IS IT HOT ENOUGH FOR YOU?

With the mercury at ninety, as it hangs out in the shade, And you wish with longing heart, that winter might have stayed; Don't let me make you feel like cussin' till everything is blue. To have some bloomin' idiot ask, is it hot enough for you?

You've been working in the garden trying hard to kill the weeds, While the sweat upon your torrid brow is standing out like beads, And you realize quite plainly that Old Sol is working too, As you hear some darn fool neighbor ask, is it hot enough for you?

You've toiled beneath the boiling sun from early morn till night, And smothered many cuss words, just 'cause you thought it right; You feel you are completely cooked like an oyster in the stew, And from somewhere comes that voice, is it hot enough for you?

Do you suppose when you are dead and gone to a warmer clime, And are looking back with longing hearts to the good old summer time. That in this land of fire and heat, where it smells of sulphur, too, You will hear that same voice asking, is it hot enough for you?

—BERT.
