GOLDEN WORDS.

GENERAL W. T. SHERMAN. "Write down the very best things you can think or say of Gen. Hancock as an officer and a gentleman and I will sign it."

GENERAL U. S. GRANT. "I have nothing to say against Gen. Hancock. I have known him for forty years. His personal, official and military record is good."

JAMES A. GARFIELD. "The man who attempts to get up a political excitement in this country on the old sectional issues will find himself without a party and without support."

HON. ROBERT BELL. "Gentlemen: The principles of the Democratic party are far above the principles of the Republican party as the battlements of high heaven are above the middle of hell."

COLONEL JOHN HAY. "The Republican hands in this campaign that attempt to defile the private character of Gen. Hancock would only defile themselves. He was a soldier, a patriot and a man of unblemished character, and his private record is unassailable."

HON. CARL SCHURZ. "I shall certainly not attempt to deprecate the character of Gen. Hancock, and the great services which he has rendered to the country. He is a gentleman of irrefragable character, which I shall be sorry to see any effort made to discredit. As a soldier, he has shown signal bravery and skill in handling troops under difficult circumstances, and his name is identified with some of the most splendid achievements of the war. For all this every good citizen will honor him."

GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK. "A full vote; a free ballot; and a fair count." "Public office is a trust, not a bounty bestowed upon the holder. No incompetent or dishonest person should ever be entrusted with it."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

THE MORAL OF THE MAINE ELECTION. HOW IT IS FELT IN WASHINGTON. DISMAYED EMPLOYEES.

(From our Regular Correspondent.) Washington, D. C. Sept. 20th, 1880.

The Maine election has been much talked about during the past three days. Coming immediately after the election in Vermont, its result has been most depressing on the population of the Capital, to many of whom it means ruin.

While speaking at Du Quoin Sept. 3, Lyman Trumbull was asked by a colored man what was meant by the constitutional traditions and doctrines of the Democratic party.

He replied that it meant "Going back to economy, to simplicity in the government to an honest administration of its affairs," and that the traditions of the fathers mean "that honest simple, plain government of equality which was announced by Jefferson that all men are created equal and endowed by the creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

They congratulate themselves that they have saved the Legislature and their representation in Congress. Hannibal Hamlin will succeed himself, or be succeeded by a Republican in the Senate.

When I remember what efforts the Republicans made to carry Maine, I am the more surprised at the result. Logan, the loudest, if not the most eloquent, of the Grant triumvirate, has been on almost every stump in the pine-tree State; Conger and How, of Michigan, were there; Bob Ingersoll, who draws as big houses as Beecher or a circus, lent his assistance; hosts of other foreign and local orators, made the air vocal from the coasts to the Canadian border with their cries of warning, of defiance, of rage.

Three weeks ago their orators were recalled, and an order was issued to expend no more money where it would do so little good. Now the question naturally suggests itself, if we can do so without effort, how much better can we and ought we to do when the issue is to rescue the country from Radicalism, and to condemn nationally a National fraud in a party, and in one of its chief abettors.

SENATORS WHOSE TERMS ARE EXPIRING. We give below a list of twenty-four members of the United States Senate whose terms expire on March 3, 1881, each gentleman's party affiliation being indicated.

Of the whole number ten are Republicans, thirteen Democrats and one is a Conservative. The Senate consists of seventy-six members, of whom forty-one are Democrats, thirty-three are Republicans, one is independent and one is Conservative.

On party issues the Senate stands practically forty-three to thirty-three, and in order to reverse the majority, the Republicans must hold the seats they now have and gain six of those at present held by Democrats.

The following list, therefore, presenting as it does all the existing possibilities of the change, may be studied with interest: William W. Eaton, of Connecticut, Democrat.

Thomas Francis Bayard, of Delaware, Democrat.

Charles W. Jones, of Florida, Democrat.

Joseph E. McDonald, of Indiana, Democrat.

Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, Republican.

W. Pinckney White, of Maryland, Democrat.

Henry L. Daws, of Massachusetts, Republican.

Henry P. Baldwin, of Michigan, Republican.

Samuel J. R. McMillan, of Minnesota, Republican.

Blanche K. Bruce, of Mississippi, Republican.

Francis Marion Cockrell, of Missouri, Democrat.

Algernon S. Paddock, of Nebraska, Republican.

William Sharon, of Nevada, Republican.

Theodore F. Randolph, of New Jersey, Democrat.

Francis Kernan, of New York, Democrat.

Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio, Democrat.

William A. Wallace, of Pennsylvania, Democrat.

Ambrose E. Burnside, of Rhode Island, Republican.

Samuel Bell Maxey, of Texas, Democrat.

George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, Republican.

Robert E. Withers, of Virginia, Conservative.

Frank Hereford, of West Virginia, Democrat.

Angus Cameron, of Wisconsin, Republican.

up there, and stow that top-gallant studding-sail!"

They then understood the meaning of the apparition. This sail, which, when not in use, was lashed against the foretopmast rigging, had got adrift, and, spreading itself across to the foretopmast head, had assumed the weird and unearthly appearance of a ghost. So this puzzle for metaphysicians was solved.

Had I sent the men below and gone up and stowed the sail myself, as I was tempted to do, no argument would ever have convinced them that they had not seen the ghost of Mrs. Judson.

HE DID PUT IT IN.

A modest-looking lady entered the Enquirer office and inquired for a local. One of the staff volunteered his services, whereupon the young woman, with a hand that trembled slightly, presented him with a bit of paper, on which was written the following:

"Mr. John Smitherman is a happy man. His wife presented him with a bouncing ten-pound boy. Now he can sing 'Baby mine, baby mine.'"

The local read and blushed, whereupon the young lady blushed. Then after a brief silence she ventured:

"Will you put it in?" "Certainly," was the unavoidable response. "To-morrow?" "To-morrow."

"Sure!" "Sure!" "Good evening!" "Good evening!" That's all and here it is. We suppose, of course that mother and child are doing well. The young lady looked healthy.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SHE SNUBBED THEM.

A plainly-dressed little lady from San Francisco recently appeared at a California watering-place and was snubbed by all the ladies. She sent home for her best dresses and all her diamonds. After her trunks arrived she went to breakfast in a magnificent morning dress made by Worth, and profusely ornamented with diamonds, and her two little children were dressed in the height of fashion.

Everybody seemed anxious to make amends for the past slight, but she was extremely distant to one and all. She cut them this way for a week, and then packed her nine Saratoga trunks and sent them home, and resumed her plain and comfortable vacation clothes.

TANNER'S LATEST PERFORMANCE.

"That is what enabled him to do it." The speaker was Mr. Wilson McDonald, the sculptor, and he held in one hand a plaster cast of the head of Dr. Tanner, the faster, while with the other he indicated a prominent bump which phrenologists have treated as indicative of the will power.

Mr. McDonald made the cast on Saturday. Before taking an impression of the doctor's head he told him what the operation was, and asked him if he thought he could endure it.

"Has any one ever submitted to the operation?" asked the doctor in reply. "Oh, yes," said the sculptor. "All right," said the doctor; "if any one else has done it I can."

Mr. McDonald and his assistant then covered the doctor's hair and whiskers with a paste made of rice flour, which made them lie close to the skin. A collar of clay was built about his neck, and then the plaster was pressed all over his head, except his face. Quills were stuck into his nostrils for breathing through. Then they threw plaster into his face until it was covered an inch thick. The doctor was obliged to wear this helmet for an hour, awaiting the hardening of the plaster.

By placing the mouth close to one of his ears and shouting it was possible to make him hear, and he responded by a motion of the hand. Once he groaned. When the cast was removed it was discovered that the assistant had used too much vigor in inserting one of the quills, and had thereby ruptured a vein. The bleeding was not perceptible to the doctor until the face had been covered, and then it stopped the passage, reducing his breathing capacity one-half. Hence the groan.

At the expiration of an hour the plaster was cut from the head in sections. I found Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to be a most effectual remedy, and feel sure that the most stubborn cough and cold will yield to its healing influence. FRANK S. PRICE, New Orleans, Aug. 6, 1875.

MRS. JUDSON'S GHOST.

Dr. Wayland, in his "Life of Judson," has but feebly portrayed the scene of Mrs. Judson's funeral. Her decks were crowded by sailors of all nations, and every flag was at half-mast, while a long line of boats took ours in tow, and on arrival at the wharf the clergy of every denomination formed the head of the procession, which moved through the main streets, while all the shops were closed.

My recollections of Dr. Judson are of the most agreeable kind. Deeply afflicted as he was by his loss, he still maintained a cheerful demeanor, impressing all of us with love and veneration for his character. His life was a constant sermon.

But scenes like that of the death and funeral they had lately witnessed prepared the minds of the crew for the access of superstition. Soon after leaving St. Helena the mate called me suddenly in the night. The poor fellow's tone evinced that he was as much frightened as were the sailors, who, he said, had seen a ghost.

"A ghost, Mr. Bronson?" I asked. "What kind of a ghost?" "Mrs. Judson's, sir; we can all see it in the foretop."

"Pshaw!" "Captain, do come on deck, do, and you will see it for yourself," replied Mr. Bronson. Well, as I had never seen a ghost, I complied with his request, and walked into the waist, where the watch was gathered in stupefied amazement, they pointed their trembling fingers to the foretop, whispering in hushed voices, "there she is, sir—look at her."

Yes, there she was—a perfect figure of a woman in a white dress, with outstretched arms and ghastly face. I will confess that no little astonishment was combined with my incredulity. I had been awakened from a sound sleep to behold this vision with half-opened eyes. But in a moment I saw the cause of the singular deception.

"Boys," I said, "who will go with me into the foretop and speak to her?" There were brave men among the crew who would have gone aloft on my order to send down a royal yard, even if they thought the mast might go over the side, but now none of them would stir. At last I said, "Do you think it is my place to go
