CHARTER NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made to the Court of Common Pleas of Jefferson County before Hon. John W. Reed, a Justice thereof, at the Court House in Brookville, Pa., on Thursday, April 1st, 1904, at the hour of two o'clock p. m. of said day by H. B. McCullough, A. Hemphill, W. G. Bullington, B. E. Taylor and Matthew Hutcheon and their associates, under an Act of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, approved the 29th day of April, 1874, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Incorporation and Regulation of Certain Corporations" and the supplements thereto for the Charter of an intended Corporation to be known as "the Brookwayville Agricultural and Driving Park Association," and to have and enjoy all the rights and privileges provided for by Act of Assembly and the supplements thereto, the object and purpose of said Corporation to be the encouragement of agriculture, horticulture and the breeding, raising and training of a higher and better grade of horses, cattle and other domesticated animals.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Eat sparingly and as Life Wanes Eat still More sparingly.

That most men dig their graves with their teeth has seldom been pointed out more forcibly than is done in the Century, entitled "How to Live Long." The threescore and ten limit to human life is pronounced a fallacy. Death from old age, occurring at seventy-five or eighty, is a misnomer. Comparative physiologists, we are told, have set the natural years of man at 100 even sometimes at 120, and the reason why the overwhelming majority fall short of normal life is comprised in one sentence—we all eat too much. He, then, who would live to be old, retaining sight, hearing and some digestion, not relinquishing the power of healthy enjoyment, has but to follow a simple rule. Eat sparingly. Refrain from clogging the system by an oversupply of food. Never entirely satisfy the appetite, and make it a habit occasionally to omit a meal or two altogether. "If I were to assign any one thing as especially conducive to long life from a study of the habits of centenarians, it would be semistarvation," says one authority quoted, and the example is cited of one Luigi Cornaro, who, having lived the pace that kills, amended his ways when death threatened and so reorganized his enfeebled body by a life of temperance and restraint that he lived to be 100, although the doctors had given him up at forty. In middle life, from thirty-five to forty-five, according to Dr. Tracy, there comes a waning of the powers. The effects of overindulgence in eating or drinking are no longer vigorously thrown off as in youth. If the fact is not recognized and the same habits are kept up as heretofore, there is trouble ahead. But if the individual adopts a new regimen of diet, diminishes his meals and regulates his existence as becomes his soberer years a sort of rejuvenation follows, and if at the second climacteric, occurring somewhere between sixty and seventy, there is a further pull up in the food supply, regulated by the slackening powers of assimilation, a hale old age is extremely likely to ensue.

HEALTH RULES.

- A clean and cheerful house makes a happy home.
- Rise early, retire early and fill your day with work.
- Fragility and sobriety form the best elixir of longevity.
- Cleanliness prevents rust; the best cared for machines last the longest.
- Water and bread maintain life; pure air and sunshine are indispensable to health.
- Enough sleep repairs waste and strengthens; too much sleep softens and enfeebles.
- Cheerfulness makes love of life, and love of life is half of health. On the contrary, sadness and discouragement hasten old age.
- The mind is refreshed and invigorated by distractions and amusement, but abuse of them leads to dissipation and dissipation to vice.
- To be sensibly dressed is to give freedom to one's movements and enough warmth to be protected from sudden changes of temperature.
- His Self Sacrificing Disposition. "There isn't anything my boy Willie won't do to oblige a friend if he likes him," Mrs. Hockatus was saying. "We had a leg of lamb the other day for dinner, and Willie ate till I thought he'd burst, but when he went out to play ten minutes afterward a neighbor's boy told him they were going to have roast goose for dinner at their house and asked him to go and eat with him. Willie didn't want to be uncivil, so he went along, and just as sure as I'm sitting here he pretended he was hungry and ate more of that roast goose than the other boy did!"—Chicago Tribune.
- Easy Going Butcher. The Kansas City Journal tells of a Kansas man who went to a rural butcher shop in Kentucky to order a porterhouse steak. "I have just started in on this beef," said the butcher, "and I won't be down to the porterhouse until about 2 o'clock." His method was to lay half a beef on his block and begin at one end and cut along until it was gone, serving his customers with pieces all the way from the hoot to the neck regardless of their preferences.

Difference in Quality

There is as much difference in quality in spectacles as shoes or clothing, but after all the essential part is to have them fitted to the eyes. Racking, wearing headaches, blurring or fading of the sight, inability to use the eyes comfortably for close work, tiring pains in or over the eyeballs, inability to withstand strong light—are all warnings that the eyes need care. I will have all the appliances needed for good eye work and will be glad to meet just such at the following places:

Reynoldsville, Imperial Hotel, April 19th, 1904;

Summersville, April 14th, and American House, Brookville, April 15th to 18th.

THE PARACHUTE MAN.

His Feelings as He Soared Skyward and Plunged to Earth.

"Come on! The band's all ready!" I was met with a roar of applause as I ran down the hotel steps. The band blared in salute and the crowd opened up for me as I hastened. The parachute was stretched out from the straining balloon. As the man with me snapped the hooks on the ring he showed me how to pull it when cutting loose. He was the excited one. I was in a semistupor. A bitter indifference filled me as I looked at the ugly swaying monster which was to bear me to influence or death. "Let her go." With a cleaving of the air and a rush of sound like the coming of a cyclone the balloon shot upward. I ran for the bar, grasped it and soared. I tried to swing up on the bar, but the rush of the ascent straightened me like an iron rod. I thought my arms would be pulled out. A sickness came over me, comparable to the effect of the start made by a high speed elevator. Then the motion became more easy and I swung up on the bar. I was accustomed to gazing down from heights and I felt no fear as I stared at the fading crowd. I could see them waving hats and hands; could hear the band playing; and was conscious of a pleasant dreamy sensation and of a steady, easy rising from the ground. I ventured to bend a "crab" and make a few "ankle drops." It was as easy as when I was only a few feet from the ground. I glanced down again. The crowd appeared smaller and seemed to be walking away from me. I had commenced to drift. Now was the time to cut loose. I wished that I might stay where I was—taking chances with that limp bag of a parachute did not look safe. But it had to be done. I caught hold of the rope, braced myself on the bar and gave a short, hard pull. Whish—my breath left me! For the first time fear—dreadly fear—entered my heart. A jerk that nearly unseated me, and I was again sailing pleasantly through space. I ventured to essay a few additional feats, as the ground seemed to more closely approach me, and then I commenced to calculate as to the manner in which to strike the ground. Like many other problems, it settled itself. I struck it feet first in a cornfield, was dragged along and scratched up and came to consciousness in the arms of my new manager, who was alternately cursing me for getting killed and blessing me for having saved his skin and the $450.—Outing.

Economy.

"You've cut down my allowance," she said. "Yes," he admitted. "I've been spending most of my time at the club recently, and I can't pay board in two places." "Then you'd better stay home," she said, and he did. But presently there was the old complaint. "You've cut down my allowance again," she said. "Yes," he admitted. "I'm spending my time at home now, and my company ought to count for something." Then she didn't know whether to advise him to go back to the club or not.—Chicago Post.

Knowledge.

Knowledge ought to bring us happiness, whether it brings us money or not; for knowledge is life, and no man lives in this age who has not knowledge; for ignorance has neither life nor happiness more than comes to that which grazes in a field.—Schoolmaster.

Be neither ignorant nor careless with respect to the future.—Virgil.

Reading His Own Works.

I only once heard Thackeray allude to his works and that in a sero-comic spirit, which amused both him and us. "I was traveling on the Rhine," he said (in company no doubt with "the Kicklebrys"), "and entering one of the hotels on the banks, exhausted and weary, I went into a library and threw myself on a sofa there was a book on a little table close by, and I opened it to find it was 'Vanity Fair.' I had not seen it since I corrected the proofs, and I read a chapter. Do you know it seemed to me very amusing?"—Dean Hole's "Memories."

Time and Money.

Whistler, on the witness stand one day, was asked the price he had obtained for a certain picture. "One thousand guineas," said he. "How long did it take you to paint it?" "About a day and a half." "And do you mean to tell the court Mr. Whistler, that you have the audacity to charge 1,000 guineas for the work of a day and a half?" "No, sir; I ask it for the knowledge of a lifetime."

It Didn't Work.

"This'll be good for a hundred anyhow," said young Sow His Wild Oats to his pal. "Every young fellow needs a stake when he is of age, so I'll send this telegram collect to the old man: 'Dear Father—I am twenty-one today and broke.'"

So Unsentimental.

May—Jane behaves like an old married woman already. Maud—Why, you can't get her to go anywhere without him. May—No; but she can call him up without kissing the phone.—New York Times.

Did you ever think that rents, or rental value was as important an item of value in a building as the materials entering into the construction thereof, and that rents can be insured? We can write you a policy on the rents of your building in the same company and at a lower rate than the building. It would pay you to investigate Rent Insurance.

G. M. McDONALD, Resident Agent.

ON PROMENADE

Clothing is always in evidence on promenade. You can tell them by their perfect fit, their swing, vim and "go." You can tell the wearers by their well-groomed, prosperous appearance. Yet you don't have to be very prosperous to own a Clothing Suit. They cost only from $10 to $25. Surely you can find the figure that fits you in that price range. But whatever you pay, you are sure of getting all wool fabrics, the latest style and a perfect fit. The workmanship is the same in all Clothing Suits, irrespective of price. The model shown in the illustration is the "Newport." Come and look at it—try it on and see how becoming it is. And get one of our other books at the same time, it's free.
