned with Emblems of the Owner's Business.

An interesting feature of the east end barber shops is the rack of pigeonholes filled with shaving mugs, each bearing, usually in German text, the name of the owner, says Pearson's Weekly. The shaving mug is evidently esteemed a valuable advertising medium, for many a mug bears, in addition to the owner's name, some emblem of his business. The undertaker puts on his mug the picture of a richly-appointed hearse, with all the proper trappings of woe. The butcher decorates his mug with shoulders of mutton, pigs' heads and linked sausages. The dentist displays the traditional double row of annoyingly perfect teeth. The fireman's mug bears the illuminated picture of a fire engine.

Vain and handsome men adorn their cups with photographs of themselves. Others place beneath their names some inscription—a sentiment from the poets or an old German rhyme of good cheer. A child's photograph occasionally appears on a shaving mug and now and then a coat of arms is emblazoned above the owner's name, for coats of arms are as abundant in the east end as elsewhere in the town. Sometimes it is a national coat of arms, German, Austrian, Swiss or Italian, displayed in honor of the deserted fatherland.

The Prevention of Consumption.

Dr. R. W. Richardson, in "Asclepiad," makes some suggestions which will prove beneficial to those having a tendency toward pulmonary tuberculosis. Dr. Richardson says that pure air for breathing is the first requisite for the prevention of consumption, and that a uniform climate and as much active out-door exercise as possible are essential. Out-door occupation is preventive. Amusements should favor muscular development and sustain healthy respiration. The dress of the consumptive should secure uniform warmth, and the hours of rest should be carefully regulated by the sunlight. Cleanliness, in the broadest sense of the word, is of special moment. The diet of consumptives should be ample, and every precaution should be taken to prevent colds.

Grand Scenic Productions.

On Thursday night the Holmes and Wolford Company come to the Auditorium for a three nights engagement and a matinee Saturday, and will present four stupendous scenic plays, opening their engagement with the sensational melodrama "The Smugglers"; on Friday night will be presented the new romantic drama "The Brand of Cain"; on Saturday night Frank Mayo's greatest success "The Streets of New York," and Saturday matinee the beautiful southern romance "Mystic Mountain." The company carry their own car of elaborate special scenery for the proper production of all the above pieces, using no house scenery for any of their productions, and aside from the clever performances given will be Edison's Vitasecopic, the greatest invention of the nineteenth century which will be used between each act and in itself is well worth the price of admission. This is the only popular priced company on the road using the Vitasecopic in connection with their plays. As this is the first appearance of this company in Marietta, ladies will be admitted to the best reserved seats if accompanied by any person holding a paid 30-cent ticket on the opening night. Prices will be 10, 20 and 30 cents. Seats will be on sale Wednesday morning.
