President Roosevelt's Speech Favorably Received on Wall Street—Old Dominion Sells Off at the Close—Morning Gains Are Lost During Afternoon.

(By I. N. Kinsey) GLOBE, May 31.—While the market opened much stronger this morning owing to the favorable construction placed by Wall Street on President Roosevelt's speech at Indianapolis yesterday, it was again stricken with weakness before the close and sold off considerably. Old Dominion opened strong at $48.50, but at the close sold off to $47.50. Globe Consolidated sold at $10.50 during the day. Superior & Boston at $2.37 and sales of National at 65 cents, although the latter closed weak at 60.

(By H. H. Bru Co.) GLOBE, May 31.—The market showed very little improvement today over the past two weeks, but as this is about the last of the week we may not look for much strength. We look for more strength to be in evidence beginning with next month and it should hold up better from this on.

A strong bear party has been depressing Greene-Cannana, but they are getting discouraged by the heavy buying around $14. The short interest is large and they will have to cover soon, which should put the entire list up a few points. Standard issues are in demand and considerable outside buying and all in all things look better. Money loaned in New York and Boston around 2 1/2 per cent today.

We would consider stocks like Old Dominion, Amalgamated, Anaconda, Butte Coalition, Utah Consolidated, North Butte, Copper Range, Greene-Cannana, Calumet & Arizona and Shannon stocks good to buy and hold onto for a while.

patentee the recipe for making this explosive and the right to use it. During the last ten days dynamite and powder have been done away with and this new substitute has been used in tearing away the bluff. It has proved a success beyond all expectations. Mr. Gray is an enthusiast about it. He says it costs far less money, does better work, and there is little danger in its use. This is the reason why we no longer hear the detonations caused by a blast of dynamite and can lay down to pleasant dreams without fear of being disturbed by the rattle of the dishes in the pantry.

The ingredients are prepared in the morning at the bluff for the day's work. Mr. Gray buys a barrel of sugar and according to the recipe obtained from the patentee mixes it with other chemicals and it is used like other explosives in drills. A fuse is attached to the material and the charge is made. There is an explosion, but it is much more gentle than is obtained from dynamite and is much more effective in its results.—Red Wing, Minn., Republican.

MRS. MCKINLEY'S LOVE: A Word Picture of the Tenderness that Hallowed Her Life

The peculiar pathos that was attached to Mrs. McKinley in the eyes of the country at large had its root in a love story that will take its place among the classics. On the part of President McKinley it was a single-minded devotedness that gathered an ever-increasing tenderness from the delicacy of the wife, whose hopes of motherhood were buried and whose mind, as if arrested on the threshold of that deepest experience of her womanhood, was still held in the thrall of youth.

On her part it was a love of absolute dependence and childlike trust. Through all her life her eyes have retained the clear, unshadowed softness of the girl; the charming pink of her cheek was that usually known to the dawn of maturity. Her gentle smile, her soft voice, the ingenuousness of manner, the modulated voice, all gave President McKinley the sweetheart of his boyhood, who, if she could not share the cares of state and must be protected from every alien look or word, could yet win him from all other considerations to make her happy.

WATER USERS WIN AGAINST CANAL COMPANY: The case of William Weaver and others against the Casa Grande Valley Canal company was heard before Judge Kent on Monday. It was an application on the part of the water users for the appointment of a receiver on account of alleged mismanagement of the canal. Judge Kent granted the application and will name the receiver in a few days. Colonel Thomas Fitch and General Thomas F. Wilson are the attorneys for the water users.

On account of the illness of Colonel Fitch, General Wilson went to Florence and represented the water users. The farmers in the Casa Grande district have suffered severely in recent years because of inability to secure water. The appointment of a receiver is regarded as an important step toward a radical change in conditions in the Casa Grande valley.

Granulated sugar has other uses than the sweetening of one's coffee for breakfast. L. M. Gray has discovered at a quarry work which he has been doing at the back of Barn Bluff that it is an excellent substitute for giant powder and dynamite. In fact, it beats them in many directions. Have you noticed that during the past week or ten days that the concussions which were so noticeable from the explosions caused by the drillings at the bluff have ceased? So true is this that it has become a common question upon the streets. "Has the work at the quarry stopped?" And thereby hangs a tale.

During his recent trip to Mexico, C. E. Sheldon, while on his way south, met a gentleman who has large interests in the clay business, and in speaking with him of the pottery interests he referred to a new method of exploiting clay which he had discovered by simpler and safer combination in the way of an explosive than is found in dynamite or powder. On further inquiry Mr. Sheldon ascertained that the ingredients of this new explosive, which his friend told him of, consisted in large measure—more than half—of granulated sugar. This, mixed with certain chemicals, had been discovered and patented recently, and from the patentee, the St. Louis firm, of which his tourist friend was a member, had obtained the right to use it. While they were somewhat skeptical of its value at first, after having given it a thorough trial they have become thoroughly convinced that it was remarkable, both in the results achieved, the greater safety found in its use, and in the economy of expenditure, as its cost is less than half which was made necessary under the old methods in the use of gunpowder. Mr. Sheldon was at once interested, and was given the address of the patentee.

On arriving home he addressed a letter to the discoverer of the new explosive and from him obtained the reply restating practically all that his friend had told him about the merits of the discovery. This he filed away for future use. A few days ago he met Mr. Gray, and in discussing the quarry work which he has been doing this winter on the river side of Barn Bluff, the danger from dynamite, which has already resulted in injury to quite a number of men, and the violence of the concussion of the charges, which has disturbed the whole community both day and night, he asked Mr. Gray why he did not use the new explosive which had been found. Mr. Gray made further inquiries in regard to it, although naturally very suspicious of the great claims made for this new compound, so simple in its nature, and so largely made up of an article whose only use has heretofore been associated with the sweetening of the world's food. The upshot of the matter has been that Mr. Gray has obtained from the patentee the recipe for making this explosive and the right to use it. During the last ten days dynamite and powder have been done away with and this new substitute has been used in tearing away the bluff. It has proved a success beyond all expectations. Mr. Gray is an enthusiast about it. He says it costs far less money, does better work, and there is little danger in its use. Through all her life her eyes have retained the clear, unshadowed softness of the girl; the charming pink of her cheek was that usually known to the dawn of maturity. Her gentle smile, her soft voice, the ingenuousness of manner, the modulated voice, all gave President McKinley the sweetheart of his boyhood, who, if she could not share the cares of state and must be protected from every alien look or word, could yet win him from all other considerations to make her happy. Denied much effort, she busied herself about little things. She made purses of netted silk and fashioned slippers of wool by the hundreds. They went for Christmas gifts, as souvenirs. They brought large prices at charitable fairs, and they gave their manufacturer the keenest delight. She said once during the White House days that she had made 4,000 pairs of slippers for "somebody to wear." The Christmas after her loss she did not forget her friends in the cabinet circle, but the remembrances fashioned by her delicate fingers were all of black and gray. The woman who had clung so persistently to beautiful colors could find relief only in the somber shades. One of the last expressions of President McKinley's care for her occurred when they entered Terrace Station at Buffalo on that fatal trip. The salute of the artillerymen drawn up to await their arrival broke seven panes in the forward car. The crash and shock were too much for Mrs. McKinley to bear. She fell fainting into her husband's arms. He laid her back on her pillows, soothing her gently before he stepped out to acknowledge the plaudits of the crowd. When she shrank back later, in sight of all, at the shrieking of the engines and the confusion, the president gently put his arm about her, smiled reassuringly and drew the lace wrap up about her ears, shutting out the uproar. When Mrs. McKinley married Ida Saxton she had been given not only all the advantages that education and travel could offer (she was fresh from a six-month stay in Europe when they met), but had learned self-reliance as well, for her father, James Saxton, had installed her as assistant cashier in the bank to teach her to cope with the world. She came to her husband brilliant with health and ambition. When she had laid her two babes to rest in the Canton cemetery she was the wreck of her former self—the spirit of her youth and her love alone remained untouched.—New York World.
