OIL IN JEFFERSON COUNTY.

Reported That a Twelve Barrel Well Has Been Struck.

It has now been proven beyond the possibility of doubt that there is oil in Jefferson county. But whether it exists in paying quantities is another question. In years gone by there has been much speculation on the subject, and a great deal of talk. Several wells were drilled in search for oil, but they were all reported to be dry holes. Some people believed that some of these reports were untrue. And some persons expressed a belief that one or two, or more, of these holes were not as dry as they were reported. And it is positively known that one well near the Clarion river made a good showing of oil. It was afterward destroyed by fire. How much truth there was in these stories, outside of what related to the one well, we know not. Some who knew the facts are dead, and the knowing ones who are alive won't tell.

But the last few weeks have demonstrated the presence of oil in the north end of the county. Two wells were drilled within about a mile and a half of Sigel, and both are producing oil. One is reported to be about a seven or eight barrel well, and the other is a little better than that—probably good for ten or twelve barrels.

This discovery of oil was made by the Jefferson Gas Company, when sinking a gas well. So far the find is not a very rich one. There is no cause for excitement, and we will wait for further developments.—Brockville Democrat.

Among a number of letters of condolence that E. T. McGaw and family received after the death of Jay McGaw, was the following from a former teacher, Mrs. Margaret Dalby Loewenworth, who now resides in Boston, Mass.:

"We are very, very sorry to hear of the great grief and heavy loss that has come to you. In such sorrow as yours must be there is little to be said to alleviate the pain; yet we want you to realize that we are sorry with you in this time of grief.

"From my association with Jay, as teacher and pupil, I have always had the highest regard. In all my experience in the school room, I have had no other pupil more reliable, trustworthy or satisfactory than Jay. It was always a pleasure to meet him, in class as out of class. We, of course, feel that he should have been allowed to live and continue his student life, but how much he knows now in the great school where a 'thousand years' are as but a day,' where he is under the Great Teacher, the Great Physician. It must be a great joy to you to remember how truly good he was; I am sure it is to us."

A Double Menstrue.

A good story is told of a famous English engineer. An attorney went to him when he first began his career to ask him an opinion as a civil engineer. After the opinion was given he inquired as to the fee and was told it was 25 guineas, which he accordingly paid. Some years later, when the civil engineer had acquired a reputation and been made a fellow of the Royal Society, the same attorney went up to him for an opinion, and when he had received it said, "I remember the last time I was here I asked your fee, and you said it was 25 guineas, and so I have brought a check for that amount." The engineer looked at him and asked him if he knew what F. R. S. meant. The answer was: "Why, certainly. It means fellow of the royal society." "Yes," said the engineer, "and it means also, 'Fees raised since.'"

Human Nature.

I don't like to talk much with people who always agree with me. It is amusing to converse with a man for a little while, but one soon tires of it.—Curly.

Fishy.

Mother (reproachfully, to her small son)—Jamie, where have you been all afternoon?
Jamie (uneasily)—At Sunday school, mamma.

Mother—Then how is it you are wet and smell so of fish?
Jamie (in desperation)—Well, you see, I've been studying about Jonah and the whale, and—well—I guess it came off on my clothes.—Harper's Weekly.

Lack of Perception.

"Dat dog o' mine," said Erastus Pinsky, "keeps on a-tryin' to whup ev'ry four footed critter dat comes down de road."
"He must be a fighter."
"No, sub. He ain't no fighter, but he don't seem able to recognize de fact."—Washington Star.

Chimney Stacks.

The broad brimmed straw and iron cappings which one sees on the chimney stacks in manufacturing districts are not there for mere ornamentation, for they serve an important purpose. On the opposite side of the stack to that upon which the wind may be blowing a partial vacuum is formed, down which the smoke would descend were it not for the brim of the cap blocking the way. A chimney stack without a brim on the top would discharge its smoke in huge gusts for some distance down one side.—Pearson's Weekly.

John Worshippers.

The Aro tribe, inhabitants of southern Nigeria, worship the "Long John." This is a jealously guarded circular pool of water to which sacrifices of human beings and animals are made. Each house has also its own private "John." The boys of this tribe on reaching a certain age are put through various tests of physical endurance, one of which is to run twice round the town, about four miles, without stopping.

His Bad Day.

"I was surprised," said the Rev. Mr. Goodman sternly, "to see you playing golf last Sabbath. I should think you'd do better."
"Oh," replied Hardense, "I usually do. I was in wretched form last Sunday."—Philadelphia Press.

Beaconsfield's Severe Critic.

The grateful affection which Lord Beaconsfield entertained for his wife, whom he always esteemed as the founder of his fortunes, is well known. She was in the habit of traveling with him on almost all occasions. A friend of the earl was dining with him, when one of the party had no better taste than to expostulate with Beaconsfield for always taking the countess with him. Disraeli fixed his eyes upon him very expressively and said: "I don't suppose you can understand it, B.—I don't suppose you can understand it—for no one could ever, in the last and wildest excursions of an insane imagination, suppose you to be guilty of gratitude!" On another occasion Beaconsfield described his wife as "the most severe of critics, but a perfect wife."

Odd Horse Feed.

"What do you think of feeding horses on goose eggs?" asks an Australian backwoodsman. "That was done by a party who were stuck up on the Adelaide during the wet season. The natives used to bring in canoe loads of eggs, which were broken into buckets and supplied to the horses."

Cautious.

First Burglar—Why not try to rob the house of that plutocrat? Second Burglar—Never. He'll make good by getting the money back from the poor people. Let's confine ourselves to the middle classes.—Life.

Misunderstood.

Lieutenant (showing party of visitors over battleship)—This is the quarter deck. One of the Party—Gee! I thought it was all free!—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Talents and Confidence.

A single talent man, supported by great self confidence, will achieve more than a ten talent man who does not believe in himself. The mind cannot work with vigor in the presence of doubt. A wavering mind makes a "nervous" execution. There must be certainty, confidence and assurance or there can be no efficiency. An uneducated man who believes in himself and who has faith that he can do the thing he undertakes often puts to shame the average college bred man, whose over-culture and wider outlook have sometimes bred increased sensitiveness and a lessening of self confidence, whose decision has been weakened by constant weighing of conflicting theories and whose prejudices are always open to conviction.—Success.

Expired.

The defendant, who was held on the charge of keeping a dog without a license, repeatedly tried to interrupt the evidence, but was hushed each time by the court. Finally the clerk turned to him.

"Do you wish the court to understand," he asked, "that you refuse to renew your dog license?"

"Yes, but!"
"We want no 'buts.' You must renew your license or be fined. You know it expired last month."
"Yes, but so did the dog."—Harper's Weekly.

Worth While.

Whatever adds in even the smallest way to the world's brightness and cheer is worth while. One who says an encouraging word to a disheartened neighbor, gives a look of love to a lonely one or speaks a sentence which may become strength, guidance and comfort to another does something worth while. It is always worth while to live nobly, victoriously, struggling to do right, showing the world even the smallest fragments of divine beauty.

His New Vocation.

"John's home from college?"
"Yes."
"What's he going to do now?"
"Well, 'twixt you an' me I think he's jest about decided to loaf around an' be one o' these here incomprehensible geniuses!"—Atlanta Constitution.

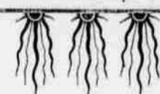

Horse Sense.

"Now, he's got what I really call 'horse sense.'"
"How, for instance?"
"He never bets on one."—Philadelphia Press.
