MR. R. C. JENKINS, one of the largest manufacturers of tin plates in Wales, is reported as having concluded to move his works to this country. William Williams, the Welsh "tin-plate king," is also contemplating the same step. There is just one reason to keep them from coming. It was stated by the London Economist some time ago. "The recent pronouncement of popular opinion in favor of the Democrats," said the Economist, "is likely, then, to have the effect of preventing any great movement in the direction of the establishment of new home manufacturers." Undoubtedly the Welsh manufacturers would have moved hither before this had it not been for the "triumph of lying" of last fall's Congressional elections. With the exposure of the falsity of the "reformer's" ante-election charges against the McKinley law, and its rapid growth in popular favor since its real effects became apparent, the foreign manufacturer has again begun to despair of free trade's success in next year's campaign, and once more takes up his abandoned plans of removal to the United States. American Cobdenism alone can prevent his coming.

THE pearl button industry was started in this country about fifty years ago, but, unfortunately, did not thrive, and those who invested their money in the enterprise had to succumb to adverse circumstances, for they learned to their loss that they could not make or sell as good articles as those that were imported equally as low. Many attempts have been made from time to time to revive the industry, but they all proved fruitless up to 1890, when the present tariff law was enacted. Impressed with this view of the surroundings, numerous pearl works have been erected during the last nine or ten months in and around New York and Brooklyn, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, which are now in full operation with no less than 1000 hands employed, earning good wages—from $17 to $22 a week—and skilled workmen and cutters of fine work from $24 to $30 a week.

OUR English friends are bewailing the falling off of the American demand for British wire, and are endeavoring to find reasons for it. They point out that only a few years ago the imports of the rod billets, ton and finished wire exceeded 180,000 tons annually, but at present the trade is comparatively small, and is every year growing less. The quantity of iron rods imported into the United States during 1890 was 55,427 tons, while the imports of wire and wire roping were but 4,611 tons. The conclusion they reach is that the American wire manufacturers are supplying the demand of this country.

BOROUGH BUDGET

GLEANINGS BY THE LOCAL CORPS OF REPORTERS.

WHAT THE SCRIBES SEE AND HEAR

The Tricks to Which Hungarians Resort to Escape the Tax Collector and His Officers. Hide and Seek.

Policeman Conners and Deputy Tax Collector Keebel visited a Hungarian boarding house a few days ago to arrest delinquent tax-payers. The woman who runs the house was on the look out for the officers and when they approached the house she locked the door. She kept the officers out until the boarders secured hiding places and then she opened the door with a smile and "Come in, Mr. Blaesman."

"Where are your boarders?" asked Conners.
"Boarders all gone workin', Mr. Blaesman," was the glaring falsehood.
Conners started to go up stairs, but the woman attempted to stop him, saying "Vat forn you vant up dera. You come down, mine boarder gone."
"Yes, you boarder gone, but me go up and see," said Conners, as he pushed the woman aside and walked up stairs.

Arriving in one of the upper rooms Conners searched all the closets and looked under the beds, but no Hun could be found. In one corner of the room several bundles of straw stood on end. Conners poked his cane into them as he passed and was surprised to hear, "Hold on, Mr. Blaesman; I come, I come."
Conners was forced to smile as he saw a Hun crawl from behind the bundles of straw. "Vat forn you do dera?" asked Conners, with a grimace.

"Oh, no, just have some fun," the Hun answered as he arose to his feet.
The policeman started down stairs with the man, but when half way down he turned back and asked the prisoner if any other boarders were upstairs. The fellow assured him most solemnly that there were none, but Conners returned to the room. More in a spirit of curiosity than anything else the officer lifted the cover of a small trunk, in which he found, packed as snugly as a cat's satchel, a full-grown, taxable Hungarian. The two men paid up.

The Public Schools.

The following figures, showing what a grand old state Pennsylvania is, have just been sent out by the Bureau of Statistics. Read them, they are interesting: The state has an area of 46,000 square miles and a population of 5,239,014. It takes $11,902,961 to run the public school system of Pennsylvania one year, of which $6,954,790 goes to the teachers and superintendents. These teachers constitute an army of 23,917, the males numbering 8,191, the females number 15,726. The number of pupils enrolled in the public schools is 1,027,017, within a few thousand of the school enrollment of New York, notwithstanding its much larger population. There are 15 theological schools, with 666 pupils; one law school; five regular medical colleges, having 1,404 students; one homeopathic school and 23 colleges of liberal arts, having 5,938 pupils. The female colleges are 12 in number, with 1,394 scholars.

Will Be With Us.

This evening we will gladly welcome "O Flynn in Mexico," and it will be some satisfaction to all of us to know that this is an entertainment that comes with the strongest endorsement of press and prominent public men, that originality will shine supreme, that the performers have been selected from the best material, and that the play from a dramatic, comic and singing standpoint has been commended by the ablest critics of the world. Nothing in the line of stage dressing and handsome decoration has ever been attempted, this is on a par with this beautiful production, and we can only say that those who neglect to avail themselves of the opportunity to witness this marvelous performance will miss the greatest treat of the season.

REFUSED TO TALK

CONVICT BARDSELY BROUGHT AGAIN INTO COURT.

HE WAS WANTED AS A WITNESS

But Declined Politely to Answer Any of the Questions Put to Him—Said He Had Been Maligned.

PHILADELPHIA, Sep. 15.—The spectacle of a convict ex-city official appearing in court as a witness and a number of prominent and influential citizens as defendants is very rare indeed.

When John Bardseley was brought to court yesterday, handcuffed and in charge of Yester Cassidy, to be used, if possible, in aiding justice in getting a hold on other wrongdoers, it was generally expected he would act the part of a clam, and so he did.

That the District Attorney was greatly perplexed at his refusal to talk was fully attested to by that gentleman this morning.
In opening the proceedings before the court the District Attorney narrated the fact that his assistants had repeatedly called on Bardseley in prison to obtain testimony, but never were successful.

The District Attorney then announced that the Commonwealth had subpoenaed Glendinning & Sons, Auditor-General McCamant, William H. Livessy, cashier in the State Treasury, who was not present, and the officers of the Farmers' and Mechanics', Third National and Seventh National banks, selecting those banks, the District Attorney concluded, in which there could be no question as to knowledge as to whose money Bardseley was being paid interest upon.

Here the name of John Bardseley was called. The clerk offered to swear him, but he refused. He said: "The public have been taught to believe that there is no value in my word whatever. I have been maligned and I have got to-day more than I can bear. My self-respect, however, in view of all that has been said and done, will not permit me, under any circumstances to give testimony in this court."

Judge Fell reminded him that he could refuse to answer questions, but he only insisted that he would not be sworn. The District Attorney insisted that he should be sworn.

Judge Gordon—Mr. Bardseley, it is your duty to take the oath administered to you. You are a citizen subpoenaed here regularly, and it is your duty to take the oath. The other matters will be determined when they are reached.
Mr. Bardseley—If your Honor says so I will take the oath, which he did.
"Do you know Mr. McCamant?" "I decline to answer any questions at all. I have simply been sworn out of deference to your Honor, because you think it is my duty."
After a number of other questions had been asked Bardseley, all of which he declined to answer, he finally said: "I have declined to answer any questions. My mind has irrevocably been made up and no inducements under the circumstances can prevail upon me. It is useless for Mr. Graham to further distress me."

Bardseley was then dismissed from the stand.
The Glendinning case was next called, and after a lengthy examination Robert Glendinning and George H. Huhn, co-accused in the $10,000 suit each for court, on the charge of having aided and abetted Bardseley in his conversion of the public money. Bail was entered in their behalf.

The cases of the three bank presidents were then taken up.
Mr. Graham said it was a question in his mind if the presidents could be indicted, as the law of conspiracy did not cover the case, and he wanted the opinion from the judges sitting as to whether the presidents of these banks could be indicted for paying interest.

"I submit to the court," said Mr. Graham, "that this question as presented in my own mind is one of immorality and not of criminality, and if the court agrees with the thought in my own mind I should feel it my duty to recommend that no further action be taken and that no warrants be issued, feeling that there is not sufficient in the law of conspiracy to warrant an arrest."
After the court had retired for a space of ten minutes they returned and read their opinion, in which they decided that no action would lie as against the person paying interest.

Suit Against the Renfrew Company.

BOSTON, Mass., Sep. 15.—Suit has been brought against the Renfrew Manufacturing Company of Adams, Mass., and other defendants by H. C. Hurbut and W. W. Crofts. The suit involves about $350,000 and arises from the claims of the bondholders of the Renfrew Company, that they are entitled to the proceeds of certain insurance policies on the property of the Renfrew Company, which was burned March 2nd, 1891. It is also contended that certain securities in the hands of some of the defendants are invalid.

Not Human Bones.

NEW YORK, Sep. 15.—Coroner Schultz, in company with Dr. Weston, visited the Morgue last evening to investigate the bones found in the dump at the foot of Vesey street, where the debris from the Park place ruins were being dumped. Upon examination they were found to be beef bones and not human ones, as at first supposed. They are probably bones from the beef used in Peterson's restaurant.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Meeting of the County Superintendent's Institute Held To-day.

County Superintendent Weiss and Superintendent Patterson, of Pottsville; Esler, of Ashland; Miller, of Mahanoy City; Ditch, of Tam-cum, and Freeman, of Shenandoah met at Pottsville this morning to make preliminary arrangements for the teachers' county institute, to be held in this town during the week commencing December 14, next.

It was decided not to divide the institute this year, but the superintendents and principals of the High schools will hold separate meetings to discuss subjects of particular interest to their respective branches.

There will be exhibits of school work from all parts of the county.

The day instructors will be Col. Francis Parker, of Normal Park, Ill.; Dr. Thomas M. Balliet, superintendent of public schools of Springfield, Mass.; Hon. Thomas B. Hausher, of the Kutztown state normal school. There will also be a day instructor on drawing, but no selection has been made yet.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Walker, Prof. James McAllister, of Philadelphia, and Dr. E. O. Lyte, of Millersville, will also be present.

For evening entertainments there will be engaged a college quartette, the Olin Torbert concert company, or the English hand-bell ringers, Marshal P. Wilder, the humorist, and George Kunnan and Dr. James Hedley, of Ohio, the lecturers.
