COACH DERAILED.

Small Boy Throws a Switch Causing Trouble.

The south bound C. H. & D. R. R. passenger train at Tontogany last Saturday morning met with a peculiar accident. As the train was running on the siding to permit a freight train to pass, a small boy whose name could not be learned, threw over the switch causing the rear trucks of the coach to continue on the main track while the forward end was on the siding, and continued for several rods before the trouble was noticed and the train stopped just as the front trucks ran off the rail. Had the train ran a rod or so farther the car would have collided with the rear of the freight train and doubtless would have been upset. The coach was filled with passengers, most of whom were ladies. They were transferred to the other coaches and the derailed car left for the wrecking crew to handle.

The Bravery of Woman
Was grandly shown by Mrs. John Dowling of Butler, Pa., in a three years struggle with a malignant stomach trouble that caused distressing attacks of nausea and indigestion. All remedies failed to relieve her until she tried Electric Bitters. After taking it two months, she wrote: "I am now wholly cured and can eat anything. It is truly a grand tonic for the whole system as I gained in weight and feel much stronger since using it." It aids digestion, cures dyspepsia, improves appetite, gives new life. Only 50c. Guaranteed by all druggists.

TOLEDO AMUSEMENTS.

The new "Railroad Jack" company which appears at Burt's theatre the latter half of this week, augurs well for the management of the fortunate house which secures this attraction. It has been well tried and proven a successful vehicle to enrich its author, and at the same time give the public an unlimited value for the money they expend to sit through. The fact is they could not be satisfied to see a portion only, for the play so abounds in fun, satire and all the elements that combine to make an amusing connected story, that to miss a portion of it is an aggravation. This year the management promises a treat, all the specialties are new, songs, dances, scenery, mechanical effects and music in every form sufficient in number to please the most fastidious taste and excellent in quality to satisfy the most exacting. The most sensational scene on the American stage takes place during the last act, a lady is thrown into a cage with a large and ferocious lion and rescued from under his very paws by the tramp in full view of the audience. Duke, the largest lion in captivity, will be drawn through the principal streets of the city in the parade.

At the Farm.
It there isn't a strong bill of fun, song, dance and general vaudeville at the Farm theatre this week, the expectations of the management will be very much off. In fact it seems reasonable to suppose that this will be one of the best weeks of the season, for the house has billed a crowd of good entertainers.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The Year Opens With Favorable Prospects.

The appearance of the interior of the schoolhouse has been greatly improved. The paper hangers have just completed a job that is a credit to themselves and a thing of joy and beauty to the various pedagogues and their pupils. The ceilings are headed and handsome molding helps set off some pretty blends in paper. Every room in the building is the prettiest—in the eyes of the respective occupants. The scholars are as loyal to the colors of their wall paper as the soldiers are to the stars and stripes.

New teachers must treat. Whether it be crackers, pop corn, ice cream or anything of like nature they have to set 'em up to the older wielders of the birch. Now there were five new ones and those held over had been waiting wistfully three long months for five treats. It was pleasant to think about. Tuesday after school had closed the new teachers were corralled and gently told of the ancient custom established years ago by their fore-mothers. Of course they were broke and explained that they had not received any pay for many weeks. The "ancients" were skeptical, however, and demanded that each one contribute all she had in her possession. This was done. After the collection had been duly counted a committee of three ambled happily down town, bought a stick of peanut candy, and on returning apportioned the peanuts therein among the members of the assembled company. All reported having a good time.

The enrollment this year is fully up to the standard. Many small citizens were duly registered in the first grade and there being no graduating class last Spring makes considerable gain over a year ago. The total number of pupils is over three hundred.

The Board intend to hire a specialist in Physical Culture who will instruct the teachers each week on Saturday. The teachers in turn will be required to give their pupils the benefit of this instruction. This will be another of the new ideas long ago adopted in the city schools but, as yet, new to smaller places.

Mr. Haylor is township secretary for the O. T. R. C. The teachers talk favorably of the course and no doubt will read it. The Library Board should purchase these books as they make a valuable addition to any library. The township teachers will be invited to join the Perrysburg Branch of the Circle.

There is certainly an eagerness for knowledge manifested by the pupils this year. They seem to have caught considerable of the enthusiasm from the teachers. With things so favorable there is no reason why Perrysburg cannot maintain the reputation of having the best schools in the county.

GASTRITIS. Caused by Some Irritant Acting Upon the Mucous Membrane of the Stomach.

Inflammation of the stomach, gastric catarrh or gastritis, as this unpleasant affliction is variously called, may, like most inflammatory diseases, be acute or chronic in its course. The symptoms of gastritis are more or less fever, weak pulse, loss of appetite, coated tongue, foul breath, bad taste in the mouth, the head aches dully. There is sensation of weight or distress in the stomach. Gastritis is caused by some irritant acting on the mucous membrane of the stomach, the irritant is often formed in the stomach by the fermentation of indigestible food. Gastritis will never develop if you take regularly Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the guaranteed cure for indigestion, constipation and all diseases arising from stomach troubles. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an all the year round medicine. Good for the whole family from the smallest infant on. It is the best life insurance. Sold by C. P. Champney, druggist. 50c and $1.00 bottles.

CARGO OF LUMBER

Brought by Barge Anna P Grover for Perrysburg Firm.

The largest shipment of lumber ever brought to Perrysburg is being unloaded at the yards of C. L. Koch & Co. in this place.

The shipment is the entire cargo of the barge Anna P. Grover, and consists of three hundred and thirty thousand feet of hemlock lumber of boards and bill stuff.

The large amount of lumber in this shipment indicates that the firm of C. L. Koch & Co., are ready to take advantage of markets and shipments for the purpose of being able to furnish their patrons everything that is desired, making it unnecessary to go to Toledo or elsewhere for lumber.

The sales of lumber during the past season in Perrysburg, have more than doubled those of any year previous which indicates that Mr. Koch is not only prepared to supply the lumber, but that he is selling at the right prices and making special efforts to please the trade in every manner. Such efforts are sure to please and the firm is deserving the success it is receiving.

BALLOON RACING.

French Aeronaut's Account of a Long Distance Contest Over the Mainland of Europe.

During the night we were busy trying to keep our equilibrium, going neither too high nor too low, and wondering where our rivals were, writes M. Godard, in McClure's Magazine. At seven o'clock next morning we were over Coblenz, and had already made 500 kilometers. At eight o'clock the influence of the bright morning sun upon the volume of gas in our big balloon carried us very quickly to a height of more than 4,000 meters. A few seconds later we were delighted to sight the "Centaur" but a little ahead of us, and running in a course parallel to ours. This was a race, indeed. All day we were able to travel together, each of us undergoing, in proportion to our volume of gas, the alterations of dilation and condensation. Little clouds, masking the sun, instantly reduced the volume of our spheres and compelled us to throw over ballast. When the sun came out again it warmed the great balls of gas and so added to the volume of dilation that several times we were compelled to let out gas in order to escape rising to a dangerous altitude. Late in the afternoon both balloons had risen to between 6,000 and 7,000 meters, which was quite as high as any of us dared to go. Before we descended to a lower level we saw the "Centaur" far below us, manipulating its guide rope along the surface of the earth. Suddenly our rival shot upward rapidly, and we saw no more of him. We were now in the neighborhood of Brestan or Posen, and we were made very sad by the disappearance of our ballast, of which only about 90 kilos remained. Night was coming again, but we were determined to stay aloft as long as possible. As we passed over the German-Russian frontier four shots were fired at us, probably by customs inspectors, who thought we might be smuggling. We heard the whistle of the bullets, but, fortunately, the "Saint Louis" was not hit. Just before dark we were making splendid speed; our instruments showed 70 kilometers per hour, due east. We sighed for more ballast. But now behind us we could see a tempest forming, with lightning and thunder. We had only 30 kilos of ballast left, and if the rain should overtake us our balloon would absorb thrice that weight of water, and we should be carried down to earth whether we wished or not, and probably in the most awkward of spots. We had no desire to descend in a forest, and so we began spying out, as best we could in the gathering storm, a clear space in which to alight. One appeared just behind a forest. M. Balsan pulled the valve rope, and despite the violence of the wind the "Saint Louis" came to the ground gently and with only five meters of dragging. Some peasants came running up, and we sent one of them for a wagon, while the others aided us in emptying the balloon of the remaining gas—only 1,300 or 1,400 meters cube were left out of the 3,000 with which we started—and by midnight we had arrived at a village. We were given milk and black bread to eat, and a hay loft to sleep in. Next morning early a good-natured gendarme roused us with the explanation that, as we had no passports, he was compelled to escort us to the police authorities in a near-by town. The police, amiable but firm, declined to let us go without orders from their superiors, and it was nine o'clock that night before the telegraph brought permission for us to return to Paris.

INSIDE JAPAN.

Flat Fights Preface Death Struggles But There is No Wife-Beating.

In spite of these qualities of easily aroused antagonism, of pride and Spartan ideals, the Japanese are an essentially gentle race—more so than the Anglo-Saxons. Broils in which one man hits another are of rare occurrence; blows are generally the preface of a death struggle, says Alan K. Benjamin, in Ainslee's. The woman may often suffer from the prevailing ideals of morality, which are yet much lower than ours, but there are few wife-beaters, and the home atmosphere is almost always outwardly peaceful. It follows that a little true politeness on the part of the foreigner goes a long way, and almost invariably meets with a warm recognition; you rarely appeal to the Japanese in vain. They are as quick to respond to an act of real kindness as they are to resent an act which has a tinge of arrogance. Our government allowed several transports with returning volunteers to stop at Yokohama, and so hundreds of American soldiers visited that city and Tokio. One of them hired a bicycle and was taking a ride about the streets of Yokohama when he ran down an elderly Japanese man. The soldier rang his bell several times, but the Japanese apparently paid no attention to it, and the American found himself promptly arrested and taken to court, where he was fined ten "yen" (five dollars). He protested that he had done everything possible to avert the accident, and asked why the man made no attempt to get out of the way. The policeman then told him that the man was blind. The soldier looked dazed for a minute, then felt in his pocket and brought out a ten-dollar bill. "Here," he said, "it's the last I've got, but he can have it," and he turned it over to the blind man. The Japanese were deeply touched, and that same day a delegation of policemen hunted up the soldier and gave him back his fine.

THE JEWS IN GREECE.

Full Rights as Citizens Are Denied the Race in King George's Realm.

Whatever may have been the connections between Greeks and Jews in the past, the points of contact between them at the present day are comparatively few, for the Jewish population in the kingdom of King George appears to be not only small, but stationary. Its numbers, which in 1891 are given at 5,792, are returned in 1901 as 5,800, or a net increase of eight in ten years. Smallness of numbers need not affect the natural interest which English Jews feel in their Greek brethren, and particularly English Jews, for it was largely owing to the efforts of the British government that Greece became an independent kingdom. Moreover, the fact that the Ionian islands were a direct gift from this country to Greece intensifies the interest of English Jews in the fate of their brethren in that part of the Greek kingdom. It is true that the handful of Greek Jews have no legal or state made disabilities like the Jews of Russia and Roumania, says the Jewish Messenger. In principle the fullest equality obtains. But in practice, even so ardent an apologist for the Greek government as Dr. Belli has to admit that it would be "preposterous" to argue that "the Jews actually enjoy in Greece full rights."

When the premier of a country publicly declares that all Jews ought to be put back 50 years it is idle to contend that the Jews of that country are emancipated in fact, whatever they may be in name. The truth of the matter seems to be that in emancipating the Jews the Greek authorities, like the authorities in France, were considerably in advance of the sentiment of the people as a whole. This popular backwardness found brutal expression in the ritual excesses some years ago—excesses which drove Jews away from the Ionian islands, where they had once enjoyed the fullest liberty under the British and whose effects have even now not entirely vanished. It seems as though the long enslavement of a people tends to crush out its ideas of liberty and to make of it a tyrant when it in turn becomes free. The case of Roumania, perhaps, is a much more striking illustration of this than that of Greece. Still, the decorations conferred by the Greek government on several Jews may betoken the development of a better feeling toward the Jews. In the ordinary course of things it would only be natural to anticipate the evolution of the ideas of a people like the Greeks in the direction of liberty of thought and freedom of conscience.
