Toledo Theatres

Attractions at the Valentine Theatre, Toledo, Week of December Twenty-Eighth.

"The Consul for the Defense" is the title of a new play which will be presented at the Valentine theatre Monday and Tuesday, December 28th and 29th. It is described as an American drama and is from the pen of Henry Irving Dodge. It is said that "The Consul for the Defense" possesses a remarkably strong story of human interest and one that is expected to hold the attention of the audience from start to finish. The scene of the play is laid in New York City and while it is in no sense a preachment it exposes in a mild degree the chicanery and the corruption of some of the political dealings of the day. The leading man is Frederick Perry, one of the best known and most popular young actors on the New York stage.

Everyone is familiar with the fun provided by the Newlyweds and their baby in the Sunday Comic supplement. Indeed the expression "The Newlyweds" has become a part of our common speech in describing those just married. Their experiences as pictured in the comic supplement are recognized as the most legitimately funny of any represented in this adjunct of a Sunday newspaper. This series of cartoons has been made the basis of a musical comedy entitled "The Newlyweds" which is one of the foremost successes of the season. It will be offered at the Valentine theatre Wednesday, December 30th.

Clyde Fitch's foremost success in the fun-making line, the farce "Girls," will be offered at the Valentine theatre Thursday, December 31st. This is really a fortunate circumstance for it is rare that a farce in New York, Chicago and Boston is given a road tour so early in its life. This satirical piece remained in New York all last season and in the summer and this fall met with equal favor in Chicago and Boston. The public and critics have conceded that this is the most legitimately funny farce the stage has developed for seasons. It is a satire throughout, though its story and plot is consistent and dramatic. The piece is rollicking fun from start to finish and the whims of femininity are made the target of good natured jesting.

Probably no book dramatization of recent years has enjoyed the popularity that has attended "Brewster's Millions," George Barr McCutcheon's remarkable tale, which comes to the Valentine theatre Friday and Saturday, January 1st and 2d. The story of the play tells how Montgomery Brewster, inheriting a million dollars from his grandfather, while given a house-warming and surprise party by his friends, who shower congratulations upon him, is informed by a solicitor that his mother's brother has left him a fortune of $7,000,000 on condition that he shall spend the first million within a year. He must spend it in some legitimate way, by investing it in some business, or using it for his enjoyment and that of his friends. Above all, he must not disclose his purpose. He accepts the condition, and his effort to make himself penniless in so short a time, makes up the fun that follows.

WOULD FUSE WITH THE ORIENT.

Writer Declares That Out of Action Would Come a Better Race.

In many respects the orientals are our antithesis, and if our ideals, principles, and institutions are more beneficent, we are under obligation to present them. There should be no collision between the Mongol and the Anglo-Saxon races, but instead there should be a fusion. Out of this fusion there should emerge a better race. We can learn much from the various people of the orient which would be beneficial to ourselves, and while we receive from them we are able to contribute the one great principle of the Anglo-Saxon race, namely, liberty. Every race that has come into power and prominence has stood for some great, overmastering idea. That for which we stand and which is the great touchstone of our great national life is liberty. It is for our nation, as the great western wing of the Anglo-Saxon race, to join in the extension of this principle, and also to bear the message of peace.—Mason S. Stone, Commissioner of Education of Vermont, in Leslie's Weekly.

SAYS OXEN LAID OUT LONDON.

Swayed as They Plowed, Hence the Crooked Streets.

Lord Avebury has suggested an explanation of the crooked streets which have puzzled so many visitors to London. Presiding at the first of a series of addresses on the history of this city, he said it was remarkable how the London of to-day bore traces of its ancient history.

Between London and Westminster there were formerly open fields divided into long strips of an acre each. These strips, he said, had a tendency to curvature owing to the way in which the oxen walked while plowing the ground. An instance of that was seen in the curious way in which Longacre curved. Several of the strips abutted at right angles on Hyde park, and the fact that they did not end in one line suggested a reason for the singular irregularity of the line of houses forming Park lane. The dip in Piccadilly, added Lord Avebury, was the site of the old stream, part of which formed the Serpentine.

Saved His Life and His Rupees.

During the great flood at Hyderabad, India, a native banker, overtaken by the sudden rush of water, made his way onto a mound, where he was quickly isolated. The water rose and the banker's legs were covered to his knees. "Fifty rupees, fifty rupees," he shouted, "to anyone who will save me!" When the water reached his shoulders he was shouting: "One thousand rupees!" When enveloped to his neck, with death staring him in the face, he yelled: "Help, help. All that I have will I give to anyone to save me!"

Shortly after the water began to recede. When once more he was covered only to his knees an offer of rescue came; but the banker, plucking up his courage, cried: "Keep off, keep off! I will not give a rupee!" and succeeded in making his escape free of charge.

Vells Please the Grocer.

"These vells the women folks are wearing, all nalled down tight under their chins, are a great boon for us all right, all right," said an East End grocer. "Women, you know, are the greatest people on earth to come in and sample things. They'll take a taste of this and a taste of that while you're wrapping up something for them, and the first thing you know they've eaten up about a nickel's worth of stuff.

"We can't say anything to a woman, particularly those that are good customers. Now we don't have to. I haven't seen a woman taste anything in the store for a month or so. Those vells are put on so tight that the only way they can sample anything would be to take it through a straw."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Japanese Footfall.

One of the odd things which strikes one in Japan is the footfall; so different from the sound made by shoe leather, filling the ears in say a crowded station in Tokyo with its European looking trains, platforms, ticket offices, bookstalls and other familiar objects!

The musical clicking noise of the wooden sandals or clogs, which are worn out of doors by all classes of Japanese and which are raised above the ground at varying heights, according to the state of the roads, is one of the most characteristic bits of detail of the country, and any picture afterward recalled to the mind has this clinkety clink, clinkety clink, as a running accompaniment.

Suited Him.

"Say, boss, where am I?" asked the recently deceased negro, as he woke up. "You're in heaven," remarked the attendant. "Dat so? Den where's mah wings and harp?" "What you get is four brass buttons and a red necktie." "Glory, glory!"

Impossible.

"I don't care about a church wedding, Myrtle. Do you? Wouldn't you rather be married right here at your own home?" "Yes, but I am afraid we can't do that, Aigy. I'm quite sure it's forbidden in the lease."
