'TWTX LOVE AND DUTY

It looks very much as if President Roosevelt were between the devil and the deep sea, as regards the federal coal land graft probing in New Mexico which was so abruptly interrupted by the recalling of the chief prober, Ormsby McHarg, to Washington, immediately after a large bunch of indictments had been returned by the federal grand jury at Santa Fe.

Although a number of local officials employees and ex-employees of the Phelps Dodge company were among those against whom true bills were returned, no warrants for their arrest were ever served. All proceedings in the case were brought to a sudden stop after the arrest of two of the indicted who happened to be in Santa Fe, when the grand jury reported.

According to authentic information from Washington the president is up against it. One of the officials of the Phelps Dodge company, who was indicted was a classmate of the president at college and a man to whom the executive has pointed as a model business man. Governor Curry, Major Llewellyn, United States attorney for New Mexico, and his assistant, Captain Dave Leahy, who have held themselves aloof from the federal probers at Santa Fe, were comrades in arms of the president.

Will President Roosevelt "trow down" his old pals to further gratify his anti-graft proclivities or will he "stick wid 'em" and thereby end his record of graft scrapping?

That's a question that is bothering a lot of people in New York, New Mexico and Arizona.

As a choice between the two evils, it would be far easier for the president to tie the can to McHarg, who is, after all, only a hired man of the department of justice and, politically, a nonentity, than to pass up the friendship of Dodge and the New Mexican ex-rough riders, who have it in their power to send a Roosevelt delegation to the next republican convention. But if he does follow the course that will personally and politically benefit him most, he will be compelled to lower his anti-graft standard and get into the corporation band wagon, where he was comfortably located before he became Roosevelt the Righteous.

It makes little difference whether those indicted for coal land frauds in New Mexico are guilty or innocent if their cases are not allowed to go to trial, but if the prosecutions are allowed to drop where they are, it will be sufficient evidence that President Roosevelt has become convinced that the practices employed by large corporations in acquiring vast stretches of coal and timber lands from the public domain are not harmful to the public.

BUREAU OF MINING

Whether or not a step forward was made at the last National Mining congress toward the creation of a bureau of mining under government supervision, remains to be seen, but it is certain that there has been no retrograding in the attempt to add a portfolio of mining to the president's cabinet.

In a recent issue the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says editorially of the movement:

The annual meeting of the American Mining congress has just been held at Joplin, Mo., the center of the greatest zinc mining district in the world. One of the delegates made the announcement on the strength of a recent interview in the White House, that the president's message shortly to be submitted to congress will include a recommendation that a government bureau of mines be established. From time to time government reports have set forth the great expansion in the mineral industries of the United States. All the old forms of mining are growing fast, and extensive new ones are added to the list frequently, the general increase each year amounting to many millions.

Reports on mining at present come from the United States geological survey, which is conducted under the direction of the interior department. According to the official figures published at the end of last year the value of the metallic and non-metallic mineral products of this country increased from $364,000,000 in 1880 to $1,623,000,000 in 1905, a greater rate of growth than has occurred in any other form of American industry. Within twenty-five years this country has taken the lead in coal, iron, copper and other articles. It produced in 1905 $41,000,000 of natural gas, $149,000,000 of clay products, $35,000,000 of cement, $63,000,000 of stone, $10,000,000 of lime, $6,000,000 of salt, and the other items are on a like scale. Our gold production in 1906 was $94,000,000 and silver $38,000,000. These two products combined exceed the yield of treasure in the Rand district. A distinctive bureau of mines at Washington would deal with a large subject, and one of the most important in a nationally economic sense.

For Thanksgiving

IT WAS an early Pilgrim custom, after a bountiful harvest, to offer thanks to the Supreme Being, and partake of a royal feast. This beautiful custom has ever since been carried out by thoughtful and appreciative people. Thanksgiving this year, November 28, will be the most glorious in the history of this wonderful nation. It is every housekeeper's pride that her Thanksgiving table board shall be spotless and snowy, and with this in mind, we have collected the choicest patterns in beautiful table linens produced by the most famous linen mills in the world. Ireland, Scotland, Germany and England are contributors to this brilliant display of housekeeper linens.
