GLOBE SIGHTS AND SILVER BELTLETS

Current News of Busy Globe Told in Briefs

W. G. Shanley is in the city from his ranch on the San Carlos reservation.

Attorney C. L. Rawlins returned last evening from Tucson, where he has been transacting legal business.

Jack Rice, one of the proprietors of the Iris chain of theaters, arrived in the city last evening from Bisbee to spend a few days in the city.

Judge C. F. Whitehead of Prescott has arrived here to locate in the law business. He has practiced a number of years in the territory and comes highly recommended. He will locate in the Globe office building.

Yesterday was the hottest day so far this year. The government thermometer of Dr. Fox registered a maximum of 104 degrees and a minimum of 61 degrees, a range of 43 degrees during the twenty-four hours ending last evening at 6 o'clock.

The dramatic reading given last evening at the Methodist church by Mrs. Rose Kibbe Krebs was attended by a large number of people. It was given by the Ladies Aid of the M. E. church, which netted a considerable sum for the entertainment. Mrs. Krebs is a reader of much talent and her selections were thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated.

Mark and Luke Page will arrive in the city this evening from Bisbee to train for the drilling contest on the Fourth. They will represent the Bisbee Extension company, in whose employ they are and which has properties ten miles from Bisbee. It is a new company which is just outside of the Warren district. The Page brothers won the drilling contest at the Mining Congress in El Paso in 1905.

"The Boar Hunt" was shown at the Iris last night and made a great hit. Don't miss it.

ANNIE BEALS AGAIN OCCUPIES A CELL

Annie Beals, the girl who was arrested several days ago in the tenderloin district and who failed to appear after she had been released on her own recognizance by Judge Nave, was arrested early yesterday morning in the red light district by Sheriff Thompson on a bench warrant. She has been committed to the Industrial school at Benson and will be taken there tomorrow night.

Fin Program at the Iris

Last night was change night at the Iris and an excellent program was rendered. "The Wild Boar Hunt" and "The Rajah's Casket," the two pictures which were advertised last week, came in on the 8:30 train and were shown for the first time in Globe.

"The Boar Hunt" was taken in Africa and is a wonderful picture. The "Rajah's Casket" is a spectacular picture beautifully colored.

"How the Office Boy Saw the Ball Game" is a very interesting picture showing a ball game at the Polo grounds, New York City, between the New York and Pittsburgh teams of the National League. It also shows the raising of the pennant over the grand stand. The picture shows the great crowd of people in the grand stand and bleachers. Over thirty-nine thousand people paid admission to see this game.

Mr. Smith sang two new songs and scored quite a hit with the new march song, "Honey Boy." The audience joined in the chorus.

Taken altogether, it is one of the best programs yet shown at the Iris. The same bill continues for the balance of the week.

Biggest Green Diamond

What is believed to be the largest and most perfect green diamond that has ever come into the United States has been appraised by examiners of the local customs offices. The stone, weighing 2½ carats, almost as dark green as an emerald, of unusual brilliancy and valued at close to $6,000, was consigned to a New York jewelry house from Amsterdam.

Although the examiners handle millions of dollars' worth of precious stones each month, the green diamond created much interest among them because of its great rarity. Michael Nathan, deputy appraiser, who is in charge of the diamond and art ware division, stated that it was the third green diamond which had been brought to America within five or six years and by far the finest.

Its arrival followed closely that of a brown diamond weighing three carats and valued at about $5,000. This also was a rare specimen of colored diamonds.—New York Sun.

Oyster Bay

Very little is known about Oyster Bay, the place where the president spends his summers. Oyster Bay is a delightful cove back of Blue Point. In the center is Shell Island and the great dome of Chesapeake Peak, the highest mountain in the famous Kitchen Range, rises behind. The president's summer home is a picturesque ranch of illimitable prairie reaches. Wild game is abundant. Great bands of elk range through the valleys in the more mountainous parts, buffalo graze on the plains, the grizzly bear stalks the wild strawberry upon the rock slopes, and the puma crouches in the hat trees to spring upon the unsuspecting deer. The president's house is a rugged log cabin with a buffalo head on the door. The ranch upon the left is the summer home of the president's bosom friend, "Bat" Masterson. Upon the right is faintly to be seen the summer hacienda of comrade "Bull" Andrews, while immediately across the mountains is the summer ranch of old side partner "Viking" Ben Daniels. The daily meetings and sports of Ted, Bull, Bat and Ben constitute much of the wildest Wild West show extant. They all depend upon the chase for sustenance, and they count lost the day in which they do not ride hard and shoot up the country a lot. At night the Big Four assemble at the president's cabin and recall over their fragrant pipes the adventures of other days.

All the other resorts along there are frequented by mollycoddlers, undesirable citizens, reactionaries, nature fakirs, liars, tenderfeet and advocates of race suicide. Only Oyster Bay is pure.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Squirrel Whips a Snake

The story of a battle between a squirrel and a large blacksnake is reported by John Withers, a prominent farmer, who lives north of Carrollton. Mr. Withers has some pet squirrels on his farm, and a few days ago when he went to feed them he noticed a commotion going on in the squirrel's nest. In a few moments a red squirrel emerged from the hole in the tree, dragging a blacksnake.

Both were fighting desperately. The snake was at a disadvantage however, for the squirrel had a strangle hold behind the snake's head and shook his unwieldy antagonist much as a dog would a rat. The snake endeavored to encircle the little squirrel with its coils, but could not do so, and presently both the snake and the squirrel fell to the ground, the squirrel still retaining his hold on the snake.

Mr. Withers stepped up and the squirrel released his hold and scampered back up the tree. The snake, which measured nearly six feet in length, was nearly dead and was dispatched by Mr. Withers.—Washington Post.

May Eat Horses in America

A Washington special to the Record-Herald says: Will the increase in the price of dressed meats in the United States bring about conditions which now prevail in Germany, where, due to the scarcity of beef, the people have accustomed themselves to eating horse and dog flesh? In Germany about 182,000 horses and 7,000 dogs are slaughtered annually for food. Horse flesh is very generally advertised in German newspapers, and most cities in the empire have at least one market which makes it a specialty, claiming for it a higher percentage of nourishment than beef, veal, mutton or pork. Consular reports received at the state department say that advertisements appear regularly in the German newspapers for dogs to be slaughtered, and often when the available supply runs low valuable animals are stolen to be converted into food.
