

LOCAL BRIEVES.

[From Morning Edition.] Mail is now delivered to the residents of Logansport by carrier from the Springfield office.

There was a small attendance at the regular weekly shoot of the Gun Club yesterday afternoon.

Chief of Police Schuchman is reported as resting more easily for the past few days than for some time.

The busy aspect of our streets indicates that the anxiously looked for revival of business is at hand.

The new building on the King corner is fast approaching completion and is a great improvement comparatively.

A large excursion of eight coaches returned through the city last evening to Jackson from the Dayton Soldiers' Home.

A first-class exhibition of cyclone collars would drive a thriving business in no very distant territory south of this city.

C. A. Miller, of the Arcade Tea Store, exhibits relics of the Washington C. H. cyclone. He has pieces of the slate roofs of both the M. E. and Catholic churches.

Charles Van Sicken, advance agent of the Tony Pastor combination, is in the city, billing the town very handsomely for his company, which shows at the Grand next Thursday evening.

The Seventh Day Adventists' place of meeting is in Roth's building, third floor, No. 47 West Main street. Meeting hours, Saturday, 10:30 a. m., and Tuesday at 7:30 p. m., Sunday, 7:30 p. m.

The loss in dollars and cents, occasioned by the tornado of Tuesday night, will hardly reach the figures first made, yet the damage is enormous and will require willing hands and generous hearts to replace.

Mrs. Eliza J. Richards, wife of Joseph Richards, one of the pioneers of Clark county, died at North Hampton, Thursday night. The funeral will take place from the family residence Sunday at 2 o'clock p. m. Interment at Fern Hill cemetery at 5 o'clock.

There will be divine services and preaching in the interest of the Reformed church in the lecture room of the First Congregational church, Center street, between High and Main, Sunday, Sept. 13, at 3 p. m., to which all members and friends of the Reformed church and the public are kindly invited.

Rev. Finley, D. D., of Montgomery, Ala., has resigned his pastorate at that place and will succeed Rev. Walker as pastor of the Pleasant Street Methodist Protestant Church of this city. Dr. Finley is one of the most popular ministers of the denomination, and may be expected to arrive in the city soon.

Rev. J. B. Walker, pastor of Pleasant Street M. P. Church, in obedience to an imperative call of the official board, is compelled, much against his own preference, to relinquish his ministerial charge in this city to accept his former position as college financial agent. The board having failed to secure an agent for this work, and his past experience and success, makes his acceptance of the position a necessity. He left last night to visit the eastern conference.

POINTERS FOR LEONARD.

INTERVIEW WITH A LEADING SPRINGFIELD PHYSICIAN.

On the Iowa Liquor Law—Prohibition as She Does Not Prohibit in Iowa—Saloons Remaining Open as if Nothing Had Happened.

[From Morning Edition.] Learning that Dr. H. H. Seay, of this city, had recently returned from Iowa, a Globe reporter called on him at his office yesterday afternoon to obtain his views of the working of the prohibitory liquor law in that state. The reporter found the doctor full of valuable information on the subject, and quite willing to impart it.

To the question, "Doctor, what is your opinion of prohibition as it operates in Iowa?" the doctor answered by saying: "I spent a number of days at Emmetsburg, the county seat of Palo Alto county, in the northwestern corner of the state, a town of about 1,500 inhabitants. While there I took every means in my power to ascertain from all the parties that I met, with whom I had opportunities of conversation, residents of the town and from all parts of the state, and I think I can say without any exaggeration that they universally said it was a failure. Many gentlemen said it was worse than failure. It had absolutely increased the sale of alcoholic liquors. In Emmetsburg I was informed that there were not less than five or six saloons in full blast—a town of 1,500 inhabitants. So far as I could learn there was no attempt made to enforce the law. Liquor could be bought at will. B. W. Stevens, of the firm of Stevens, Hering & Co., manufacturers of bank checks, desks and church furniture, of Charles City, Iowa, said that there was no enforcement of the liquor law in Charles City, that good and true men, in all business matters, would come before him as one of the grand jury, and he believed, he believed with reference to liquor. Mr. C. W. Cowles, of the North McGregor, Iowa, said that he believed that more liquor was sold there than ever; there were six saloons when the law was passed, and there are six saloons still, in full blast. At Charles City the proprietor of the Railroad ending house was the drinker in all cases. He would get a drink of liquor if I wanted one. He was the only man I met in Iowa that expressed any doubt as to a man's ability to get all the liquor he wanted. I met a party of gentlemen in camp near Ashtabula, Iowa, who had been there for more or less, in their tent, labeled 'Extract of Malt,' purchased in Emmetsburg, Iowa, known to be good Milwaukee beer. A young gentleman, name unknown, a fine-looking young fellow, said that he believed the young men were drinking more liquor than before, so far as his acquaintance went; that beer was a little more difficult to obtain, but whiskey was as easy, and they took whiskey when they couldn't get beer. I was asked to drink in Emmetsburg, and was assured there was no difficulty in getting all we wanted. I didn't drink any myself, and wasn't in a saloon, but didn't hear any doubt expressed as to the ability to get anything we wanted. A Mr. James Hefley said that he, his father, and his brothers had voted for prohibition, and that they were not in the town as the town was concerned, the gentleman remarked to me that he believed there was more drunkenness than before the passage of the law, as the chain gangs were a large or larger. Where he was from, 'I don't know.' 'Did you see any of the larger cities, Doctor?' the reporter asked.

"No, sir. There were conversations I had traveling on the cars, and at the hotel tables at Emmetsburg. I was told that the condition of affairs was worse in the larger towns than in the smaller ones. Some men said to me, I don't remember who, in a little village, where there was a strong temperance element, that he believed that the law had accomplished some good. When I went into the state, knowing it to be a prohibition state, I resolved to see how the law worked. I investigated fairly and without prejudice. I wanted to know the truth. I didn't meet a single man, addressing strangers and traveling commercial men, who thought prohibition prohibited in Iowa. I tried to get into the best class of men that I could get to talk with, or I would pick them out at the hotel table, or in the office, well-dressed men, and quite a number of them said they had voted for prohibition; an out of the number I talked with only two were men who said they suspected of being drinking men, or who admitted that they were drinking men."

"Doctor, do you expect to vote for Dr. Leonard?"

"Dr. Seay is a gentleman well known to the citizens of Springfield. His opportunities of observation have been ample, and the truthfulness of his statements cannot be questioned. He gives the names and addresses of several gentlemen with whom he talked, and if anybody doubts that he has correctly reported them, there is an easy way of ascertaining the truth."

A REMARKABLE FLAGSTAFF.

But it Cannot be Erected Over the Springfield Postoffice.

[From Morning Edition.] The Globe-Republic some time since had an account of Capt. S. H. Bolus' intense desire to get the Springfield postoffice. The objections to him made by his fellow democrats was that he had too many sons, cousins, aunts, etc., whom he would provide for in the postoffice to the exclusion of other worthy democratic families in this neighborhood.

This objection seems to have been sufficiently strong with the present administration, and the petition of the worthy captain, if one there was, joined a large family of similar democratic documents in the waste-basket beside the ponderous desk of the ponderous president.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, on the heels of this evident disappointment, hands the Bolus family down to posterity in this wise:

Capt. S. H. Bolus, of Bowlingville, Clark county, called upon the Plain Dealer on Thursday. The captain is a polished gentleman of the old school. He is the father of eight boys who average six feet each in stature, all of whom are democrats and voted for Grover Cleveland for president. The captain has two grandsons who average the same height as his father, and a son-in-law who rises six feet two from the ground. The last three named also vote the democratic ticket. Take them all in all, the Bolus democrats, if formed into a pole, would fly a democratic flag sixty-six feet skywards.

Attempted Burglary.

An attempt was made to effect a burglarious entrance at the back door of Ford & Burn's saloon on West Main street, Friday morning. The burglars had broken the glass in the door and pushed the bolt back far enough to reach in, but finding there was another heavy lock on it, and perhaps being frightened when they had proceeded thus far, they desisted. The burglary must have occurred after 12 o'clock at night, as the bartender was at the saloon scrubbing out, as late as 12.

Report of Bar Committee.

The committee on rules of the Clark county bar, which was appointed at the beginning of the present term, has had several meetings and prepared a report which will be ready to submit to the members of the bar on Wednesday morning, 14th inst., at 9 o'clock at the court house. Every member of the bar is requested to be present to hear this report and take final action thereon.

A WATERY GRAVE.

The Lamentable Fate of a Young Lady Well Known in This City.

[From Morning Edition.] The following is taken from the Chicago La or Ocean of the 11th inst. "Lake Michigan is a bad boat of water for a person to be in on a small boat unless he is well acquainted with its waves and currents. It is a saying that even fishermen use. On Friday afternoon John F. O'Rourke, of St. Louis, and Miss Mary Larned took their boat home at the foot of Twelfth street. They started at 5:25 o'clock, and were out of sight. Since then they have not been seen, and their friends, though they have not given up all hope, think both have been drowned.

Miss Mary Larned is the daughter of A. H. Larned, secretary of the Frost Manufacturing Company, at the corner of Twelfth and Canal streets. She is a very pretty young woman, 26 years of age, with blue eyes and a golden, cloud-like hair. She is 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighs 110 pounds. She is a very fashionable dresser, and when leaving home wore a red and brown plaid dress, and carried a mantle. Her associates are of the best society and she was extremely popular with all who knew her. A little over a year ago she went as piano instructor to the ladies' seminary at Kirkwood, Mo., and returned home a few months ago. While there she became acquainted with Mrs. O'Rourke, and the two were quite intimate. When Mrs. O'Rourke was corresponded regularly. Mr. O'Rourke, the lady's husband, is a real estate attorney doing business in St. Louis. He is 35 years of age, 6 feet 1 inch in height, and rather slim, with very dark hair and eyes, and a smooth face. Sometimes he writes letters for his wife when she is busy, and thus he came to know Mr. Larned and the family in Chicago. A few months ago business brought him to Chicago and he made a call, and everyone was impressed with his agreeable manners. In July Mr. and Mrs. O'Rourke were guests of Mr. Larned for two weeks, their three children being in Kirkwood. Mr. O'Rourke was dissatisfied with St. Louis and thought of moving to Chicago to enter upon his profession here, and his wife was greatly pleased with the idea. On last Wednesday Mr. O'Rourke arrived in Chicago and took room No. 603 at the Sherman House. The next day he spent in looking around for a location. In the afternoon he met Miss Larned for her mother and went home to supper with them and spent the evening with the family. Friday afternoon he called at the boat-house of John Ferreux and looked over the boats, being fascinatedly fond of boating, having three boats at his home. He then called on Mr. Larned, and, finding the family going down town, went along with them, and then proposing a trip on the lake went there with Miss Larned. At the boat-house he selected a boat 16 feet long, 3 feet 6 inches beam, with green and brown bulwarks, and obtained a special license for the boat. Miss Larned said that they would take a row in the boat as the air was so good. Once on the lake he was seen to be an expert, and rowing around the Twelfth street pier went directly south. This was the last seen of them or of their boat. The boat was made by the boatman as far as Cheltenham, and the South Chicago police have continued it. There was a slight fog on the lake after they left, and it was very dark, but there was neither wind nor wave. It is feared that they went out in the fog, though some think they might have run into a safe part and will soon be heard from. Mr. O'Rourke's baggage and mail boxes as if it were left by a person just going out for an hour, before he could reach the room occupied by Mrs. Brown and the child. When the door of that room was reached the stubborn woman was notified that the officer would break the door unless she would admit him, but she refused, and compelled him to force an entrance. By this time the boat was surrounded by a large crowd, through which the woman and the child were taken on their way to the court house. Judge White had been notified, and he as well as the police and the attorney, Messrs. Spence and Arthur, were on hand. Brown is an elderly, sharp-faced man, who seemed interested in the result of the case. The mother is also elderly. They were divorced in the Clark county common pleas court on July 23, 1878, at the suit of Mrs. Brown, on the ground of extreme cruelty on the part of the old gentleman. In the case referred to the court awarded Mrs. Brown $1,800 alimony and the custody of the child in question and her sister, Alice Gore. The husband was awarded the custody of the child in question, and extreme cruelty on the part of the old gentleman. Who Owns Lilla Dora? THE TRIBULATIONS OF A SUN-DERED FAMILY.

A Sequel to Gearing's Galivanting—Writ of Habeas Corpus Issued—The Sheriff Resisted by the Child's Mother—Interesting Case at the Court House.

Mention was made in Friday's Globe-Republic of a little trip to Dayton which was taken by a man by the name of T. F. Gearing, with Mrs. Hannah Brown and her daughter, and of Gearing's subsequent arrest for overdriving the horse. The matter took on a new phase last evening when Thomas Brown, who resides at McKay, and is the father of young Miss Brown, who accompanied Gearing on the trip, instituted proceedings to obtain possession of the child from his divorced wife. A petition in habeas corpus was filed in the county clerk's office late in the afternoon, reading the alleged unlawful detention of the child by her mother, and asking the court to compel her surrender. As was his duty, County Clerk Rabbits issued a writ of habeas corpus, directed to the sheriff, and that officer in company with Deputy Broadfield, proceeded at once to the residence of Mrs. Hannah S. Brown, No. 9 West Third street. News of their coming had no doubt preceded them, as the house was locked up when they got there, and everything was quiet. The sheriff knocked repeatedly, but received no response. Still having reason to believe that Mrs. Brown and the girl, Lilla Dora, were within, he broke in the door, only to find his way impeded by three inner doors, which he was compelled to break open, one after another, before he could reach the room occupied by Mrs. Brown and the child. When the door of that room was reached the stubborn woman was notified that the officer would break the door unless she would admit him, but she refused, and compelled him to force an entrance. By this time the boat was surrounded by a large crowd, through which the woman and the child were taken on their way to the court house. Another Foraker Club Formed Among the Colored People Last Evening.

[From Morning Edition.] Last evening fourteen colored men gathered in a room over Hong Kee's Chinese laundry, on West Main street just west of Factory, and formed a union Foraker club. The preamble of the constitution adopted states that on account of the lack of harmony and unity of action among the supporters of Foraker, the present club is formed that all may kiss and make up and join in the good work with harmonious enthusiasm. The scheme was worked up by A. C. Cowan, all for glory. The club rewarded him by making him president. The remaining officers elected were: Vice president, John Thompson; secretary, James Fletcher; treasurer, Harry Brown; executive committee—S. Sutton, Jesse Davis and John Smith. Those members disappointed in their aspirations for the presidency of the club will probably form another one this evening.

Mayor's Court.

In the mayor's court yesterday Frank Wagner was fined $10 and costs, and sent to jail for five days for assaulting Wm. Myers. For allowing his premises to remain in a filthy condition Mike Welsh was fined $1 and costs.

The case of Mrs. Pritchard, charged with appropriating crockery and glassware from Smith's restaurant received the attention of His Honor, who sent Mrs. Pritchard to jail in default of $200 bail, to await the action of the next grand jury.

A dog owned by Frank Shrimpt hit a little girl by the name of Ryan yesterday afternoon. Policeman Bass was summoned to shoot the dog, but declined to do so, believing he had no right to. This is the third time this dog has bitten the same little girl, and the child's mother thinks it is growing more vicious.
