MRS. HULLINGER HOME AGAIN.

A Plucky Woman Returns From Her Sojourn in the West. Mrs. Wm. Hullinger, the woman whose husband skipped with Mrs. J. J. Young, an account of which appeared in this paper, returned to this city from Terre Haute, Ind., where she had successfully tracked her husband and his new wife. She was very well cared for while in Terre Haute, the city police and the prosecuting attorney doing all in their power to assist her. Upon her arrival here she went directly to the chief of police, and stating the facts of the case, asked his assistance. This was willingly granted and Mrs. Hullinger, accompanied by her cousin, Mrs. Routhahn, of that city, went to the jail, where an interview was had with the prisoner. She reproached him for his conduct toward her, and he, undoubtedly shaming, seemed to be in a distressed state of mind. But all Mrs. Hullinger wanted was that he should be forced to contribute toward the support of their three children, one of whom will be remembered, came very nearly being killed by a runaway team, some time ago. Unable to obtain a settlement at the jail, the party were taken to police headquarters where, after much trouble and a great deal of fuss on the part of the defendants, Mrs. Hullinger was given all their household effects in this city. Hullinger even signed an order under his assumed name, "C. Lee," to the Keys manufacturing establishment, payable to his wife, for the sum of $100, which had often intended sending her money, but he was kept from so doing from the fact that his whereabouts would then be made known. Upon her departure from Terre Haute, Mrs. Hullinger gave her husband track him down if he ever ceased to support his children.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Jefferson Club Pays its Tribute to the Memory of the Deceased President. The Jefferson Club met at its rooms last night to take suitable action on the death of Vice President Hendricks. W. S. Thomas, the president of the club, was in the chair. On motion the chair appointed a committee of five on resolutions of respect, consisting of Messrs. Spence, Zimmerman, H. S. Showers, Constantine and Dr. T. R. Potter. After consulting together, the committee, through its chairman, Mr. Spence, asked leave to report to the meeting tonight, saying that suitable resolutions could not be drawn without some preparation. He then continued to speak with much feeling of the political and private life of Gov. Hendricks. He said he had met him as a delegate at the memorable Charleston convention in 1859; that they all felt that the action of that convention would determine whether or not the Southern states would remain in the Union. Hendricks did not appear to be either a strong or a weak supporter of Douglas man, yet he seemed to lean to Douglas. He showed himself at that time to be a man of cool, calm judgment, and not easily excited by passion. He then spoke of the congressional campaign of Cox against Shellabarger in this district. It was at this time that the people of this county first came to know Hendricks. At this time they sprang to his aid and Cox was defeated. It was difficult at that time to get a speaker who would be effective and at the same time not excite the passions of the opposition. Gov. Hendricks was the only outside speaker invited to assist Cox, and he was selected on account of his cool judgment in times of excitement. He then spoke of his having been governor of Indiana and chief of the next highest office in the State. Ex-Mayor Constantine then spoke of the position of Gov. Hendricks at the recent Chicago convention. Gov. Hendricks had twice been a formidable candidate for the nomination for president. At the Chicago convention the Indiana delegation, of which Hendricks was chairman, was sold for McDonald for president. After Cleveland was nominated a meeting was held to canvass names for a suitable nomination for the vice presidency. It was the unanimous opinion of that meeting that Gov. Hendricks was the man for the place, yet they did not feel that he would accept because he had positively declined. But when his name was mentioned the convention arose as one man and shouted for Hendricks, and he made the sacrifice and obeyed his party's call. Mr. Zimmerman made some remarks on his political life as the younger members of the club would remember. The first they would remember of him was his speech as senator on the reconstruction measures advocated by him, which was that the southern states were not then and never had been out of the Union, and that they should be entitled to the same representation in congress as the northern states had.

HEAVY FALL. A Painter Tumbles From His Ladder and Breaks a Couple of Ribs. Joseph Mealy, a painter employed in decorating the interior of the new tea store in the Lagonda House block, met with a very serious accident yesterday afternoon. While working on the ceiling he lost his equilibrium and tumbled off the ladder, falling across a coal scuttle at the bottom. He rolled over, groaning with pain, and was unable to rise to his feet. Surgical assistance was summoned at once and examination proved that two of his ribs were broken, and that he was very seriously injured internally. When his injuries were properly attended to he was removed to his home, No. 33 Taylor street. Burr Oaks at the Grand. On Tuesday evening, Dec. 1, Burr Oaks will be present at the Grand. The following is from the National Republican: "Burr Oaks" opened before a good audience at Ford's Opera House last night. The play is of the emotional order, and is very similar in its construction to the "Silver King." It hinges on a supposed murder in which the wrong man gets the blame. Robert Oakley, a distinguished quack murderer, makes his escape, and after a varied life returns to find his estranged crime a delusion. The plot is nicely worked out and gives occasion to many striking and thrilling situations. Mr. David M. Murray, who assumed the title-role, is a clever actor, and made the most of his part. Miss Annie Rowley, as the heroine, looked and acted the part with excellent taste. The support throughout was reasonably good. The setting of the play is very handsome, some of the scenery being especially ingenious. The audience was thoroughly appreciative, as was manifested by the frequent applause. Seats now on sale at Carter's. A Quiet Wedding. Miss Josephine Basy of this city, was married on Thanksgiving Day to Harry Caldwell, of Indianapolis. Only relatives of the contracting parties were ticketed. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. P. Ross, and the happy couple left, after an 11 o'clock breakfast, for the groom's home in Indiana. They were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents, and were followed by the good wishes of a large circle of friends. Mason's Notice. There will be a special communication of the Grand Lodge, No. 10, on Monday evening next, Nov. 30th, for work in the E. A. D. By order of the W. M. H. VINAL, Secretary. Traveling a Luxury. Any one who has gone or returned from the east will agree that the great Pennsylvania route is in every particular the most ideal of any in this country, or in fact, in the world. If there are any inventions which go to make traveling a pleasure, the Pennsylvania railroad is sure to adopt them. The comfort and safety of its patrons is a matter of constant study with the management of the road, and this is probably the reason why its trains are so loaded. The limited express which makes the fast run each way every day in the year between New York and Washington, is a fine example of what might be rightly termed the poetry of travel. Luxurious cars, with dining facilities equal to any hotel in the country, spacious drawing rooms, furnished with the latest books, writing desks, paper and everything convenient, make travel over the Pennsylvania Company a pleasurable pastime.
