THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Chamber of Commerce has perfected its organization and in a short time will commence on a campaign for the promotion of Globe and the mining country tributary to the city. With representative business men at the head of the organization, its success is already assured, but the ablest co-operation of every business, mining and professional man in the district is necessary. Important problems affecting the welfare of Globe will be taken up by the chamber and with concerted action more can be accomplished in a short time than would result in years of individual effort, no matter how strong. The Chamber of Commerce has been a long-felt want in Globe, not that the city and district has suffered greatly because of the non-existence of such an organization, but because much more good would have resulted to the city had it come before. No better time, however, could have been chosen than the present to create the Chamber of Commerce. Globe is at present enjoying a prosperity which is unparalleled in the southwest and no better time could be found to proclaim its merits to the world.

Every business man in the city, no matter how great or small his business, can ill afford to remain out of this organization, as it will be of direct benefit to those in business, as it will be of more indirect benefit to every resident of the city and district.

OBJECT LESSONS

The country is just now being treated to an object lesson on the radical policy of the Roosevelt administration in its hot pursuit of the trusts and railroads. Monopolies owe their existence largely to the Republican party and its maintenance of a high protective tariff. Few will question the evils which have followed as the direct result of Republican legislation favoring the trusts but there are many who dissent from the policy of the present administration at Washington which has brought about a condition bordering on demoralization in the business world that menaces the prosperity of the nation.

The interests that have in the past contributed millions to perpetuate the Republican party are today the object of unrelenting prosecution by a Republican administration—certainly a unique situation and one which the country would applaud were it not for the injury already wrought and further threatened to our industrial welfare.

It is not only the hostility of the administration to large corporations that threatens to bring about business reaction, but the effect of the Roosevelt policy upon the masses as reflected in much of the recent radical legislation in many of the states against the railroads, insurance companies and other corporations doing an interstate business. The investigation of the big insurance companies has not resulted in lower rates for life insurance, or increased the stability of the companies. Neither has control been wrested from the old officials and lodged in the policy holders. The effect of recent legislation reducing fares and freights is yet to be determined. One result of legislation hostile to the railroads is at least plainly apparent—railroad securities, which are mainly held by the people as investments, have suffered great depreciation and the roads are unable to negotiate further loans needed for the betterment of the service and to expeditiously handle the enormous business of a rapidly growing country. The rejoicing of the public over the heavy fine imposed upon the Standard Oil company by a federal judge will be turned into lamentation when the common people discover that they will have to pay the judgment through the increased price of oil.

So complex is the business structure that the confiding public seldom realizes from what quarter the blow comes that dissipates their savings, as is the case in the present severe decline in stocks. Who knows but what Harri-man and Standard Oil have precipitated the movement as an object lesson to the dear people?

Public opinion in this country has become distorted and needs an efficient antidote to restore it to a saner conception of questions of present paramount importance.

SQUARE DEAL FOR MEXICAN EDITOR

United States Attorney Says He Don't Know Why Douglas Newspaper Man Was Arrested, but if He Is Innocent He Will Be Protected.

Captain George Christy, assistant United States district attorney, this morning made very clear the position of the two Mexican editors who were arrested at Douglas and incarcerated in the Tucson jail, says the Democrat.

"As attorney for the United States government," said Captain Christy, "we do not know what these men are charged with and have no interest in them. The attorney general of the United States has requested this department to have these men arrested. He did not consider it necessary to go into details, except that the Mexican government had preferred charges against them with the state department and wanted them extradited. The legal method of procedure is that the men must remain in jail for forty days, thus giving the Mexican government time to complete its charges. If no charges are filed with us at the end of forty days, the men will be released; but in cases where men are extradited no bail can be given. However, before these men can be taken from the United States and conveyed to a foreign country for trial it must be shown that there is sufficient evidence against them to bind them over to a grand jury in this country. In other words, the laws of the United States do not permit the extradition of a man on a trumped-up charge that cannot be proven, and if these men are innocent of any crime, as they allege, the Mexican government cannot extradite them. But they cannot give bail, simply because it is the law of the country—an international comity agreed to by a treaty that we have with Mexico.

The two men referred to are named Lelevier, and they are father and son. They edited a Spanish paper at Douglas and have been complaining very bitterly in the public prints that they have been arrested and thrown into prison by the United States government on a trumped-up charge by the Mexican government, but the statement made by Captain Christy shows that there is no danger for them if they are innocent of any wrong. If they are simply editors of a newspaper that is antagonistic to the Mexican government, but which is printed on American soil, the only trouble that they will have is forty days in jail. The burden of proving that they have been guilty of a crime in Mexico lies with the Mexican government.

WORK OF Y. M. C. A.

Appeals to Citizens of Globe Who Are Interested in It

One of the most satisfactory and convincing tests of the worth of an organization is the support given to it by the citizens of a community in which it is located, and that after a sufficient lapse of time for the organization to have had a chance to show what it is and what it does.

We are living in an extremely practical age—an age when men are asking not for theories, but results. Results, therefore, are a prerequisite to any general and considerable support of a movement.

To quite a large number of Globe citizens who are looking forward to the establishing of a Young Men's Christian association in our city we would say that there probably is no other organization in the land that has more fully demonstrated its worth, and justified its rights to exist by the results produced than the Y. M. C. A., and if, judged by the support it has received and is receiving in localities where it has been in operation for years, the Y. M. C. A. must be regarded as one of the most worthy institutions before the public.

In some of the older cities of the United States, where a Y. M. C. A. has been in operation for a number of years, the citizens have enlarged the buildings, some twice and some four times their former capacity. For instance, Dayton, Ohio, is spending $400,000 on a new building; Denver, Colo., $225,000; South Bend, Ind., $150,000; El Paso, Texas, $105,000; and Phoenix, Ariz., will spend over $100,000. These are but a few instances of the confidence in and appreciation men have of the Y. M. C. A. All told, more than $11,900,000 was given during the one year of 1906 for association buildings and work.

The government of the United States estimates the work of the Y. M. C. A. so highly that congress gave authority to the secretary of war to grant permission to the association to establish its work at the various posts of the army in the United States, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Furthermore, commanding officers were directed to facilitate the efforts of the association by providing therefor suitable quarters.

Successful railroad men—men who operate the greatest systems of the country, have for a long while encouraged, assisted and maintained Y. M. C. A.'s at junction points for their employees.

Secretary William H. Taft in speaking of the building of the Panama canal pays a high tribute to the Y. M. C. A. He says: "We have introduced into the canal zone about 30,000 people, of whom perhaps 7,000 are Americans. They are in a tropical climate, with an absence of rational amusements, and with all the temptations to dissipation and degradation to which a new community like that under tropical skies is exposed. Appreciating that, and believing that no measure could be better directed to secure good work, by honest and moral people, than through instrumentalities which should prevent the employees of the canal commission from yielding to the temptation to lead dissolute and dissipated lives, the commission has constructed four clubhouses, at Culebra, Empire, Gorgona and Cristobal. The commission has appointed as secretaries of these four gentlemen who are members identified with the Young Men's Christian association. The commission pays the salaries of these men and furnishes the houses, and gives them proper libraries. I do not think there is any action of the commission that does more to assist in carrying on the work of canal construction intelligently and energetically than the expenditure of the money for the purposes I have enumerated. And the excellence of the results will be made possible by the use of those men who have been trained in the work of the Young Men's Christian association, and who represent that association in the isthmus."

GEORGE WALKER ON METAL MARKET

Says that Prices of Producers Are Considerably Higher than Those Quoted on Exchange, but Recession Is Looked for—Would Like More Stable Prices.

George L. Walker says in his paper letter under date of August 3 in the Boston Commercial:

Copper continues dull and no large sales of the metal have been reported during the past week. Lake copper is quoted nominally at 22 to 22 1/4 cents by the larger producers. The Metal Exchange quotations are materially under these prices. Europe has apparently been the best market for copper during the past few weeks and electrolytic has been sold for export in small quantities as low as 21 cents. If copper continues to be sold for export at these prices, it is logical to assume that a corresponding recession in prices will take place in the domestic market.

The falling off in business since July 1, as reported by the U. S. Steel corporation, which shows a decrease of 25 per cent compared with the same period of last year, may be taken as a pretty good indication that general business is affected to some extent. This recession has been brought about directly by the stringency of money in all financial centers.

It would be much more satisfactory to consumers and producers alike if in the near future a stable basis of prices could be established and maintained. The consumers alone are responsible for putting the price of copper to the high level of last February and March. Producers tried to discourage the excited buying, but consumers bid against each other for copper supplies for four or five months ahead. One large producer threw 20,000,000 pounds of copper into the market in January in an effort to check the rise. Half of it was taken immediately at 22 1/2 cents. It did serve to check the prices, but only temporarily. The excitement was renewed and the balance of the lot was sold at much higher prices. At the present time, however, the market is unsettled and there is no pressure of demand.

On account of a falling off in new business, some of the large consumers find that their supplies of the metal are sufficient to carry them well into August, although, on the other hand, some small consumers admit that they will have to buy copper very soon or shut down their plants. While not stating their opinion in so many words, there are producers who would not be surprised if circumstances should bring about further declines in price.

Copper Share Market

The coppers have had a bad week. Prices have declined and there has been increased evidence of liquidation by the tire holders. Purchasers of copper stocks selling on a basis of 18-cent copper hold on despite market discouragement because they felt that the market would discount the higher price of the metal sooner or later, and that even if prices did not advance there was little likelihood of any decline from those prices. Copper stocks, however, have responded to the weak tone of the metal market, although copper is selling at a price that provides amply for all dividends now being distributed. Other conditions have conspired to weaken the market, notably the scarcity of money, which has brought lower prices throughout the market.

Local sentiment is extremely bearish, as it always is when prices decline. Traders are predicting much lower prices for copper stocks, and a few traders are selling the market short. When sentiment is in this condition it usually is time to buy stocks. Conditions are not so bad as is alleged, and will not be so bad. There is nothing now to indicate that the price of copper will drop to a figure that will necessitate the curtailment of dividends, and if present dividends are maintained the holders of copper stocks need have no worry.

The selling in Boston has been distributed throughout the list. Utah Consolidated, which started the decline, has held quite steady to the lower level, as if stocks sold above were being recovered.

ered. This would not be done if any further severe decline was probable. There is scarcely any speculative interest in the coppers. Traders will not buy them, and are afraid to sell them short. Consequently commission house business is light.

The Groom's Duty
A little maid of three was showing the family album to her baby brother, and when she saw the picture of their young mother in her wedding gown, she said to him: "Now, Waldron, here is your mother getting married." And turning to the picture of their father on the opposite page, she continued: "And here's your father standing by." Could anything be more apt than her description of the groom?
