Prosecutor Dunipace, Surveyor Metzger and the Board of Commissioners were at Walbridge, Wednesday where they consulted with the officials of the H. V. Ry. in regard to the $260,000 improvements which the company contemplate making at that place in the very near future. To make the desired changes in their tracks it will be necessary to abandon a public highway at one point, build another road and change the course of a ditch, therefore this meeting with the county officials to reach an agreement as to how it shall be done. The company has all its right of way, and work will be started in a short time.

He leaves to mourn his loss a widow, one daughter, Mrs. Harmon Grolle, six grandchildren and one great grandchild, beside a wide circle of friends. Funeral services were held Wednesday at 10 o'clock at the Lutheran church of Dowling, Rev. Otto officiating.

When a scandal occurs in the smaller cities and towns, three things usually happen in a newspaper office in the place. First, somebody comes in and wants the editor to write up the horrible details in full and "give it to them." Second, interested parties call on the editor and request him to say nothing about the affair. Third, the editor is charged with being a coward for not writing it up in full for fear of hurting his business. Now, what are the facts? The editor usually hears all the truth about the incidents, and more, too. He suppresses a good share of it or says nothing at all about it because he does not care to advertise the town in that way, and out of consideration for the parties, while if he considered it from a business standpoint he would not neglect anything of a sensational nature, as that would mean business rather than a loss of it.—Lexington (Miss.) ## SEED POTATOES

Examine Your Seed Potatoes for Dry-rot.

Potatoes in Ohio, both early and late varieties, suffered severely in 1909 from premature dying due to Fusarium blight, which causes dry-rot in the tubers.

The Botanical department of the Ohio Experiment Station wishes to warn growers so they may avoid the losses which might otherwise come from planting diseased seed potatoes.

The disease shows as dark or black spots running through the potato from the stem end. Usually the stem end of the potato, when diseased, will show a sunken appearance around the stem. In any case the dark spots show in the tubers when cut across near the stem end with a knife; in cases of bad infection, the black spots may run half way through the tubers. Where the infection is slight, it may occur only near the stem end. Of course, some of the tubers may be free from spots, and these are safe for planting on new land, but the disease lives over in the soil as well as in the tubers.

Where the disease has not penetrated more than one-third of the length of the potato, the half of the potato toward the bud end may be used for seed with better promise. In such cases, the knife used for cutting should be dipped in a solution of corrosive sublimate, formaldehyde or carbolic acid after cutting diseased tubers, and before cutting others.

The point of this warning is to enable growers who have potatoes on hand, to examine at once and note whether their own seed is safe to plant. The usual seed treatment for scab, etc., will be very useful to kill dry-rot spores which may adhere to tubers, and may be applied to the healthy portions after separation from the diseased parts of potatoes.

How to Use Badly Diseased Potatoes.

Another reason for advanced warning, is the possible loss to the potato grower who has many bushels of stock on hand. These which show disease may be used to some advantage in feeding live stock after cooking. They have a fair value in this way for pig feeding.

Buying Seed Potatoes.

If seed potatoes are to be bought, it is advisable to secure stock from northern points. Doubtless many northern potato regions have less disease than the more southerly ones. We have found very little in samples received from Red River Valley and from some parts of Michigan. The same may apply to northern New York and northern New England. In all cases purchasers should examine stock if possible before receiving it. Any good knife, good light and a careful operation will insure success. Samples of seed tubers sent to the Experiment Station will be examined without charge, and reports made to the sender. Address: Botanist, Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio.

There is to be a radical change in the method of obtaining marriage licenses if the House passes a bill which has already passed the Senate. The bill is intended to stop elopements and the marriage of girls under age. A dispatch from Columbus has this to say concerning the bill: "The senate has passed the Lawyer bill making it necessary for the bride-elect to be in probate court when application is made for a marriage license. This is to stop elopements and the marriage of girls under age. Now licenses are issued without the appearance of either of the contracting parties in court."

THE DUST QUESTION

How are the People of Perrysburg to Combat it.

Every summer the people of our handsome little village are called upon to suffer unwarranted inconvenience and annoyance on account of that incompatible nuisance, just common dust, and every summer the question arises, "How are we to combat it?"

Especially is this true with the residents along Front street and the business places on Louisiana avenue. Everyone is familiar with the construction of the driveways on these streets and everyone knows that within a few hours after each rain the immense traffic on these thoroughfares have ground the surface to the depth of an inch or two into a fine, gritty, substance that each passing gust of wind catches up and hurls in a blinding mass broadcast over everything.

To such an extent is this the case that people who reside on our beautiful Front street are not permitted to enjoy any degree of comfort, the fine scenery and balmy breezes afford them by the historic old Maumee river.

If they attempt to utilize their verandas as a cool retreat they are soon driven indoors by the clouds of dust set in motion by the hundreds of automobiles which pass over that street every day. It is almost impossible to leave doors or windows open as the accumulation of dust would soon ruin carpets, curtains and other household effects.

So, while our people have within their grasp one of the most desirable summer locations situated anywhere, they are not permitted to enjoy its attractions because of this one unpleasant feature.

The same is practically true of the business places on Louisiana avenue, where they are compelled to keep their doors closed and their display of vegetables, etc., on the inside.

Now, the question arises, what is the most practical way of abating this nuisance? Several plans have been suggested to the Journal, but whether any of them are feasible or not, we are not in a position to say.

In many villages the size of Perrysburg the sprinkling is done by the municipality itself. In other cases, some individual has canvassed the business men and citizens and secured pledges of payment of so much per week and have procured their own equipment and conducted the work.

But it is the opinion of the Journal the most feasible and cheapest plan would be the use of oil. To make it a success it would be necessary for each resident to do his share, for it has been exemplified that for a few to oil the streets in front of their homes does not protect them when on each side the dust is allowed to go unheeded. It would not prove very expensive if all interested would combine and work together to this end and the Journal is ready and willing to do all in its power to further the cause.
