ARMFUL OF FISH.

Experiences of a Novice with His First Salmon.
 One's first salmon is an event. I got mine all alone, says a writer in Scribner's Magazine. It was on the Dungeness, on my way into the more remote interior. In a clear pool we could see the green backs of the fish, big and little, but they were not after our flies. The others went up the stream a considerable distance and I remained by the pool. It needs two men to land a salmon. Presently I began idly casting, just to try my new 18-foot rod, and the first thing I knew a fish was hooked. He galloped around that pool, jumping out, darting back and forth, and I waded right in. After awhile I got him pretty tired.

I had no landing net or gaff, but there was a smooth gravel bar 40 rods below. Then I towed the unfortunate fish down there, got him headed for shore and ran straight back on the bar. Out he came, flopping somewhat on the gravel. The gaff leader broke, but I threw myself on top of that salmon and clasped my arms around him. He was slippery and strong and I could not hold him. Finally I got my fingers in his gills, reached for a stone and gave him three or four merciless whacks over the head. Then I had him. I was a sight to behold, wet and bespattered with mud and slime, but I was too proud as well as too nearly out of breath for words.

HE LOST HIS BETS.

But His Steamer Made $15,000 Profit on the Freight.
 From China comes the story of a sea captain who had an old and slow steamer, and finding that it would be a long time before he received a full cargo of tea, began to say that owing to repairs that had been done to his engines, he hoped to make a very fast passage.

Everybody laughed at his boasts when, to their astonishment, he began to wager that he would make the fastest passage on record. The captains of other steamers eagerly took his wagers; but when he had thus ventured several hundred pounds, people began to think there was something in it, and the merchants sent their tea almost entirely by his ship.

Of course the steamer, the greatest speed of which was eight knots an hour—arrived in England weeks after the others, and the captain lost his money; but he made nearly $15,000 profit all the same.

Instead of having to stop in the Chinese port for months, waiting for a chance of cargo coming in from the interior, he had cleared in a few days, and the owners, of course, paid the wagers. But it was a trick that could not be played twice.

ANTARCTIC ICEBERGS.

Some of Them Are Fully Two Miles Square.

The snowfall of each year adds a new stratum to this ice cap, which is as distinguishable to the eye as is the annual accretion of a forest tree, says the Ladies' Home Journal. Thus in centuries have accumulated on Antarctica these snows, which, by processes of pressure, thawing and regelation, have formed an ice cap that in places exceeds 3,000 feet in thickness. Through the action of various forces—that of contraction and expansion by changing temperature being, perhaps, the most potent—this ice cap creeps steadily seaward and projects into the ocean a perpendicular front from 1,000 to 2,000 feet in height. The temperature of the sea water being about 29 degrees, the fresh water ice remains unthawed, and the ice-barrier plows the ocean bed until through floating in deep water disruption occurs, and the tabular berg is formed. These bergs are of a size that long taxed the belief of men, but it is now well established that bergs two miles square and 1,000 feet in thickness are not rare; others are as large as 30 miles in length and some nearly 3,000 feet in thickness, their perpendicular, sun-washed sides rising from 200 to 400 feet above the sea.

Where Water Was Wanted.

In the "Life and Correspondence of William Connor Magee, archbishop of York," the following relative to Spanish manners may be read: "Time is the only thing that a Spaniard will waste. Money and soap and water and other things of that class he is extremely parsimonious about. Apropos of soap, I was horrified the other day at being told that a pretty young Rondaean whose complexion I had been admiring owed this beauty to the constant use of white of eggs instead of water at her morning toilet, and I am told that this custom is very common among Spanish ladies."

An Old Leaf.

The Soar family, of Ambaston, Derbyshire, England, have a curious heirloom in the shape of a loaf of bread that is now over 600 years old. The founders of the family, it appears, were great friends of King John. When that monarch died he made several land grants to the Soars. One of these tracts, it appears, had always been conveyed with a loaf of bread along with the "writings," and the deed and the loaf are both kept to this day as sacred relics.

Economical to a Degree.

At a chapel meeting in Jamaica the following resolutions are reported to have been adopted: (1) That we build a new chapel. (2) That we build the new chapel out of the material of the old for economy. (3) That we worship in the old chapel till the new one is built.

Ancient Dentistry.

The famous Mastrul, who lived in the First Century B. C., speaks of a Russian dentist, Calcellus, as "in the habit of fastening as well as extracting teeth."

Perfume in the Air.

On some parts of the coast of France, when the wind is in the east, the mist that appears bears with it a very noticeable perfume.

Well Watered.
 Artesian wells, instead of being expensive luxuries, are cheaper than pumps in the Great American desert—elliptical oasis, of which one focus is at Wilburn, Kan., and another at Meade, a winding stream. This little lozenge-shaped district is probably the best-watered portion of the earth's land surface. So easily is water attainable that a farmer may have artesian wells all over his property and at any spot on his premises he pleases—none needing to be more than 15 or 20 feet deep, and some costing more than $50. Of such wells there are over 250 in the district, and so unintelligently is the water supply managed that in nearly every case the greater part of the flow simply runs away into Crooked creek. A few of them yield 45 gallons a minute; others from 18 to 20; the majority grading down to eight or ten gallons. The total amount yielded would submerge 2,000 acres a foot deep every year.

Mrs. Backus, of Osage county, Kan., who is seeking to drive the corset out of that state, is moving upon the legislature in furtherance of her plan to deprive the female form of its chief support. Apart from the physiological evils of wearing a corset Mrs. Backus advocates her measure from the standpoint of art, and it is said she has written letters to the members of the legislature in which she declares that no generously endowed woman should oppose the reform, as it offers special advantages in the matter of self-pride. There is much opposition to the proposed measure, however, and if it ever becomes a law it will be by a tight squeeze. If a bill passes prohibiting the wearing of corsets in Kansas it is said that a number of the most prominent women in the state will apply for stay at once.

The editor of the Ottawa (Idaho) Beacon makes the following plaint to his readers: "We are out of wood, out of flour, out of money, and almost out of patience. We have a number of subscribers on our books who have promised to pay up their subscriptions with food or fuel, but we have waited these three, five, six, seven years, almost, and there is no relief in sight. Our family is suffering and the editor's hand has almost lost its cunning for the want of a good, square meal. If something is not done, and that quickly, the Beacon will go out in everlasting night and we will have to go to work. Pay up in 'any old thing.'"

The western section of the American Otolaryngological, Rhinological, and Otological society has just closed an interesting session at Kansas City. The pathology of nasal polyp, chronic otitis media, and palatopharyngeal lymphatic subjects generally were discussed. The experience of one doctor that a nickel's worth of methylbenzothioxyethyltetrahydroxypropylidene carboxylic acid as a gargle was efficacious for sore throat was nonconcurrent in the members were probably fearful of the consequences of using such a remedy.

An obituary of a little child in a Missouri newspaper recently was couched in very tender and pathetic tones, and had much to say about the lamb of the flock and the Good Shepherd. Incorporated in the article was the beautiful and familiar poem by Mrs. Browning, but the intelligent compositor and the proof reader spalled everything by giving the poem the caption: "He Giveth His Beloved Sheep."

Your Representative in Congress.

Will be as much interested in this question as yourself as it bears upon a subject in which the entire people are interested and that is which is the best route to Washington, the Capital of the United States? We claim the distinction for the Buckeye Route, as being best, because in connection with the B. & O. R. R. via Athens, it forms the shortest and most direct line from Northern and Central Ohio points. In connection with the B. & O. R. R. through vestibuled Pullman Sleeping and Drawing room cars of the most approved pattern are run every day in the year, leaving Toledo at 4:55 p. m., reaching Washington next day noon and Baltimore 1:35 p. m. This route takes you via the Historic Potomac, Harpers Ferry and the Blue Ridge Mountains. Solid trains are run from Toledo to Athens, connecting with the Royal Blue Line through to New York via Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, carrying elegant day coaches and superb vestibuled sleeping cars through without change. Please keep this fact in mind when you have occasion to go east and see that the tickets read via the Buckeye Route and the Royal Blue Line. Agents of the C. H. V. & T. Ry. will secure you sleeping car berths, check your baggage and see you started right. May1

MONEY TO BURN.

Unusual Difficulty Confronting a Georgia County Treasurer.
 The treasurer of Morgan county, Ga., does not know what disposition to make of $50,000, now in his possession. In 1818 Benjamin Braswell left a sum of money in trust, the interest on which was to go toward educating orphans. Out of the income a large number of orphans were educated, and a fine building was erected, which was destroyed during the war.

A remnant of the money was left, which was kept well invested, and now amounts to $50,000. The establishment of a first-class public school system has rendered it impracticable to use the money for the purpose for which it was intended, and as the money can be used for no other purpose, it has become a sort of elephant on the hands of the county officers.
 Many years ago alleged heirs of Braswell made an attempt to secure the money, but they were defeated. The money now is invested in Georgia railroad stock, on which there is a guaranteed interest of seven per cent.

"Maccabees."

At the national women's convention in Boston recently a Michigan lady represented an organization called "The Supreme Five Ladies of the Maccabees of 1850." And the business done by this society is even more surprising than its title, for the order represents a great business concern, composed of and managed entirely by women, numbering 65,999, representing $50,000,000 in outstanding certificates. Fifteen thousand members have been added to the order during the last year.

To Drill Holes in Glass.

The Bulletin d'Apiculture states that holes can be easily drilled in glass with an ordinary drill if the spot is moistened with a few drops of a mixture composed of 25 parts of oxalic acid in 12 parts of turpentine.

A Crying Wrong.

In a recent editorial the Cleveland Leader utters some sensible views on the subject of inducing working people to leave this country for foreign lands to obtain homes and employment. The Leader says:

"A dispatch from Chihuahua, Mexico, says that the Americans who a few years ago established a cooperative colony on the western coast of Mexico are now in a destitute condition and are seeking means of transportation back to the United States. A few days since part of a band of colonists who went to Brazil several months ago to establish homes for themselves arrived in New York without money and thoroughly disgusted with their experience. They reported that it had been impossible for them to do more than maintain existence in the South American republic. From time to time alluring inducements are held out to the working people of the United States to go to Mexico or Central or South America and establish colonies. In every instance a rosy picture is painted of the conditions existing in those countries, and it is made to appear that life is so much easier there than here as to make a colonial existence a paradise in comparison with the lot of the poor here. Invariably, we believe, these colonial enterprises have proved failures, but none has been more conspicuous in that respect than the Mexican colony at Topolobampo. The conditions of life may be hard from time to time in the United States, but as a whole the people of this country are better off than those of any other, and there is no place in the world where the people have so much to eat and wear and are so well housed as in this great republic."
