HAS TWO HEARTS.

A Physician's Report on the Most Remarkable Case of William King.

William King, the negro who has two hearts and is able to control the pulsations of either at will, and who occasionally excites the medical associations of the Atlantic coast by making an exhibition of himself, has been examined by Dr. C. A. Jackson of Pittsburgh, who reports as follows:

"The man has two distinct hearts, connected only by the larger blood vessels and a very elastic pericardium. He has the peculiar power of moving either of these two hearts independently and can hold one up under the ribs while the other is let down into the groin, where it can be felt pulsating even more plainly than when in its natural position. He can stop one or both from beating for a period of one minute and probably longer, but he has been told that to extend the time beyond that limit would probably endanger his life. The stoppage of either heart silences the pulse beats on the corresponding side, but does not affect the other. If both are stopped at once, no pulse beat can be detected in any part of the body.

"The left heart is the larger of the two, being about the size of a coconut, which is very large for a man of King's size. The right one is no larger than a good sized goose egg.

"When one heart is down in the flank and the other in normal position, they are separated by a distance of about 14 inches. As they lie ordinarily in the chest they are only about two or three inches apart.

"The most remarkable thing about King's case is the fact that each heart appears to be complete in all its details and furnished with sufficient blood for use on its own side of the body.

"In some species of lower animals there are two distinct hearts, but in them the right side sends blood to the lungs, while the left does the work for the general circulation of the whole body."

Buried Alive.

President George T. Angell of the American Humane society has sent the following to the legislature of every state: "It is well known to the American press that many persons—and how many no one can tell—have been buried alive. The father of the undersigned came very near being buried alive, being declared by his physician dead, and all preparations made for his funeral before he could give visible signs of life. The object of this petition, which I hope you will cause to be properly presented, is to call public attention throughout our entire country to this important subject, and I take pleasure in sending a marked copy of it to the editors of every American newspaper and magazine north of Mexico, asking their assistance."

The Bishop's Laboratory Beer.

The laboratory that supplies Bishop Fallows' home brewed nonalcoholic beer is working overtime in order to keep up with the demand. The drink, as described by a connoisseur, tastes like old fashioned "yarb tea," and appears to be a preparation of roots, herbs, barks and gums, such as the grandmothers of the present generation used to give to "clean out the system" after an attack of boils, carbuncles or spring fever. There is a general feeling that Bishop Fallows would not spring any unwholesome or unrighteous beverage on a trusting community, and the Home saloon is doing a tremendous business.—Chicago Tribune.

Buskins were high boots made of velvet or other cloth and worn by ladies and by ecclesiastics when celebrating the rites of the church.
