INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Of Hon. Fred D. Connelly, Newly Elected President of the Buckeye Republican Club of Columbus, Ohio, December 13th, 1913.

Inspired by the history of the big achievements of the Republican party during its half-century tenure of power and the majestic march of progress made by this country during that period, I contend that the usefulness of the Republican party is not at an end.

Having in mind its great achievements from the suppression of a rebellion of an armed force of one million men from the reconstruction of the Union after that rebellion into the greatest country on earth; from the transformation of four million black men from slavery to citizenship; from the liberty and justice accorded to 2,000,000 people in Cuba; from the blessings of civilization which it has made possible for the people of Porto Rico and to 7,000,000 yellow men in the Philippines and from the greatest prosperity and opportunities which it has made possible for our own country, I contend that the Republican party has not outlived its day.

The Republican party had its birth in opposition to human oppression and its work is far from finished. The principles of the Declaration of Independence "that all men are created equal" finds a new significance and a new application at this time when the social and industrial welfare of the masses is the paramount issue of the day.

Being firm in the conviction that the real reforms of tomorrow will be entrusted for final solution to the great mass of voters composing that party, I say that the Republican party is the logical agency through which to bring about these reforms.

If this government "of the people, by the people and for the people" is to be a success, it must be responsive at all times to the popular will and all officials must be imbued with the highest ideals and the utmost integrity of purpose.

The dangers of the present day can only be averted by a faithful performance of every promise made, and the execution of our laws must be just and impartial and punishment must be meted out to those who violate them.

Thorough response to the demands of the people is the biggest asset any political party can have. New issues are born of time and progress and we should allow no party to out-do us in striving for their solution.

The Republican party was born in opposition to human slavery and the spirit still spurs us on to higher endeavor.

The rank and file of the Republican party is still irreproachably opposed to servility, to misrule or to false leadership and notice is now served that the fight against the self-seeker whether individual or individuals, is on and will be prosecuted to the end.

The Declaration of Independence is still the spirit of our people; the citizen is still the sovereign, the official still the servant and no power should be exercised except by will of the people.

Oh, the Republican party in recent years has not been as responsive to the will of the people as it should have been. Its management was lacking in progressive-ism and the rebuke of 1912 was a well-deserved protest against existing conditions, which the rank and file at this time propose to remedy.

It is not my desire to deal harshly with the mistakes of yesterday. It is my purpose to serve notice that the new Republicanism of today realizes them, has fixed the responsibility and being ever mindful of them, aims with confidence to the big problems of tomorrow.

A new era has dawned in this country. In its tremendous growth the social and industrial welfare of the masses has to a considerable extent been lost sight of. The demand of the day, which we recognize, is for equal opportunity and equal justice for all. Every individual, class and interest must understand and assume their just responsibility to their fellow man, and every individual, class and interest must toe that mark.

True prosperity means that every man shall share equitably in its blessings and true equity will never be attained.

VIKINGS IN HISTORY

MOST ROMANTIC FIGURES OF THE AGES PAST.

Norway Always the Home of Fabled and Real Heroes Who Dominated Sea and Land Twelve Centuries Ago.

Perhaps the most romantic figures in history, at least to the boys and girls who love adventure and daring deeds, are the Vikings of the Centuries. They have passed since the appearance of an unknown ship at sea was the signal for terrified prayer by priests and people, the burden of which was "Save us, O Lord, from the rage of thine enemies." But even to this day the word Viking has power to thrill such as few other words possess.

Norway is the real home of the Vikings, for from the fabled time when Odin, their god, led his followers out of Asia and settled with them in Norway, such an unreasoning love of freedom influenced the fierce Norsemen that not one of them was willing to be ruled and all wanted to rule.

Thus it came about that the country was divided into very small portions, and over each portion ruled a petty lord, known as a Jarl or earl. These little domains naturally quarreled continually, and so things were in a plight until Harold, the Fair-Haired, upon the death of his father, was proclaimed king. He had only ten years old at the time, but the Norsemen matured early, and so it was not very long before he fell in love with Gyda, the beautiful daughter of a petty ruler in a neighboring land. He sent an ambassador to ask her hand in marriage, as was the custom of the time; but Gyda, who evidently was very ambitious indeed, sent back a message saying that she would become a neighboring land. He sent an ambassador to ask her hand in marriage, as was the custom of the time; but Gyda, who evidently was very ambitious indeed, sent back a message saying that she would become a neighboring land.

Harold's wife when he had conquered all of Norway and bent it to his rule as King Erik had conquered Sweden. As soon as Harold had received this message he was determined to cut his beautiful hair until he won Gyda for a bride on her own conditions.

True to his word, he conquered Norway and, as a consequence, Gyda became his queen.

Up to the time of the wedding feast he had been known as "The Prowy Hairied"; but afterward he was called all over his conquered kingdom, Harold Haarfager, which means the fair-haired.

It was with the reign of Harold the Fair-Haired that the Viking age began.

Although Harold had conquered Norway, he had by no means subdued the fierce love for freedom in the hearts of his subjects. Those who had ruled over petty kingdoms refused to be subject to the rule of any man, and so they sailed away and became sea robbers, or Vikings.

Both Wrong.

"There are many people in this world who make a fine display, but who fall down when it comes to practical knowledge," is the verdict of Helen Lovell.

"Two commercial travelers while in a train got into an argument over the action of the vacuum brake.

"It's the inflation of the tube that stops the train," declared the first traveler.

"Wrong, wrong!" shouted the second. "It's the output of the exhaustion."

"Then, when the train arrived at the station, they agreed to submit the matter for settlement to the engineer. That gentleman leaning condescendingly from his cab, listened with an attentive frown to the two travelers' statement of their argument. Then he smiled, shook his head and said: "Well, gentlemen, you're both wrong about the workin' of the vacuum brakes. Yet it's very simple and easy to understand. When we want to stop the train we just turn this valve and Brody fills the tube with vacuum."

Young's Magazine.

Forgot All Purses.

When Tommy began to read his mother tried to teach him to observe the punctuation. He learned to call the periods dots. One day a talkative woman called at the home and when she left Tommy said: "O, mamma, didn't that lady talk? She didn't even stop for the dots, did she?"

CHANGE IN LOVE LETTERS

Typewriter of Today is Held Responsible for the Curt Notes of Cupid.

With the coming of the typewriter the art of writing love letters, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, seems to have gone out of fashion, and instead of the ornate missives our grandmothers treasure, the modern love letter reads something like this: "Dr. Em: Yrs. read. It was a daisy. Wish I cd. write as you do. Am very busy, but you know—same as ever. 'Phone me tomorrow. Will try to catch 3:29 Sat. Meet me at station. If it doesn't rain, we'll have a good game."

"You know what I think of you. So long. Alf. JACK."

Thirty years ago, if Jack's father had been writing to Emma's mother, this same letter would have read thus: "Dearst Emmeleine: Your dear letter this moment reached me, and the beauty of its expression afflicts me with a sense of my incompetency to reply in kind. But you know that my heart beats for you alone."

"Although my time is not my own, I feel that I must snatch a few sweet moments in this to assure you that in this letter I repeat all I ever said or wrote to you, and that I love you every day and night."

"If you could write to me every day in the same strain my work would fairly fly under my accelerated efforts. This is the influence of your inspiring devotion."

"On Saturday I will be in the train which reaches S— at half after 3. If your dear face were there to welcome me, you know how happy I should be. Whatever plans you may make for our brief holiday I will gladly carry out. My own love, how can I tell you what you are to me?"

"I am yours devotedly and faithfully. JOHN W. WATSON."

Seagulling Movies.

The movies are to form an important part of the equipment of every first-class transatlantic liner before long if current reports are true. Having abolished motion on shipboard, the triumph of modern shipbuilding, the great transporters of the Atlantic may find that in this very immobility there is something lacking, and that something the moving picture.

It is hard to see where the men who plan marine comfort and delight could find anything better suited to evening entertainment for passengers who have exhausted the possibilities of the moonlight and the concert and dance than the cinematograph. There is no denying that, whether everybody ought to be musical in taste or not, a very respectable portion of humanity takes more enjoyment in film pictures than in solos or concert selections. It is equally indubitable that a goodly number of ocean travelers are of an age where the magic of the moon on the waters is sometimes a bit of a bore, if the facts were known, and where the modern dances do not by any means excite the best or even the more impressionable head.

Quite Comforting.
