

RUIN IN MILWAUKEE.

A Dozen Blocks in Her Business District Burned.

The Losses Are Estimated at Nearly $7,000,000—Several Lives Lost and Many Persons Injured—A Thousand Homeless People.

GREAT FIRE IN MILWAUKEE.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 29.—There were several alarms Friday afternoon for fires, all of them the result of the heavy gale of wind that sprang up shortly before noon and increased until at 5 o'clock it reached a velocity of about 50 miles an hour.

Everything being in readiness the casket was lifted and slowly and reverently the cortege moved out through the sheds, through the union station to the carriages in waiting.

The church services were characterized by the greatest simplicity. As the coffin was carried up the aisle and deposited in front of the chancel the organ pealed forth a soft melody.

Leading insurance men say that about half of the losses is covered by insurance. They estimate the big losses as follows:

Chicago, Racine, Kenosha, Sheboygan and other points were early appealed to for help and responded promptly, freemen and apparatus arriving from the several points as rapidly as steam could bring them.

There was one other body at the morgue at midnight—that of a woman of perhaps 50 years, small in stature, with dark hair. There are no marks on her body to show how she met her death.

At Peacock's undertaking rooms at midnight the only body was that of a Mrs. Callahan, a widow who lived on Jackson street, opposite the Northwestern freight depot.

The fire originated from an explosion of something in the cellar. Fed by the inflammable stock it soon spread through the three upper floors.

FATAL FIRE AT CLEVELAND.

Teacher's Sash and Door Works and a Window Glass Warehouse Burned—One Life Lost.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 29.—An incendiary fire in the Cleveland window glass warehouse destroyed $40,000 worth of sash doors and blinds.

AT REST.

The Remains of Mrs. Harrison Placed in the Tomb at Indianapolis—Services at the Church and Cemetery.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 29.—It is over at last. All that is yet mortal of Caroline Scott Harrison is lying at rest in the silent cemetery of Crown Hill, and her place will know her no more.

The elegantly equipped special conveying the party arrived here at 9:30 o'clock, promptly on schedule time, and was greeted by thousands of sympathetic friends.

The president's grief was generally respected and nearly all the men in attendance removed their hats and bowed their heads when he passed through the station, leading his sorrowing family to the carriages provided for them.

Everything being in readiness the casket was lifted and slowly and reverently the cortege moved out through the sheds, through the union station to the carriages in waiting.

In front of the pall bearers were Judge Niblack and W. P. Fishback, and in the rear Moses G. McClain and John R. Elder, and following them the sorrowing relatives and the president's official family.

The church services were characterized by the greatest simplicity. As the coffin was carried up the aisle and deposited in front of the chancel the organ pealed forth a soft melody.

A stillness as of death pervaded the sacred edifice while the minister dwelt upon the beauties and happiness of a Christian life, but when, in low and trembling tones, he eulogized and touchingly spoke directly of her who had passed away and recounted her manifold virtues, many of his hearers were moved to tears and sounds of subdued sobbing pervaded the church.

When the last of the funeral party had been escorted to their carriages the cortege moved slowly to Crown Hill cemetery. With but few exceptions all of the private residences along the boulevard displayed emblems of mourning.
