

THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS.

Harold Bell Wright, who is said to be the most popular of the younger American novelists, with the assistance of Elsbury W. Reynolds, has made a dramatization of his most widely read novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills." Its initial production in Toledo will take place at the Lyceum theatre for an engagement of one week, commencing next Sunday matinee.

Mr. Wright is a man with a mission and a message—he is a story teller, and when the story ends we begin a better life "along the sunlit fields where the light lingers even when the sun is down." We start this journey of "the higher trail among the hills" because the gifted writer puts into our hearts the benediction of a renewed faith in men and women, a vital love for truth and beauty, and a deathless hope in the good outcome among the mysteries brooding where our Pilgrim-way meets horizon shadows. He calls his story a very old story. This is true indeed, for have not Good and Bad been in ceaseless conflict since the dawn of human life? Here is a play worth seeing in this day of multitudinous and insipid drama. Here is a plot. The movement is ever onward—there are no retrograde and meaningless eddies in this stream of happenings. The current of events seizes you and takes you on and on, and when the end comes you are glad and sorrowful—glad because so good a play ends as it does, sorrowful because it ends so soon. HIRAM COLLEGE.

The last 15 minutes now comes and the Sophs make one last effort to free themselves. New enforcements arrive but these are soon overpowered and at last the college bells ring, announcing the close of the rush. The judges then award the honors to the Freshman class.

This is one of the big events here. College is closed for the day and the faculty act as judges while all the remaining students and most of the townspeople turn out to witness the rush. In the afternoon the Freshmen girls entertained the boys—in honor of the victory they won—at the home (and woods) of President Miner Lee Bates. And, oh my, what a glorious time we had—hot dogs, slam sandwiches and what not.

My class numbers nearly 100, which is slightly (?) different from the class of 1912 of dear old P. H. S. Perhaps you will be interested in the fact that Hiram won their first football game Saturday when they beat Bethany 7-0 in a very hard fought game.

With best wishes, I beg to remain,
Your sincere friend,
E. A. CLAY.

SAVED BY HIS WIFE.

She's a wise woman who knows just what to do when her husband's life is in danger, but Mrs. R. J. Flint, Baintree, Vt., is of that kind. "She insisted on my using Dr. King's New Discovery," writes Mr. F., "for a dreadful cough, when I was so weak my friends all thought I had only a short time to live, and it completely cured me." A quick cure for coughs and colds, it's the most safe and reliable medicine for many throat and lung troubles—grip, bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, quinsy, tonsillitis, hemorrhages. A trial will convince you. 50 cts. and $1.00. Guaranteed by C. P. Champney.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

VANISHING NATIONS

after considerable thinking and digging in my memory that I discovered I was looking upon the scenes that had been described in one of the first "yellow backs" I had read when a boy of about twelve years. Those rocks brought back to my mind the wonderful and harrowing hardships endured by the hero of that remarkable tale, and I am quite sure that the writer of that book had either visited this portion of what is now New Mexico or that he had read enough about it to know his location, for it was up in those hills and rocks that the Mexican villain with a band of blood-thirsty Indians had chased the hero and the fair and charming lady, whose escape was due to the knowledge of those same hills by the faithful guide, and it was just up there where they sought escape and turned loose a reservoir of water that had accumulated from a mountain stream and as it poured down into the ravine it drowned and thus wiped out the villain and his Indians. Oh, it certainly was a thriller and it all came back to me after I saw those hills and rocks. When I told Rider about it and was trying to interest him in the story he removed his old job pipe in which he had been smoking alfalfa and asked me what I had been drinking up at the Alvarado at Albuquerque. By-the-way, he was smoking ten-centers when we started from Toledo on the way west.

Passing on through New Mexico we entered the state of Colorado, and employed the beauties of that mountainous route through to Denver, where we remained long enough to tour the city and hear the customary tale of the citizens of that beautiful and progressive city and listen to them expatiate upon its wonderful climate and its millions in gold and sunshine. They claim that the sun shines on both sides of the street all day long and part of the night. That the only pure air that is permitted to hover over this beautiful world was made especially for Denver. In fact, Denver, in the estimation of a Denverite, is the only city in the world that is really worth while. They beat Toledo for brag and bluff.

It is true that Denver is a fine city and situated about half way between the east and west it has a very fine position, and there is much business here, but the prices of living are so high that one must have a flying machine to get up to them, and a common mortal like Wood county people, who have been regularly dining on substantial food like meat and potatoes, is likely to find himself heart-broken and financially busted after partaking of a few regular home style meals. Whenever they get a real life-sized potato in Denver they take a photograph of it and keep it as a relic to show their neighbors that they really had potatoes for dinner. They have the finest hotels to be found in any part of the Union, and everything anybody desires can be had—if you have the price and are willing to walk home. The next time we go to Denver we will take a few dozen potatoes in our grip, and sell them in Denver for souvenirs of a real agricultural country—Ohio.

The country surrounding Denver is remarkable in many ways. The scenery is worth starving a few weeks to visit. The Moffett road carries excursionists to the highest point in the world that is reached by a standard gauge railroad, and on that trip the tourist is transported in a few hours from the warm sunshine and geraniums to everlasting snows and ice, a perfect paradise for the artist and the lover of nature's wonderwork.

From Denver we went to Colorado Springs and found one of the most beautiful summer resort cities in the west. Living there is much easier on one's exchequer than at Denver, and one of the attractions is a flower excursion on the Colorado Midland road where the train takes tourists out over the mountains for the purpose of gathering wild flowers which are truly wonderful for their beauty. By trolley car we also went over to Manitou the charming town at the foot of magnificent old Pike's Peak. This resort town has many and varied attractions. The trip up Pike's Peak is worth the five dollars paid but the man with a weak heart will do as well to look up instead of riding to the summit. Although the cog road train goes but little faster than a slow "dog-trot" it frequently occurs that passengers find it necessary to get off at the half-way station and wait for the car to return. The air is so light that it is difficult to draw in enough to fill the lungs.

Driving up Williams Canyon brought us to the seven falls which seem like a stream of silver running over the rocks and tumbling down into the canyon. We passed the tomb of Helen Hunt, a noted writer, who went up into the canyon and obtained material for one of her books. It was here that she planned to have her remains interred after she had finished her work on earth and the place of her interment is marked by a large mound of boulders with her initials carved in the bark of an immense tree. She wished to be placed at rest in one of nature's beauty spots. We drank from the wonderful soda springs at Manitou, and were informed that if we stayed long enough and drank enough we would live forever, but most of us preferred to come back to Ohio, even though we might not live quite so long.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE VALENTINE THEATER, TOLEDO.

Week of October 14th, 1912.

The coming of Eddie Foy in a new musical success is an announcement that always arouses interest among theater goers. His engagement this year in "Over the River" will be one of the good things of the season when he brings his big company direct from a six months' New York success to the Valentine theater, Toledo, on Monday evening, October 14th. Mr. Foy has found in this new piece a role where he has full scope for his amusing methods. He is first seen as Madison Parke, a swagger New York clubman, who awakes after a night with "the boys," only to find himself in the embarrassing position of having been arrested and under sentence to thirty days on Blackwell's Island. In his anxiety to keep the truth from his wife, he plunges into a sea of prevarication and enlists all his friends to help him out. It avails him nothing, however, and the second act finds him in prison stripes doing the "lock-step" "over the river." His enforced absence from the domestic fireside has been explained to his wife as being a trip to Mexico. In the last act, which takes place in a Mexican garden party arranged by his wife in honor of his home coming, he is said to be better than in all the rest.

To assist in the entertainment, there is a "cabaret" scene in which a number of sensational acts are introduced, including the famous "Berlin Madcaps" and the "Texas Tommy" dancers.

Mr. Foy will be well worth a trip to Toledo to see.

A LOG ON THE TRACK of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause by toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Heschelmer, of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strong nerves, good digestion. Only 50 cents at C. P. Champney's.

New Case.
Arthur G., Alfred R., Alfred, Elbert and Mildred Williams, the latter three being minors, have brought suit against Elizabeth Thompson et al to set aside the will of Nancy M. Williams, deceased, which was admitted to probate October 3rd last. She died September 20th. She was the widow of Albert Williams. The grounds on which they ask for the order setting the will aside are that she was not of sound mind and was in ill health; that she was under restraint and was coerced; and that the requirements of the law in making wills were not observed.

Probate Court.
Henry P. Shanks appointed executor of the will of Nancy M. Williams, deceased.
