Someone in the Gila Valley who had a stand in must have been praying for rain.

Ain't it lucky that the Haywood and Schmitz trials were over before the telegraph strike began.

Owing to the fact that the wires are down, Governor Kibbey hasn't resigned for the last three days.

Many people who never before heard of Ash Fork would probably have remained in ignorance of its existence had it not been for the telegraphers' strike. It's an ill wind, etc.

There is one advantage at least in being isolated from the outside world. Japan may have declared war on the United States and, as we don't know anything about, we have nothing to get excited about.

Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy has been declared sane. Which was perfectly right. The way the aged apostle of Christian Science has gathered in the shekels shows that she is not any crazier than was the late lamented Elijah Dowie.

An optimist is a man who can toss all night on a cushion in a Gila Valley passenger coach and then admire the sunrise. A pessimist is a man who reads every word in the paper without a line from the outside world and then declares that "there is nothing in it."

Root, Bonaparte and Bacon are said to be slated for the bench. They have been playing a rather listless game and have been disgustingly apathetic instead of getting out on the side lines and coaching when Captain Teddy was at the bat in the present series with the Octopus leaguers.

Harriman denies that he said that he wanted all the railroads in the country. In other words, he is perfectly satisfied with his present possessions, which include the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Oregon Short Line, Salt Lake and several others—and last, but not least, the Gila Valley, Globe & Northern.

Editor Tom Weedin of the Florence Blade denies that he is trying to slip into Mark Smith's shoes. The Honorable Tom would not go to Washington under any circumstances, for in that event Florence and Pinal county would wither and die like a freshly cut rose beneath the Yuma sun. No, indeed! Nothing like that for Editor Tom—while Mark Smith lives!

THE GENERAL WELFARE

Efforts have been made during the last week or ten days to cast doubts upon the genuineness of the prosperity that blesses the United States, and to arouse misgivings as to its continuance. Wall street has palpably aided in the circulation of stories intended to alarm the business interests, the purpose being, of course, to frighten the president into an abandonment of the prosecution against powerful corporations that have violated the law. The fright, however, has been in Wall street itself, and not in the president. He has given no sign that he is alarmed by the slump in Wall street, and those who think they can sway him from execution of the law by manipulation of stocks are merely advertising their own folly.

The telegraph strike has been exaggerated by the prophets of adversity, in and out of Wall street. The person who confines his reading to accounts of the strike and particularly to the forecasts of terrible things to come, may easily convince himself that the greatest nation on earth is dependent for its life upon the lordly will of two telegraph companies and their employees. Such dire forebodings have been uttered in every strike that has ever occurred, and they have never happened, because the good sense of American employers and employees, aided by public opinion, has always brought about peace. The test of strength between the telegraph companies and the operators may be strenuous, but it will not be ruinous to either side. Common interest will force the combatants to make terms of some kind. As cooler weather comes on, and both sides begin to realize that they can prosper better together than separately, there ought to be evident a conciliatory spirit that will soon find the path to peace.

Aside from the gyrations of Wall street and the telegraphers' strike, there is not a cloud on the horizon of business. Crops are big, and big efforts must be made to handle them and to provide for the growth that will be stimulated by the surplus yield. The ordinary growth of the United States requires the expenditure of enormous energy and great sums of money. This fact is sometimes overlooked by those who have come to regard marvelous prosperity as normal. If there should be a diminution of prosperity as compared with conditions of the past decade, there would still be a call for immense outlay in the mere effort to keep up with the normal growth. The momentum reached by a nation of 80,000,000 people is a movement of such majesty and force as to be irresistible in times free of wars and pestilence. No disaster that is not well-nigh universal can stop the onward movement. With the exercise of discretion there will be no impairment in the confidence of Americans in the continuance of great prosperity.

DEVoured EGGS OF GILA MONSTER

Almost Unbelievable Tale of Cochise County Occurrence—Starting Effect Caused by an Omelet of Gila Monster Eggs and a Sad Death.

(New York Tribune) After a round of hot weather stories from the sitters on "Meditating" Michael's bench, in City Hall park yesterday afternoon, "Non-Assessable" Smith, who "went broke" in mining speculation, spoke up: "But that ain't nuthin' to what I run across in the shape of hot weather down in Cochise county, Arizona, twelve years ago.

"I had for a partner a man named Bolger—Bill Bolger—and he was powerfully addicted to the use of ardent spirits. Well, we was up in the Dragon mountains, not far from the Black Diamond camp, when me an' Bill run out of grub. I went to Black Diamond for supplies, leaving Bill to run our prospect.

"Our shack was on a flat rock. While I was gone a greaser came along and sold Bill some eggs—fresh eggs, he said. Bill was drunk or he would 'a' knowed better, but he bought the eggs, an' as he was high-fanned, he made ready to cook them.

"By accident he dropped one of them eggs on the rock, and it was that hot that day that before he could scrape it up it was fried to a turn. That give Bill an idea. He took all the eggs and broke 'em into one glorious omelet. After leaving them on the rock for fifteen minutes in the sun they was done.

"When I got in about 10 o'clock that night, Bill was all doubled up an' a groanin'. I seen the reason for it as soon as I seen the egg shells, and I knew Bill hadn't long to live. Y'see, instead o' them eggs bein' hen's eggs, they was Gila monster eggs, and deadly 'n'less.

"I hustled for a doctor, but it wa'n't no use. Bill was dead before midnight. When we came to lift him into a pine box we had the surprise of our life. He weighed about sixteen hundred pounds.

"Well," continued Non-Assessable Smith, "we was knocked plumb silly about his weight till the doctor got to lookin' him over. 'He seems to be ossified,' sez he.

"I've noticed it on Bill before, sez I. 'I mean scientific ossification,' sez the doctor, gittin' mad.

"It was all a mystery to us till we took him to the Copper Queen assay office in Bisbee. The engineers found that all but 172 pounds of Bill was gold—95 pure.

"Ye see, them eggs done it. Bein' the eggs of a Gila monster, they was full of cyanide, and the rock on which Bill fried the eggs was gold-bearing. The cyanide in the eggs got in its work and drew the gold out of the ore, so that Bill was a cyanide plant full of gold when he got the eggs down.

"That started a rush of people extractin' gold by the new process, but the eggs soon gave out, and they had to go back to the old way. I inherited Bill's carcass, an' ever since then I've been on Easy street—at least I ain't done a tap of work," said Non-Assessable.

After a long pause Michael said: "We believe your story, especially the last part."

BIG MINING DEAL IN PINAL COUNTY

"I have just got through counting out $40,000 that was paid me for the Calumet mine, and I feel good." This was the remark made at 3 o'clock today by Thomas F. Weedin of Pinal county, just after John Sharp, president of the Consolidated Big Lead & Calumet Mining company paid that sum of money over to Weedin for negotiating a sale on Thomas Haley's interest in the Calumet mine, which is located on Mineral creek in Pinal county, says the Phoenix Democrat.

Behind the sale there is a good mine story. This mine was located in 1874 by Thomas Haley, Walter McCallen and Fred McKenzie, under the name of the Keystone. It was finally allowed to revert back and was relocated by Haley and McCallen under the name of the Calumet.

In 1886 these two men had a separation and divided their property, but did not divide this mine. Finally, the feeling became so acrimonious that the two went to law and the court decided that each owned a half interest. In 1906 Weedin, tried to buy the mine from both parties, but they hated each other so that they refused to sell if the other got anything for his interest. Finally, however, the Calumet Copper company succeeded in buying McCallen's interest for $9,000, and Haley executed a bond and lease to Thomas Weedin for $40,000 and Weedin and the Calumet company began to take out ore and shipped 147 cars at a very nice profit, but about two months ago Weedin discovered that his bond would expire on August 24 and he got busy, with the result that he made this sale today to Sharp.

The purchasers are Philadelphia parties and they will do some extensive improvement.

After the sale was made, Haley refused to allow Weedin his commission for making the sale and the chances are that Weedin will immediately bring suit to get his commissions.

This is the largest sum of money ever paid in cold cash for a mine in Phoenix.

Robert E. Morrison represented Thomas Haley and delivered the deeds.

HEROES ARE PRAISED Navy Department Recognizes Self-sacrificing Enlisted Men

The Navy Department has extended its commendation and approval to certain enlisted men of that branch of service for self-sacrificing conduct and bravery.

One of the most worthy commendations was extended to Edward Wade Whitehead, gunner's mate, first class, who is attached to the United States steamship Adams. This act of heroism occurred during a landslide June 3, 1907, at the marine barracks, naval station, Tutuila, Samoa. The native guard barracks were completely demolished and for a time it seemed that a number of the occupants of the quarters were imbedded in the debris. Among the first to be discovered was Gunnery Sergeant John P. Cox, of the United States Marine Corps, who was found jammed against the front wall of the building. There was only room for one man to work in the way of extricating him, and Whitehead occupied the perilous position at the risk of his own life, finally succeeding in lifting the sergeant's body over his own head to the other rescuers.

Another instance that has been commended by the department is the promptness with which a number of sailors attached to the United States steamship Wahash, a receiving ship stationed at the navy yard, Boston, Mass., manned the boats of that vessel and went to the rescue of a party of three people who had been thrown overboard from a power launch which had collided with a ferry boat. Among those mentioned as being most conspicuous in this prompt action were M. W. Holland, ordinary seaman; M. C. Sweeney, ordinary seaman; M. Sommer, ship's cook second class; P. J. Brown, quartermaster, third class; G. Hawkins, bugler; P. Quinn, ordinary seaman; M. J. Myers, fireman, first class; A. J. Francy, ship's cook, first class and H. Shannon, ship's cook, fourth class.—Washington Post.
