NEW BALLAD OF LORD LOVELL.

From the American Union.

Lord Lovell he sat in St. Charles' Hotel,

As fine a case of Southern swell,

As ever you'd wish to see—see—see,

As ever you'd wish to see.

Lord Lovell the town had vowed to defend,

A waving his sword on high,

And in the last ditch he'd die.

He swore by black and he swore by blue,

He swore by the stars and his hat,

That never he'd fly from Yankee crew

While he was a son of Mars.

He had fifty thousand gallant men,

Fifty thousand men had he,

Who had sworn with him they'd never survive

But to die a martyr's death.

He had forts that no Yankee alive could take,

He had iron-clad boats a score,

And batteries all around the lake

And along the river shore.

He had a fleet of iron-clad boats a score,

And batteries all around the lake

And along the river shore.

He had a fleet of iron-clad boats a score,

And batteries all around the lake

And along the river shore.

and E. we having traveled in that time, over sixty miles and the most of the way over mountains.

Gen. Schenck's brigade is encamped about half a mile from our brigade. Part of his brigade were out skirmishing yesterday with some rebels.

Two regiments of the rebels charged on Herrman's Ohio battery yesterday, but a couple of shells thrown among them soon started them to running. That was what we heard, but we had so much to do yesterday and to day, being called out in line of battle two or three times a day, so that I have had no time to go over to the other part of the camp to see what was going on.

You may expect to hear of a battle before long here, and one or the other side being whipped, and that the rebels have retreated.

The 55th is in the other brigade. I have seen a good many of the boys and now it don't seem so lonesome, as there are a good many that we know.

We were called out in line of battle yesterday morning by the firing of guns about 4 o'clock A. M., but the cause of it was three prisoners that tried to get past the pickets. Two of the prisoners attacked one of the guards with knives, but he shot one of them and one of the other guards shot another and then ran his bayonet through the third. They belonged to a party of guerrillas that burnt 25 of our brigade wagons, and we had captured these three and now they are out of the road.

The horses were hitched to one of the batteries this afternoon. When the horses that were hitched to one of the caissons started and upset the caisson and one or two shells exploded and wounded one man pretty severely.

There has been firing of cannon at intervals most all day up the road. What it has been for I can't tell, and they have been throwing shells since we can hear the cannon and in a few seconds we can hear the shells explode.

There are ten of us out on picket now and I don't have time to write much, so that you will have to overlook all mistakes and poor writing. You will hear more from me from time to time, and I will conclude for the present.

Yours,

E. M. B.

CAMP NEAR FRANKLIN Va., May 10th, 1862.

DEAR TRIBUNE:

After the lapse of a few weeks, during which time a visit to the "land of many dreams," and a short "pull" over the broad, fertile acres of Old Sumner, a social pastime with kindred and friends, a revel in the clypeum of youth's sunny clime had been realized, and a good time in general the order of the day throughout I again find myself amid the conflicting strategies of hostile armies, and the multiplying scenes of "war's wild desolation," which looms up on every side.

Arriving at New Creek by Rail Road we were obliged to take a romantic little trail across the country a distance of forty-two miles, where our regiment was camped.

We came up with our division on the 2d, nothing of special interest, except the natural scenery of the country occurring to charm the weary traveller on his way or delight the anxious gaze.

On the 3d, we crossed the Potomac, which at this point is very rapid and turbulent. The work was a tedious one owing to the unevenness of the bottom and swiftness of the current.

The artillery lost one horse and barely escaped losing half a dozen more at the peril of the lives of their men, who succeeded in cutting the harness and extracting them.

The next day we took up our line of march for Franklin, distance 30 miles which we made in two days. The next day about 12 M. a messenger arrived with intelligence that a provision train belonging to Gen. Milroy had been fired into about 8 miles from camp, by some Bushwhackers.

Detachments of cavalry were sent out and two infantry squads to apprehend the thieves and bring them in. Fifty four of our company, armed to the teeth, with two rations in their haversacks and headed by Lieut. Pool volunteered to go in pursuit. We waded the Potomac, sealed the shaggy bluffs and scoured the rocky pierce crossing, in our travels, a mountain stream of some magnitude, some 30 times in a distance of 7 miles.

But our scout availed nothing, for when near the place we met the cavalry returning with the news that they had captured the nest, but the birds had flown, leaving all their effects, except arms, consisting of blankets, knapsacks and provisions &c. We returned to camp again by 4 P. M., much disappointed at having been marched up the hill but to be marched down again.

The next day our whole line was again set in motion to join Gen. Milroy at McDowell, 30 miles south. Jackson and Johnson were about to converge at that point, and with their entire force attack Gen. Milroy, and our aid was demanded as soon as possible. By 10 A. M. the 8th, after a hard march, we reached the scene of action. On the afternoon of the same day our cannon opened fire on the rebel camp from an adjacent hill, its embers of death very much to the discomfiture of the rebels, who attempted to plant a battery on a neighboring hill, but were summarily driven off.

At 6 in the evening Gen. Milroy desired permission of Gen. Schenck, who had assumed command, to take the 75th and 25th Ohio regiments and cut off a fraction of the main body of rebels which had appeared on the eastern hillside.

A brisk fire was shortly
