LOCAL NEWS.

—Additional locals on third page.
—WANTED—Buy at THE BULLETIN office.
—Gas fitters were at work yesterday putting fixtures in the establishment of Lancaster & Rice.
—Fresh Oysters at Joe Steagala's saloon and restaurant, corner Sixth and Commercial.
—A farewell party will be given to Miss Maud Rittenhouse this evening by the Ideal League at their new hall.
—The eldest son of Capt. John King is confined to the house with fever that threatens to run into malarial.
—The worst piece of sidewalk, not only in Cairo but in the world, is on Ohio levee, from Fourth to Eighth streets.
—A well-written and interesting letter from our New Orleans correspondent will be found on second page this morning.
—Mr. A. H. Irvin has been kept from his office for a day or two by an attack of rheumatism in his right shoulder and arm.
—Mr. Max Hyman yesterday moved in to the house on Ninth street lately occupied by his father-in-law Mr. Moses Phillips.
—The Illinois Central company give their last excursion to Chicago next Tuesday morning. Fare for the round trip from Cairo, $7.50.
—W. G. Carey has moved his fine stock of groceries into the corner store on Sixth and Commercial. His stock had outgrown his former quarters.
—A force of men were at work yesterday replacing the old gas mains with new ones where needed on Washington avenue above Fourteenth street.
—The pole is up, the flag with the legend "Cleveland & Hendricks" floats in the breeze higher than any flag has ever before floated in Cairo, and the boys are happy.
—Hon. Jno. R. Thomas said to a friend yesterday that he "would beat Albright 1,500 votes." Betting men will make a note of it and leave their deposits at THE BULLETIN office.
—The Memorial Library building fence is in position, a very neat iron one, but hardly substantial enough to correspond with the general appearance of the grounds and building.
—Capt. Thos. Wilson is enthusiastic over the splendid meeting held at Murphysboro. Hon. Carter Harrison made a fine address, and the greatest possible interest was manifested. About nine hundred torches were in line.
—One more unfortunate, a dog with his foot cut off by the cars, was loafing around the Illinois passenger depot yesterday, friendless, but quietly depending to his own business, treading his hurt in the usual way.
—The willow flies arrived in Cairo yesterday morning in swarms. They are thicker than the locusts of old Egypt, but harmless. Their advent is a sign of—of—we have forgotten what, but it must be something.
—Mr. A. T. DeBaun's fine restaurant is in full blast and he reports business good with transients, and his place growing into favor with Cairo people, who have long wanted a place where ladies and gentlemen could go "after the opera is over," etc., and enjoy a quiet lunch on oysters and the trimmings. Advertisements of his business will be found under head of special notices.

—Ben Butler is now proclaiming: "The main issues on which I started out—the protection of labor by tariff for revenue only—will succeed whoever is elected." Ben is bound to get ahead of Blaine on the tariff question.
—Prof. Mason will commence his dancing lessons at the Ideal League hall, on Saturday, October 4th. Children's class at 3 p. m.; young ladies and gentlemen at 7:30 p. m. Prof. Mason will, on that day and night, fix the other day of attendance.
—The condition of Miss Maud Burnett is so much improved that her friends believe her complete recovery from illness is now a question of only a few days. Her fever is gone, but she gains strength very slowly, and it is not thought best to admit visitors for the present.
—Buder's jewelry store is now in the hands of the painters, paper-hangers and general beautifiers. Buder hangs around—a sort of living apology for being in the way, but in a few days he will be in full possession with better display of holiday goods than ever, of which look out for an advertisement to-morrow.
—At the auction sale of Pidgeon's real estate yesterday at M. J. Howley's office the highest bid obtained on the 12th street property was $1,800, and on the Washington avenue property, $2,000. As the owner considered these bids far below a fair and reasonable valuation, the property was withdrawn and the sale adjourned.
—Smith & Brinkmeyer having just received a complete stock for a first-class merchant tailor establishment, consisting of the best and latest designs of all the foreign makes of woolen cloths, cassimeres, etc., which they will sell at the lowest figures and guarantee satisfaction. Please call and have your first choice while the stock is full. su&th3w
—There was mighty poor picking in the police courts yesterday. A few colored ladies were fined for a free use of sharp knives and sharper tongues, and a colored man was tried for allowing his gang of shoats to run at large, contrary to the ordinance. He was probably fined and placed under bonds to keep the peace—or ought to have been.
—The strongest current probably on the Mississippi river may be found to-day at Bird's Point, where the water sweeps down past the various railroad inclines with a speed which renders it necessary for boats to work full head of steam while stemming it. Capt. Charles Baughman yesterday morning attempted towing a pile-driver to the Texas & St. Louis incline with the tugs Ariadne and Montauk, but was obliged to abandon the job, the current being too rapid to stem.
—One of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences that ever assembled in the opera house greeted "A Bunch of Keys" last evening. To say that everybody was delighted is mere mimicry; for there if no word in the English language to express the measure of gratification manifested by all who were fortunate enough to be present. The central figure, Teddy Keys (Flora Moore), was simply great, and was voted a favorite in her acting and singing as well as dancing. Her support was generally good throughout.

Real Estate at Auction!

This afternoon at 2 o'clock will be sold at auction on the premises a cottage and two lots on south side Thirteenth street, east of Poplar.

AFTER BEN. DEBAR.

John McCullough's Case Proves to Be Incurable Softening of the Brain.

His Existence Known to His Friends For Two Years—Greatly Aggravated by His Trip to Yellowstone Park.

The Great Tragedian's Rage at Being Forced Off the Stage By the Cancelling of His Engagement.

CHICAGO, ILL., October 1.—John McCullough passed a comfortable night at the Lela Hotel, where he has pleasant rooms overlooking the lake. When he was first made aware yesterday that McCullough's Theater was closed against him, he was the first greatly shocked and then a spirit of intense anger took possession of him which still continues, and all his acquaintances are avoiding him. His rage seems to be bearing him up for a time, and it is hoped that it may not assume a violent form. He wanders aimlessly about the hotel, and his restless, sunken eyes and haggard countenance plainly indicate his wretched condition, that of a mental and physical wreck. His terrible malady, "softening of the brain," is incurable and, may reach a dangerous and fatal crisis any day, and his friends are watching him carefully, although he is under no restraint. The affliction that now bears so heavily upon him came suddenly, on his return from

THE NOTABLE TRIP to the Yellowstone Park, as the guest of General Sheridan. The rough jaunts on horseback that were a necessity of the journey produced a physical disturbance which he neglected until his subsequent engagement in Philadelphia. He suffered such pain during a performance one night that he resolved to consult a physician next day. This man examined his patient and exclaimed: "Great God! it is a wonder you are not a dead man after acting last night in such a condition." This speech was

A VIOLENT SHOCK to the nervous system of the actor and preyed upon him until he became morbid over his infirmity. But his mental decay has been known to a few for two years, and his condition is now said to be entirely beyond any possible hope. He can never go upon the stage again, and efforts are being made to-day to induce the fallen hero to return to his relations in the East. He is possessed of considerable cash, and will be tenderly treated everywhere.

How the "Gladiator" Was Vanquished.

CHICAGO, ILL., October 1.—Hundreds of people wended their way to McCullough's Theater last night for the purpose of witnessing John McCullough's impersonation of the Gladiator, only to find the doors locked and the theater in darkness. Yesterday afternoon Messrs. Brooks, McCullough's manager, and Price, his press agent, waited upon Mr. McCullough for the purpose of suggesting that the engagement be cancelled. They found the veteran manager in the same frame of mind and in a few moments it was decided to cancel all dates and send the company to New York. Notices were accordingly sent at once to the theaters interested and to the printers, newspapers and bill posters. All this was done without consultation with McCullough, and it was decided not to break the news too suddenly to him. An hour or two later, Mr. Keene, the tragedian who had been taken into the confidence of Messrs. Brooks and Price, met Mr. McCullough on the corner of State and Monroe streets standing in the shade under a big umbrella and seemingly having no purpose in view. There was no rain nor sign of any. The couple greeted each other cordially. McCullough said he was going to rehearsal; that he had made a terrible break the night before; that he was infernally nervous, and that everybody was hounding him. "They say I'm a dying man," he said bitterly. "Bah! why don't they let me alone?" Mr. Keene tried to soothe him, and locking arm, the two proceeded toward the theatre. When the building was reached McCullough turned back, insisting that they were going the wrong way.

"You're going toward the dives," said Keene.

"Yes," replied McCullough, bitterly. "It seems to me that a dive is just where I ought to make for."

Finally he was persuaded to enter the theater, and the rehearsal commenced. It was soon seen that the actor was totally unequal to the role of the Gladiator. Then Richellu was tried, with the same result. At this point Mr. McCullough came on the stage and with Mr. Brooks delicately announced to Mr. McCullough the determination which had been arrived at. To their surprise he heaved a sigh, and said he was not well enough to play, and that nobody concerned should lose a cent if he could prevent it. They went to the hotel, and Mr. McCullough allowed himself to be put to bed. Many of his friends say that those who saw him on the stage Monday night had the last look at John McCullough as an actor. Mr. Keene says that to have contended the seas would have been to threaten his sanity and his life. It is admitted by the attending physicians and a few intimate friends, a though the latter only breathe it in a whisper, that he is suffering from paresis, or progressive paralysis, (the same affliction which has overtaken Mr. Storey, of the Chicago Times), and that the possibilities of successful treatment are rendered the more difficult by his self-will, and his determination to follow indulgences which can only aggravate the complaint.

A Converted Convict.

VANDALIA, ILL., October 1.—L. L. Claxton, a convict in the Chester Penitentiary, now here as a witness in the case of Kreps, the horse-thief, was, at his request, baptized by Elder J. O. Henry of the Christian Church. A large assemblage witnessed the immersion.
