The Topics of Gotham

Water for Father Knickerbocker.

Eternal vigilance is the price of living in New York. If the watcher of the lawmakers dozes, when the sleeper wakes he finds that the city has been robbed. Everybody knows by this time of the great $200,000,000 Ranapo water grab, which would have been put through at a still-hunt meeting of the board of public improvements had not Comptroller Color by accident heard of it only the night before. As it was, the scheme was defeated by a tie vote. But everybody does not know that this precious plan is not a new one. The water schemers have been watching for 15 years to get this deal consummated. It is known who they are—back politicians, every man jack of them. They do not own the Ranapo valley, which they so confidently offer. To show the character of their holdings, it is only necessary to say that the famous Tuxedo park lies within the valley whose waters they wish to sell, and that the park has been entirely laid out since the alleged company was formed.

In the briefest terms, this is what is proposed—to bind New York to pay for 40 years the sum of $5,000,000 a year for a quantity of water that, by the figures of the very commissioner who favored the deal, would supply the needed increase of but four years. Of course the price never killed. It wouldn't be safe to bet that it will not some time get through. It gives one an uncanny feeling to think of the schemes lying in wait for year after year, waiting for the chance to get in their hooks.

Whatever may be said against Richard Croker, he knows as well as any man in New York the necessity of ceaseless vigilance. It was he who named Mr. Coler, a banker and a man of large wealth, to act as the watchdog of the biggest treasury of any city in the world—for London doesn't spend nearly so much public money as New York.

There is no doubt that more water is needed. Some day the cities of the Hudson valley will be compelled to unite and bring a great water main from Lake George or the Adirondacks—but it will be a public work. The present supply is bad, not big enough and cannot be much increased without going further afield.

Our British cousins hold up their hands with horror when they hear of parlors, kitchens, bedrooms and the like in our church buildings, beneath consecrated roofs. They will have to brace themselves for another shock.

The Hanson Place Baptist church, in that Brooklyn which used to be called a city of churches, but is so called no longer, is a lively organization, with a live pastor, Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon. The trustees are planning a new church to cost $200,000. It will have many go-ahead features; the oddest is a roof garden.

Upon the flat top of the big building, reached by swift elevators, is to be erected a double awning. Here in hot weather cool shade is to be furnished, and the breeze that flows in from the Gowanus canal is to be tempered by the breath of potted flowers all about the sides. Here the summer services will be held; and, when you think of it, why not? Paraphrasing Martin Luther's saying about church music, Dr. Dixon doesn't mean to let the devil have all the good cool roof gardens. Perhaps he has solved the problem of summer church attendance.

And Now—The Grants. Until the 25th day of September, the name of Julia Dent Grant will be much in the papers; after that, not at all. She will become on that day Princess Cantacuzene, sharer of a title that sounds a bit in American ears, but in Europe, where princesses are plentiful, it is but little regarded. Indeed, it is whispered that the prince is almost without honor in his own country. He has no personal charm, being an unimposing, black appearing, ugly fellow enough. Russians are usually fine, big, fair men, especially Russians of good family. The apparent exception in the case of this prince is explained by the fact that he is of southern birth, a Roumanian on the father's side, while his mother was an Odessa woman of low family. He is not a member of the more famous Cantacuzene family of Russian princes.

Anyone who can wear a title with even a shadow of right seems, to a certain set in society, a good match for the finest American girls. Of course if the Grants are satisfied, no one else has any right to object, but everybody feels a deep interest in the family, and persists in regarding them as more or less public characters. Beneath all the talk of magnificent presents, costly fetes, dazzling receptions, brilliant dinners, you hear in Newport the undertone of this muttering: "It is a shame!" Newport, ever quick at nicknames, already calls Cantacuzene "the Black Prince." When this title was first used, it referred to the color of the armor of the man who wore it. That is not now the case.

Despite all the comment, the wedding will be the great social event of the season. To the Anglo-maniac smart set in Newport the name of Grant is no more than any other name, but the deep feeling of a nation has its reflex. You can feel it in the air. The wedding will be the kind of event one will like to talk about in after years, adding, as if carelessly: "I had a good seat, my dear, and—"

Cut-Price Magazines.

The action of the Harpers in cutting the price of their magazine to 25 cents is the sensation of the publishing trade. It is in effect a statement by the oldest and most conservative of the popular magazines that it looks to the advertiser, not to the reader, for its profit.

A twelve-page newspaper of enormous circulation can be sold at wholesale for half a cent, and it will a little more than pay for paper, ink and presswork. It probably costs something like 20 cents and a copy of a first-class magazine. Why its production should cost 40 times as much as a newspaper is to the outsider something of a puzzle. It is, however, all a question of work and wages. The newspaper is made in a day—pictures drawn and etched, type set, presses run at the rate of from 24,000 to 72,000 an hour.

In a magazine of the first class, the cost of paper and ink is relatively much less, though a more expensive quality of paper is used. It is work that costs. The engravers toil for days over each picture. The forms are made up with the most anxious care. Men spend days, again, "underlaying" the cuts—pasting little strips of paper so as to bring the pressure in printing exactly where it is most needed. There is experiment after experiment before the presses start. And when all is ready, the actual printing must be done very slowly, perhaps at the rate of 1,000 an hour. To get the magazine out, several presses have to run the entire month, using electro-plates of the pages as prepared.

The chief economies in the production of the ten-cent magazines thus far have been bigger circulation, faster printing, and much less expensive methods of picture producing. With their enormous circulations, the cheap magazines can be furnished to the trade for six cents, and still leave a very slight margin of profit.

Of course all the magazines expect to pay editors, contributors and artists out of the advertising receipts. They will have to do so some month in the future; a quarter will be the highest price that can be asked for a popular magazine after this.

A Society Showman.

You have read stories, many of them, to you as an expert I make this appeal: What situation in fiction was ever stranger or more romantic than the enlistment of Stephen Van Rensselaer, Jr., in a traveling wild west show?

Mr. Van Rensselaer is a lineal descendant of the first Patron of that name in the old Dutch days of New York. His family, although it has never produced statesmen, like the Morrises, Fishes and Hamiltons, or generals, like the Schuylers and Wadsworths, is doubtless the first in social rank in the state, far surpassing the mushroom Vanderbilts, or even the Golets and Roosevelts. In the European sense of the word, the Van Rensselaers were gentlemen when the Depeysters were still selling salt codfish. The young man is a broker. He is simply tired of work, and concluded to take a year's vacation. He is a magnificent rider, enlisted with Roosevelt in the war. A traveling wild west show came to the suburb where Van Rensselaer lived. He went to see the rough riding. Nothing was done that he could not do. He burned to be in the ring. He sought an interview with the manager; he demanded a trial, passed it in triumph, and became a member of the troupe, and will travel with it, giving exhibitions.

Now that is all. If this were a book, I should say that he loved an Indian maiden in the tapers of the show; or that a villain had stolen his father's will and he was forced to disappear; or that he had lost his memory and would only get it back when Miss de Flynpe, with a shriek of joy, recognizing him after a weary search of many years, rushed down into the arena and dragged him off his perch on the high horse.

GET DOWN TO CAUSES.

Varicella People Reason Easily and Consistently Nowadays.

In former times liniment was placed over all internal remedies, because people mistook effects for diseases, and attacked a pain where they found it. Temporary relief convinced them they were right, and so they lost a return of the pain to a return of the complaint, when in fact the disease was there all the time. Backache is not an aching of the back, but an aching of the kidneys, and remedies must reach the kidneys and be perfect in their work at that, before permanent relief is secured. Doan's Kidney Pills are perfect in their work and permanent in their cure. A backache gives way at once because the kidneys resume their normal functions and there is nothing to ache. There is nothing so hard to combat as the evidence of our senses, and yet all who believe as on the subject of backache are glad they did because of the cure.

Mr. Rudolph Raub, of Eighth street near City Unit, says: I am a painter by trade and I think the chemists used in my work are unusually. I worked in the varnish room of Lobdell's shop for a long time and could notice the back effect more while working in a closed room, than I could when working in the open air. My kidneys bothered me about three and a half years. At times I suffered severely, was unable to work and at times was off as much as three weeks, part of the time being unable to get out of bed, having such dull, steady aches across the loins, and sharp twinges of pain when I attempted to move. I was examined and treated by a physician. While he stated that the kidneys were affected, he failed to do anything for me. Then I tried other medicines and obtained the same results. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at W. Stever's drug store on Front street. They did not only relieve me after taking a few doses, but I believe they made a cure of it, for I worked hard all the time and had no return of it. Doan's Kidney Pills are a wonder.

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers. Price 30 cents per box. Sold by mail on receipt of price. Foster-McMurrin Co., Buffalo, N. Y., Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no other.
