

PHOENIX GIRL IS MISSING FROM HER HOME

Left Her Mother Thursday and Has Not Been Seen Since

OFFICERS MAKING DILIGENT SEARCH

Absent Girl Said to Have Had Lover in Oklahoma City

PHOENIX, March 22.—Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock Lily Ford, aged 17, left her mother at the corner of Second and Washington streets, promising to return in a few minutes. She has not been seen since.

No more mysterious disappearance ever occurred in Phoenix. The only explanation of the affair is that the girl has gone to join her lover in Oklahoma, but in view of the circumstances this does not seem probable.

"I don't know what she could have done unless she went off and married some man," said Mrs. W. M. Ford, the missing girl's mother, when seen this morning at the city hall, where she called to report her daughter's disappearance to the police.

"We came to Arizona a short time ago from Oklahoma," continued Mrs. Ford. "We have since been living at the ranch of my brother, J. K. Wheat, two miles west of the city. Thursday morning Lily and I drove into town to do some shopping. After visiting a number of places we met at the buggy, which we had left at the northeast corner of the city hall.

Lily then told me that she had forgotten some bundles in one of the stores she had visited and said she would go back for them. She asked where I would be upon her return and I told her I would remain right there with the buggy. That was about 1 o'clock. I waited until half past four, when I gave up and decided she did not intend to return.

"Did your daughter mention the name of the store where she had left her bundles?"

"No, she did not. We had considerable shopping to do and did not stay together. I don't know where she bought her things."

"Haven't you thought of any possible explanation for Miss Ford's disappearance?"

"As I said before, the only way I can account for it is that she has run off and married some man."

"Has any young man been paying attentions to her lately?"

"No one here. She was corresponding with Chris Cook, a young man who lives near Oklahoma City, where we used to live. A few days ago he wrote her a letter, offering to send her a railroad ticket if she would return and marry him, but Lily seemed to have no idea in the world of accepting his offer. She willingly showed me the letter and merely laughed about it."

"Did she know that you objected to her marrying Cook?"

"She knew that I did not want her to, but she never told either her father or me that she wished to marry Cook or even cared for him. If she meant to go to him I think she would have asked our permission."

"Her action in going away without even saying good-bye to us is something that we cannot explain. My husband has tried hard to gain trace of her but without success. He has learned that she bought no railroad ticket. Indeed, she did not have money enough to buy one. Of course Cook might have mailed her a ticket, in which case the local agents would know nothing about it, but I can't believe that Cook has anything to do with Lily's disappearance."

The police are as much at sea as Miss Ford's parents. The entire force is hard at work endeavoring to gain some trace of her, but so far the officers have been unsuccessful.

Lily Ford is a rather pretty girl of 17, five feet three inches in height. Her weight is about 140 pounds, has blue eyes, a very fair complexion and is slightly freckled. At the time of her disappearance she wore a black checked dress and tan slippers.

GRAY HAIRS DECEIVE

Trusting Boy Is Swindled of Last Cent by Aged Bunco Steerer

CINCINNATI, O., March 22.—Youthful credulity and the confidence that gray hair inspires led Henry Rosenthal, 17, to give his last cent of money to a man named Mason, whom he met on the wharfboat Cincinnati. Mason disappeared and Rosenthal, penniless and friendless, sought aid of the police.

Detective Dwyer, who took the boy's complaint, gave him a dollar and told him to find a good place to sleep and get something to eat. According to Rosenthal's story, he was on his way to Louisville, Ky., and when he struck Cincinnati, he decided to take a boat for the remainder of the trip.

On the boat he met Mason, who asked him to go to Second and Broadway with him. Arrived there, Mason searched his pockets to secure payment for two packages. He told Rosenthal that he had left $200 on the boat and that he needed a bit of money. The lad gave him $14, all he had.

TRANSFUSION DOES NOT PROLONG LIFE

Two Quarts of Blood Fails to Prevent Death

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 22.—The transfusion of two quarts of blood from the arteries of the right wrist of her husband, a well known produce merchant, at the Columbia hospital, Wilkesburg, into her own emaciated body, failed to save the life of Mrs. C. R. Ferguson of No. 305 South avenue, Wilkesburg, who died at the hospital from a complication of diseases.

The transfusion of blood was tried in Mrs. Ferguson's case by the physicians at the hospital as a last resource. Mrs. Ferguson's weakened condition had failed to respond to tonics of any kind. Arteries in Mr. Ferguson's wrist were opened and connected by tubes with the corresponding arteries in the right wrist of his wife. The tubes were taken away and the openings bound after two quarts had passed. Mr. Ferguson was taken to his home, weakened by the loss of blood, but has since wholly recovered.
