The rich who give freely take more than they give or they wouldn't be rich.

"What is the frog, anyhow?" asks the Washington Herald. Ask the sluff friend.

The alleged attempt to assassinate a San Francisco labor leader sounds like the dream of a rarebit fiend.

Hearst says he is through with the Democrats. The real Democrats were through with Hearst long ago.

So far as known the recent cold spell hasn't nipped any presidential booms, although a few of them show signs of ennui.

Some girls get married because they do not want to work any more and then learn that they never knew the meaning of the word.

Almost every mining camp in the country complains of a shortage of miners. Globe is about the only camp that has a surplus.

In Phoenix's latest murder case the prisoner has been thoroughly tried (by the press) and there is nothing remaining except the hanging.

The Atchison Globe wants to know what has become of the old-fashioned man who wore paper collars. Why, he's the same man who wears celluloid collars now.

The New York Tribune prints a long story in the Sunday edition on "Teaching the Child to Laugh." It is much easier teaching a child to laugh than how not to cry.

The El Paso Times kicks because there is no public place for people to get a drink of water in that city. We can't understand a complaint of this sort in a town where a man can get a drink for five cents.

"I have seen three kings and two queens," said Mr. Stead in his Carnegie institute speech. Wonder how much it cost him or whether he went to the deck with his hand before he called.

Before the recent meeting at Albuquerque to protest against the resignation of Governor Hagerman, the Albuquerque Citizen, one of the organs of the Republican gang, issued this warning: "The Republican leaders through the Republican press will know who is there, and will remember where to place every man found in that crowd in the future." That's New Mexico politics for you, only in a little bit rarer form than they usually hand it out. That's the kind of a big stick that makes Roosevelt's look like a toothpick.

WHERE DOES HE STAND?

In mythological story we are told of a fellow of the name of Actaeon, a hunter, who was guilty of an impertinence that displeased the goddess Diana, who took summary vengeance on the peeping Tom, turned him into a stag, set his dogs on him, and so he was rended by them for his bad manners. It is reported from Wall street that something like that is about to befall Mr. Edward H. Harriman, who is to be deposed by his own plutocrats, assisted by some other plutocrats not of his pack.

The news is that Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Speyer & Co., Henry C. Frick and Thomas F. Ryan are chasing Mr. Harriman, and they are certain to catch him if they shall be joined by Mr. James Stillman, head of Mr. Rockefeller's bank. Mr. Harriman, who rose like a rocket, is in danger of coming down like a stick, not for his crimes, if any he committed, but for his blunders—such as getting into a controversy with the man the public admires and trusts as no other American ever was in our entire history. In finance, as in war, in politics, in love, in baseball, nothing fails like a failure, and nothing succeeds like success.

Mr. Harriman has failed. Napoleon of Wall street that he was, he is an octopus that the United States department is after and likely to catch. That is a capital offense in Wall street, and Napoleon's marshals are fixing to tear the purple from his shoulders and strike the crown from his head. It is not for that $23,000,000 robbery of the public in the Alton juggle that his subordinate plutocrats are after Mr. Harriman. That they applauded as an Austerlitz. It is not that Mr. Harriman employed the unlimited resources of the Union Pacific to construct the most gigantic, the most ravenous, and the most malevolent railroad octopus in the world. That they approved as the crowning labor of the greatest financier since Midas.

What Wall street has got against Mr. Harriman is that he has made himself the most odious individual in the Union by a too free indulgence in the dangerous and ticklish composition of mischievous personal letters. "Oh,—him; he writes letters!" was Henry Clay's reasons for an excommunication he gave James Buchanan in the United States senate when Jackson was president. It is a dangerous practice. It was said of Martin Van Buren that he would tunnel the mountains rather than impart a secret in a personal letter. A letter, several of them, cost James G. Blaine the presidency. Donn Platt said the biggest fool in the world was the man who made love by means of a pen, a sheet of paper and a bottle of ink.

The worst thing about a letter is its inveterate disposition to obtrude itself at inauspicious times. A leg of mutton cost Napoleon Bonaparte continental Europe for an empire. A pig making a filibustering expedition into a vegetable garden, so saith tradition, precipitated the war of 1812.

But who would have thought that the most brilliant captain general Wall street ever saw would have invited disaster by means of a stenographer and a typewriter? When those Wall street plutocrats get through with him, Mr. Harriman will know where he stands.—Washington Post.

BORDER QUIET SAYS WHEELER

Ranger Captain States in Interview that Things on the International Line Were Never More Peaceful—Gives Rangers the Credit.

"We are having less trouble right now with ruffians and criminals of every character on the border than ever before," said Captain Harry Wheeler of the Arizona rangers at Bisbee recently. "And I believe that with truth I can say the rangers of Arizona have done much to bring about this condition. "While Arizona was at one time considered one of the most violent and lawless communities in the world and the border line between Cochise county and Mexico bore an especially hard name with the outside world, and not without reason, I believe I can safely say that it is now much the same as the border between any two countries, practically law-abiding.

"I do not mean to say that absolutely no lawlessness is being practiced, because there will be an occasional criminal trying to cross from one side to the other today much as there has been in the past and will be until the end of crime in the world, but crimes and criminals are not nearly so frequent as in the past. "Occasionally we have to arrest a horsethief trying to cross from this side of the line into Mexico, or one of the same like attempting to cross into this country from there, but these are exceptions and do not come every day. "I do not mean by this that I think the constant vigilance we are exercising along the line is thrown away. Far from it, for I believe that by every method we have been able to decrease the number of crimes and criminals. There has always been and always will be a certain criminal element which will prey on people if they are given the chance. What we are doing is attempting to keep down this element and I believe I can say with truth the ranger force is succeeding admirably."

DOUGLAS GETS A NEW SMELTER

Shattuck and Denn Companies' Smelter Will Be Located South of Calumet & Arizona Smelter at Douglas—Houle to Be the Superintendent.

As a result of the trip made to Douglas yesterday morning by L. W. Powell, general manager of the Cole interests, and L. C. Shattuck, B. M. Pattison and William Gowling of the Shattuck interests, a site was chosen on which will be erected a smelter by the Shattuck-Arizona and Denn-Arizona Mining companies within a very short time. The site selected lies directly south of the Calumet & Arizona smelter, says the Review.

Ever since the stockholders meetings of the Shattuck and Denn companies at Duluth several weeks ago various reports have been circulating as to the probable location of the smelter, because it was announced that it had definitely been decided to construct a reduction plant. The logical location was Douglas, and it has simply been a matter of arranging with the Copper Queen and Calumet & Arizona companies for a portion of their ground that has delayed matters up to the present time.

Yesterday morning Colonel Powell, L. C. Shattuck, B. M. Pattison and William Gowling left for the Smelter City in Pattison's automobile, and spent most of the day going over the ground comparing the relative merits of several locations. The site finally decided upon—comprises about two hundred acres lying directly south of the Calumet & Arizona smelter. Of this two hundred acres, 160 belonged to the Copper Queen company and forty to the C. & A.

The smelter will be a modern plant in every respect, and will embody the benefits of experience obtained from a careful inspection by the Shattuck officials of the other reduction plants in the Smelter City and in the northern portions of the territory. All of the buildings will be constructed on steel frames, the ore bins will be of steel and the trestle work will be of the same metal. The work of constructing the plant will be carried on under the supervision of Arthur Houle of the firm of Houle & Holton, and when completed Houle will be employed by the Shattuck-Arizona crowd in the capacity of superintendent.

Two furnaces with a capacity of two hundred tons daily will be installed in the plant at first, and from time to time as the ore productions from the two properties increases additional furnaces will be constructed. The plans and specifications for the machinery have already been mailed to the various big machinery houses and it is expected that within the next two weeks bids will be received. The contract will then be awarded and it will probably take two or three months to fill the orders.

SUICIDE A CRIME

MANY MORE MEN ARE GUILTY OF SUICIDE THAN THE PUBLIC IMAGINES.

There are many ways of killing yourself. More men commit suicide than ever get credit for the crime in the public mind. Sometimes even the men themselves do not realize that they are committing suicide.

More people kill themselves drinking whiskey than by any other means in the known world. In nine cases out of ten the drinker realizes more vividly than anyone else can describe the fact that he is killing himself, but he is powerless to prevent what seems to him as the inevitable. He makes up his mind never to take another drink, but when the whiskey thirst comes over him he says, "Oh, well, I won't count this one." He may not count it, but the law of nature, to which all men are subject, counts it against that man's health, and he is nearer the grave than ever before for each drink that goes into his stomach.

The McKanna Liqueur Cure is a treatment that relieves a man of the thirst and puts him where he had sooner not have a drink than to have it if whiskey didn't cost but a penny a barrel. An office of the McKanna Cure has been established temporarily in rooms 14 and 15 of the Max Lantin building in Globe, where the treatment is administered and a cure guaranteed.
