THE DOG
The dog has a reputation for being a faithful and loyal friend to man, but he sometimes is very successful in making a nuisance of himself and proving a rather dangerous enemy. The farmer's dog may be a very necessary part of his farm force, but during this excessively warm weather it would seem best and safest to keep even the farm dog where he will be unable to do injury to persons or stock. It may cause the dog some discomfort to wear a muzzle but it is better than run the risk of the dog biting someone.
A couple of weeks ago Mr. A. E. Harger was bitten by a couple of dogs who jumped at him at the same time and again last Saturday Mr. Harger was attacked and severely bitten by another farmer's dog; just why the dogs have antipathy to the genial gentleman who was going about his legitimate business, we do not know, but it occurs to us that owners of dogs ought to restrain them from endangering the lives of business or occasional visitors.
