

A Georgia Diamond

The Hon. Lucius L. Middlebrooks of Covington, Ga., is the proud possessor of a diamond which he found on his farm on Yellow river in the western section of the county. While walking over his plantation some months ago he discovered the pebble lying in the mud near the bank of the river. Picking it up and wiping the dirt from it, he found that it was unusually clear and transparent and having every appearance of the valuable stone it afterward proved to be. Accordingly he sent the stone to Chicago, where it was tested, cut, polished and set in a ring.

Strange

Isn't it strange that the boys who are such "devils" with the girls nearly always get homely wives?
