WITS AND A WEDDING

Dewey's Latest Victory as Seen Through Newspaper Clippings.

The Launching of His Bark on the Matrimonial Sea Proves a Fascinating Theme for People to Write and Think About.

The recent marriage of Admiral Dewey to Mrs. Mildred Hazen afforded the newspapers an opportunity to make many a bright and witty remark, and they make interesting reading. So great was the annoyance from crowds thronging the admiral and his bride on their visit to New York city that one paper said:

"Dewey and his bride may be forced to take to the high seas."—Chicago Record.

But they didn't, and returned to Washington to the new Dewey home, where,

"Dewey can now hang up his hat in a real home, but he must not exhibit any irritation if he experiences some trouble in finding it afterward."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

This is no intended slander upon the housewifely qualifications of Mrs. Dewey, for

"Dewey now has some one to whom on buttons when her own-worshipers read their own accounts."—Chicago Record.

One paper calls attention to the fact that Admiral Dewey always obeys orders, because

"Dewey's name reversed is 'ye wed,' and he did it."—Louis Starbuck.

And it is probable he will go on obeying, as a new hero has been discovered, as indicated by the following:

"Such is fame."

"What?"

"Dewey now becomes the husband of Mrs. Dewey, and is given a small bust picture in the newspapers beside the full-length portrait of his wife."—Philadelphia North-American.

There will be no opportunity for the admiral to get lonesome in his new surroundings, for

"Mrs. Dewey has caused her parrot to be removed to the Dewey residence. The admiral will realize from day to day that there is no place like home."—Chicago Record.

And while it is always interesting to hear what the ladies have to say, yet

"It is just as well that they gave Dewey his scrapbook before the ladies got a chance to express their opinions regarding his marriage."—Chicago Times-Herald.

In speaking of his engagement, the admiral himself says:

"The first person to whom I announced my engagement was ex-Secretary Hillary A. Harber, my friend and legal counsel."

And this was too good a secret for even a man to keep. The admiral does not go on to say whether he will ever again trust his friend Harber with a secret or not. However, we were glad to get the news of the engagement, and it is gratifying to know from where the story started.

And, by the way, has it occurred to you that

"Dewey's engagements are always brief."—Crisis (N. Y. Observer).

And the story of Dewey's engagement and marriage would not be complete without reference to young Dewey, for

"It is vastly to his credit that he hasn't made a monkey of himself by refusing to sanction his father's marriage."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Fair Exchange.

Now that the callow youth pretends to show his madly loves, By sending to his lady fair A Christmas box of gloves, But ah, relentless, cruel fate, The maiden is not smitten, And, as she must reciprocate, She gives that youth the mitten. —L. A. W. Bulletin.

S. V. Camp Fire.
