

STRENGTH—GOODNESS

The World Has Been Aroused—Our Political System—The World of Finance—The World of Labor—Society—The Religious World—Strength Unless it is Controlled by Goodness is a Dangerous Asset.

W. T. Williams.

Strength unless it is under the control of goodness is a dangerous asset, we have been told more than once of late and so far as our understanding permits us to speak, we fall to see how we can gain the statement. It is so clear, and so much in keeping with the evidence that we have decided to accept it as a correct saying. This is not only true physically, but it is true in every sphere of which we might imagine; and the subject is studied today with an earnest, sincere determination to go to its bottom. This is very precious, and we should say that our hope lies along this line, we would not be saying an iota too much. There is sufficient reason to justify this laborious work. The world has been jarred and men and women have gone out of their way to see what has caused it. We are under the impression that the wrong emphasis has been placed on the wrong idea—that is, the one that was placed first should have been last; and in order for us to see it plainly let us inquire into the main avenues of our life.

First of all we will take our political system. To many of us this is fascinating beyond estimate. We are very charmed by it. In a country like ours it has so much to do with our well-being that it is no wonder that we are so interested in it. The privileges of our political life are rare and very precious. They are so valuable that they ought to be kept undisturbed and unshaken. But we know that this is not always the case, and that our sorrow, we have found it, is more than once. How often does the idea of goodness enter our minds when we are about to choose our candidate? Or how frequently do we think of this when our tickets are framed? Is it not true that it is to all intents and purposes wholly neglected? History verifies what we maintain, and all we need to do to see it clearly is to study the results by that, elevating rather than the shall be known by fruit. This rule of judgment cannot be set aside, and it is conceded on all hands that the tendency is to create demagogues rather than good men. This is obvious to all who have followed the matter of any thought, and the fault is not on the surface, but at the very basis of our life. In the language of the schools our arrangement of principles is wrong, and when we are reaping what we have sowed. We put strength where we ought to put goodness, forgetting that the beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord. It is hard for us to comprehend that the good man is more valuable than the strong man. It is difficult for us to refuse to be charmed by strength. The animal appeals to us stronger than the man, and our words of praise prove it. They are the outgrowth of our arrangements of principles. They are the natural products of this.

Again, the world of finance is a great necessity. It is in its keeping the medium through which we do our business. We cannot get along without it. We are dependent upon it more than words can tell. But the idea of strength has marred it fully as much, and over the years it has been held in disregard when it should be honored. It has been disparaged by men of every clime. What do we suppose is the reason that we, as a general rule, are jealous of a rich man? He is not so much of our flesh and our bone, and yet we are jealous of him. Can this be on account of our arbitrary notions? Can it be because we are sometimes whimsical? Not necessarily. There must be another reason for it. There must be a reason for it that justifies this well-nigh universal feeling, and it behooves us to know it though it costs us arduous toil and loss of sleep. We think that the financial world may be safely judged according to the rule we judged the political world by the tree shall be known by its fruit. Or, we go to the bottom as we are wont to do in touch with the surface, and no other kind of judgment is fair and useful. Then, we must understand the chief tendency of the financial world. It is an established system, and so far as we can see at this hour, it is in no immediate danger of being overthrown. It has its laws, rules and regulations. These are watched and supported by the government, and yet there is something about it which is displeasing. There is something about it that creates suspicion. What is it? Is it not its chief tendency? What is that? The chief tendency of the financial world according to its laws, rules and regulations, is to produce plutocrats. It cannot be otherwise, and if this is not the reason for the jealousy which we have already mentioned, it cannot be approved in any way. This feeling against the rich man should not be countenanced at all if it is not this. But if it is this, as many believe that it is, we fall to see how any one can rejoice in an opportunity to dispossess it. A plutocrat, or a man who has power and influence due only to his wealth, is a dangerous citizen. He plays the game with the umpire on his side, and this he knows, and the idea of strength has displaced the idea of goodness, and this is the reason that the financial world is marred by this. It has been built, and by this it is maintained. Strength is its foundation, and strength is its support and defender.

Let us now take a glance at the world of labor. This is full of enchantment. It is bewitchingly eloquent. There is nothing grander, nobler, more manly, more living in the sweat of his brow is a deserving character. It does not matter who he is, nor where he lives, his merits are the same. He is a true supporter of society, and this must be recognized. He might be toiling in obscurity, not known outside of his narrow sphere, nevertheless, his usefulness cannot be denied. Indeed, the world of labor is bewitchingly eloquent. Strength is being displaced by the idea of strength. Labor is organized just as much as capital, and this makes it distinct—a world within itself, with its laws, rules and regulations just the same

TAX VALUATION

Deputy Tax Commissioner's Report of Valuation of Taxable Property in Fulton County Filed With State Tax Commission—Over a Million Dollars Increase This Year.

Deputy Tax Commissioner Outcalt has filed his report of the valuation of taxable property in Fulton county for 1915 with the State tax commission at Columbus. The report shows an increase in valuation of taxable property of $1,096,900. The figures are printed herewith for comparison:

1914 Valuation	$25,390,680
Individual Personal	6,273,990
Corporations Personal	818,030
Total	$32,482,700
1915 Valuation	$26,319,510
All Personal	7,260,090
Total	$33,579,600

The totals given do not include the valuations of the taxable property of public utilities, such as railroads and telephone lines, in the county which will bring the total valuation up to two or three millions more. A comparison of the figures given above will show that the largest increase in valuation is in lands, the increase for this year being $928,830, while the increase in valuation of personal property over 1914 is $168,070.

Deputy State Tax Commissioner Outcalt has issued notice that the tax lists of the county have been completed and are now open for public inspection at the office of the Deputy State Tax Commissioner. Complaints against any tax valuation or assessment, except such as are fixed and made by the State Tax Commission should be made in writing on blanks which will be furnished by the Deputy Tax Commissioner, and filed with the Auditor; such complaints will be heard by the District Board of Complaints at its first Monday in August.

CHAUTAQUA WEEK

Redpath Chautauqua in Wauseon August 14th to 20th Inclusive—Some Prominent Features of the Program Announced.

According to the official program of the Wauseon Chautauqua, August 14 to August 20, F. M. Whitney is to be superintendent, Dr. C. C. Mitchell of Providence, R. I., morning hour lecturer and Miss Martha Giltner, children's worker.

The experience of Mr. Whitney as a Chautauqua superintendent extends over a number of years. While school superintendent at Lawrence, Michigan, and later at Reed City in the same state he managed successful Lyceum courses each year and is thoroughly familiar with the work. More than twenty years ago he conducted a successful lecture course in a town of 400 population, 12 miles from any railroad. He is thoroughly competent and highly entertaining as a lecturer.

The morning lecturer, Dr. Mitchell, is a native of Pennsylvania and was educated in Michigan and Chicago. He has lectured in thirty-four states. If the railroad should carry him by weight they would lose money as the measure of this man is his hat band, not his waist band. He is a scholar, a humorist, and a keen student of men and events. It is said that he speaks in a language that the bookbinder and the President can appreciate.

Special prominence will be given this season to children's work. Miss Giltner will arrive on the second day of the week and her program calls for a series of Indian, Russian, Scandinavian, German, Japanese and English folk tales and dances, as well as daily singing games and games of action. On the fourth or fifth day she will appear before the afternoon audience for a lesson on the art of story-telling.

The 1915 Chautauqua program, with such features as Dr. Frank W. Cunningham, Strickland Gillilan, The Beet Payers, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, Packard the cartoonist, Ferullo's Band, Atty. Gen'l. Parker of Missouri, Harry F. Atwood, Chaplain O. L. Kipling, Marcus A. Kellerman, artistic baritone, is worthy of the enthusiastic support which it is sure to receive in Wauseon.

OBITUARY.

LOVINA MOCK, daughter of Alexander and Catherine Mock, was born in Knox County, Ohio, November 1st, 1843, and passed from this life to the Great Beyond, July 3rd, 1915. In early life she gave her heart to the Savior and united with the Evangelical Lutheran church at Worthington, Richland County, in 1860. Uniting in marriage with Aaron Kling, they came to Fulton county in 1881 where the husband was called to the better land some sixteen years since. A son three brothers and many relatives and friends are left to mourn.

The last few weeks of her life she suffered greatly but endured her suffering patiently. She was a kind neighbor, although a great home body and endeared herself to the hearts of those who knew her well.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank the neighbors and friends for their help and sympathy during the sickness and death of our mother and sister, the minister for his words of comfort, the singers those who sent flowers or assisted in any way.

SWANTON MAN DIES.

William Patton Dies at Wauseon Hospital Result of Injuries Received by Fall From Building in Swanton Last Thursday.

Last Thursday afternoon while working on a balcony on the front of a livery building in Swanton, William Patton aged 33 fell to the sidewalk and was picked up unconscious; he was brought in a motor truck to Wauseon hospital at once and his injuries which consisted of a fractured skull, both arms broken and the left ear severed from his head, were attended to. All that medical skill could do was done, but proved unavailing he died at 11:15 Saturday night. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of Ives-Edgar-Pike Company where it was prepared for burial. Sunday the body was taken by a friend of the family to the home of Mrs. M. J. Patton at Holland, a sister of the deceased. Mr. Patton was single and has worked at the carpenter trade in and about Swanton for some time.

SAVE A BABY

Times Campaign To Save Toledo Babies in Full Swing—Practically All Northwestern Ohio Newspapers Join in The Movement.

"The change of environments alone for a week or two will work wonders for any puny city baby that may be taken into the country," said Dr. D. W. Iford, head of Toledo's health department in speaking of the Save-A-Baby week campaign. The great goal that it will do the mother of such baby, whether the baby is artificially fed or nurses the mother, is sure also to result in a decided benefit to the child's sanitary and housing conditions surrounding many of the children of the less fortunate city dwellers is one of the greatest drawbacks to the well-being of babies according to Dr. Iford. It is often surprising what removal, even for a brief period, of a child from improper surroundings and the placing of it in the right sort of environments will do in even the most discouraging cases, declared Dr. Iford. From a week or two in the country, either on a farm or in a village, the most helpless city mother will get a new and better view of life. She will get new ideas of living, housekeeping and management of the home that will help her wonderfully in the future, no matter how pinched may become her economic condition. This, of course, will have a beneficial effect on her children.

Just how the Save-A-Baby campaign appeals to one poor Toledo mother is told in the plain, simple language of the heart in a letter received by The Times Sunday night.

"I hope and I believe that many good women—mothers—who live in the country will give places for a week or two to some poor city mother and her baby," writes this woman who is the mother of three children, the youngest being only a few days old. "I am sure every country woman young or old, married or single, would do this for the poor women of the city and their little babies if they really knew how much good they would be doing—if they could only see the conditions that many of our poor mothers struggle under and how our hearts ache when we see our own dear little ones pining away for want of something that there is so much in the world—fresh air."

The writer then states that she has lost two babies in their "second summer, when they could probably have been saved if they were not the offspring of poor parents."

The letter then tells of how helpfully this mother and two other neighbor women with a baby each, and in similar circumstances, look forward to an opportunity of getting out into "God's green, fresh country, even for one week."

People in Toledo are responding to the appeal by contributing money to meet the expenses of transportation and it remains for those who live in country or in country towns to open their homes for these mothers and their babies. It is no trivial matter and those who do open their homes for a week or more to a mother and her babe are doing a truly great work. Here is an opportunity to do a real christian act; to practice religion pure and undefiled, and "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren ye have done it unto me."

We realize that not every one who has the will to help to save one of these babies can exert an influence for good in the lives of both mother and children, is so situated that it is possible for them to do so, but if you can even at the cost of some personal sacrifice and inconvenience (the amount is in "His Name"), fill out the coupon below and send it in to this office. It will be forwarded at once to The Toledo Times and you will be placed in communication with Toledo's health department.

Enlist me as an active member of the Save-A-Baby campaign. My home is open to a mother and her babe for (.....) weeks) in August, beginning on the ..... day of August, 1915.

AGED PIONEER DEPARTED.

Maria Hauenstein (nee Eicher) was born May 24, 1824, in Alsace, France. She died July 15, 1915 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Seidner at Pettisville, aged ninety-one years, one month and two days.

She immigrated to America in June 1849 and came to Fulton county in the fall of the same year. She was married to Rudolph Hauenstein of Burlington, September 24, 1850. The husband preceded her in death, October 15, 1890.

To this union were born five children, one son and four daughters, J. A. Hauenstein, Christeen Leatherman, Catherine Geary, Sarah Hauenstein, who died at the age of three years and Mary Seidner. Mrs. Hauenstein also raised one foster daughter, Mrs. Marie Pott. Mrs. Hauenstein was converted to God at the age of forty years and lived a consistent Christian life until her death.

She leaves to mourn their loss one sister, Mrs. Joseph Roth, one son, three daughters, twenty-six grandchildren, twenty-nine great grandchildren and many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held Tuesday, June 29th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Seidner at Pettisville, conducted by Rev. Frickie, of Ithica, Michigan, and interment in Pettisville Union cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS.

The children of the deceased desire to express their sincere thanks to the many friends who so kindly assisted them during the time of their mother's sickness and death.

LAST GRAND REVIEW

Fiftieth Anniversary of The Grand Review of 1865 To Be Celebrated by G. A. R. Veterans at Their Forty-ninth Annual Encampment in Washington September 27th to October 3rd.

A patriotic demonstration that is dividing attention with the great war being waged in the old world, is the Grand Review and the forty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, to be held in Washington, D. C., from Sept. 27 to October 3, inclusive. The occasion will mark the final public parade of the venerable veterans of the civil war, and will be in fact their Last Grand Review. In order that it may bear the proper relation to the first Grand Review in 1865, Col. John McElroy says that only members of the G. A. R. will be permitted to take part in the pathetic pageant.

Fifty years ago the victorious Union armies, fresh from the battle of Appomattox and the other surrender at Appomattox marched down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington. It was a Grand Review of the war-scarred legions of Grant and Sherman and Meade and Sheridan, and the other famous commanders, President Johnson and Gen. Grant were in the reviewing stand as the veterans swung proudly past to the exciting music of the church Friday evening July 23. The Grand Review will therefore, be the largest and most successful ever held by the organization.
