In Order to Escape. One day a young man entered a studio to be photographed. In posing he hunched his back, as if it were broken and twisted his face into a dreadful mask.

"Here," said the photographer, "what's the matter with you? Are you crazy?" "Go on," he said. "Take me just as I am. WRONG BREAKFAST. Change Gave Rugged Health.

Many persons think that for strength, they must begin the day with a breakfast of meat and other heavy foods. This is a mistake as anyone can easily discover for himself.

A W. Va. carpenter's experience may benefit others. He writes: "I used to be a very heavy breakfast eater but finally indigestion caused me such distress, I became afraid to eat anything."

"My wife suggested a trial of Grape-Nuts and as I had to eat something or starve, I concluded to take her advice. She fixed me up a dish and I remarked at the time that the quality was all right, but the quantity was too small—I wanted a saucerful."

"But she said a small amount of Grape-Nuts went a long way and that I must eat it according to directions. So I started in with Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft boiled eggs and some crisp toast for breakfast."

"I cut out meats and a lot of other stuff I had been used to eating all my life and was gratified to see that I was getting better right along. I concluded I had struck the right thing and stuck to it. I had not only been eating improper food, but too much."

"I was working at the carpenter's trade at that time and thought that unless I had a hearty breakfast with plenty of meat, I would play out before dinner. But after a few days of my 'new breakfast' I found I could do more work, felt better in every way, and now I am not bothered with indigestion."

POWER OF FARM-BRED BOY He is Not Coddled or Helped Over Rough Places as City Youth is, but Learns Independence.

(By E. VAN BENTHUYSEN.) The farm is the place to give the boy a good start in life. It is there that he learns independence of thought and action.

He is not coddled or helped over rough places as the city boy is. He is forced to depend upon himself; and at the age when the city boy is tied to his nurse's apron strings, the country lad not only takes care of himself but often assists materially in the farm work.

He rides horseback, goes afield with the team, investigates the habits of birds and animals, and acquires a thirst for knowledge.

The city boy moves in grooves that have been cut out for him by custom. He is herded in the city cars, crowded and driven like cattle. He must follow the crowd in the streets.

His vision is bounded by the lines of high buildings; he never sees the sun rise, or set; he is bound down by prejudices, dwarfed by mannerisms, and consumed by customs. The farm boy dreams of the outside world which he has never seen; he strains at the tether of his humdrum duties and sighs for bigger worlds to conquer.

He is fighting battles while pitching hay and running railroads while driving the reaper.

When he finally breaks away and goes to the city he is fortified with rugged health, courage and independence. The world looks easy to him. He is often disappointed but oftener he makes his dreams come true.

He is used to hardships. He does not whine when he is knocked down in the strife of the big city. He has learned to depend on his own resources. He has physical power and intellectual equipment to win over obstacles that would down the city boy.

The country is inspiring; the city is enervating and surfeiting. The country teaches the boy faith and perseverance and determination. He knows the seasons will bring their harvests and he learns philosophy and truth. So when he comes to the city he is strong and capable.

Many of the really big men who dominate the affairs in the big cities came from the farm. It is stated as a fact that seven-tenths of the men who control the banks and railroads and other great industries of Chicago and New York are farm-bred.

Not all the boys, however, who leave the farm succeed. Many fail because they have been forced to leave the farm on account of unfavorable conditions and are unfitted to cope with the larger affairs of life in the big cities. But those who do succeed rise to greater heights than city-bred boys with larger opportunities.

We doubt the wisdom of trying to keep boys on the farm who possess the courage and creative ability and determination which go to make great men in other lines of business. Let them go. These boys are not going to destruction in the city. Not by any means. The boy who has the right spirit and good home training seldom goes wrong. The cities call them and they are needed there to supply fresh blood and brains and energy to the ceaseless demands of civilization and world-wide endeavor.

But the demand for good men on the farm is also insistent. Boys who remain in the country and make the most of their opportunities cannot help but succeed in their calling—a calling as honorable and useful and satisfying as any other in the world.

Keep the Weeds Down. If you are expecting to follow your oats with alfalfa this fall do not allow the weeds to sap the moisture and plant food from the soil.

CO-OPERATION PAYS IN LYON

Farmers' Produce Association Saves $5,200 to Farmers Since Organization in December.

More than $5,200 has been saved to the farmers of Lyon county since the Lyon County Farmers' Produce association was organized in December. More than fifty thousand dollars worth of business has been done, and the saving on this business has averaged about 10 per cent, writes F. B. Nichols in Farmers' Mail and Breeze. There are now 200 members in this association and the membership is increasing. A. B. Hall, a farmer near Emporia, is manager.

"We believe that organization among farmers is essential, said Mr. Hall a few days ago. 'Almost all other classes are organized, and if the farmers wish to carry on their business in the most economical manner they must co-operate in buying and selling. We have shown that a farmers' organization will pay well, for we have saved more than $1,000 a month to the farmers of this county since we organized.'"

The association began business in December with less than 50 members, but the membership increased rapidly, just as soon as the producers of Lyon county saw that they could save money by joining. Emporia is quite a hay shipping center, and 38 cars, or 458 tons, were sold, mostly to Kansas buyers, the first month, at about $2 a ton gain over Kansas City prices. This meant a saving to the sellers of about $1,200, including the other business that was done, and it placed the new association on a good standing at once.

Since its beginning the association has sold 139 cars of hay, and a good saving was made on all of it. In addition 30 cars of corn, oats and other feed have been shipped in for use in Lyon county. The success of the association has been so good that the members were encouraged to issue the call for the state-wide meeting of the hay dealers of Kansas, which was held in Emporia, May 15. Five hundred of the hay shippers of Kansas met there at that time, and organization an association to fight the increase in hay rates on the Kansas City market from 50 to 75 cents a ton.

"A commission man's chief investment is a stenographer," said F. M. Arnold, president of the commercial State bank of Emporia, in discussing the change in the rate. "Besides her, he has a desk and a little stationery. There is no reason that the farmers can see for the commission men to crack up their price for handling hay. And the farmers are not going to stand for it. We have dozens of letters from farmers and hay growers in other counties who protest against paying nine dollars, commission on a car of hay, instead of six dollars. The success of the Lyon County association has suggested to them that the commission man can be eliminated on a large scale."

A strong farmers' association like the Lyon County Farmers' Produce association can help the producers in other ways besides in selling and buying. For example, it recently adjusted a dispute between the farmers and the Emporia Telephone company. When farmers are organized, they have a club that compels the public service organizations to give them a square deal.

"Some men say that farmers cannot get together in selling and buying, but we have shown that they can," said Mr. Hall. "So far we have a fine organization of earnest farmers, and every one is a booster. We hope that we can make our association a stepping stone to a larger organization to get laws to prevent gambling in farm products."

The Lyon County Farmers' Produce association is showing that co-operation among farmers is a success. It is paying in real money.

SCALY DANDRUFF ON HEAD

Shiner, Texas.—"I had dandruff so badly my head would itch and when I scratched it would hurt. My head was full of scaly dry dandruff and it became so thick that it scaled off and showed plainly. My head was almost white with it. It crusted and itched terribly. It got so bad I could hardly rest at night. My hair began to fall out and it was lifeless."

"I tried a bottle of —, but it did me little good. I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a sample. I applied the Cuticura Ointment to my scalp and frequently shampooed my head with the Cuticura Soap. After using one cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment my head was cured. Now I am free from dandruff and my hair is growing." (Signed) Miss Ida Ringhoffer, Mar. 28, 1914.

Infected Rabbits Stolen. Disease-infected rabbits, inoculated with the germs of tuberculosis and other diseases of a most dangerous nature, have been stolen from the laboratory of Doctor Bonney at Allaha, near Marselles. It is feared that the thieves may have already disposed of the stolen rabbits to provision dealers. Doctor Bonney, as soon as he discovered that the rabbits were missing, informed the police and asked that the widest publicity should be given to the fact in the local newspapers so that persons should beware of eating rabbits coming from a doubtful source. It is probable that for some time the consumption of rabbits in Marselles and neighborhood will drop considerably.

WOMAN OF MYSTERY DEAD

The famous "white lady," who never missed a day of the Dreyfus trials, has just died at Hyeres, France, aged sixty. About a month ago she arrived at Bormes and complained to the mayor that people were endeavoring to abduct her with the view of ultimately securing her property. As there was no evidence of any such plot the mayor merely advised her to make a will, and sent a notary to her lodging, but when he reached it he found that the lady had departed with Doctor Pett for Hyeres. She took the Villa Mathilde, where she has just died. Her real name was Mme. Joffroy d'Abbans. The procurer of Toulon immediately had seals affixed, and ordered a careful inventory of the objects in her traveling bag, which she always carried and which is supposed to contain about $50,000 in money and at least $150,000 in jewels. This, however, remains to be proved.

TRIALS OF ELDEST DAUGHTER

Her Position in the Family Sometimes Results in Making Her More or Less of a Drudge.

"I'm glad I'm not the oldest," remarked a pretty girl to her chum. "Why, Susan has to do almost everything at home; father thinks she ought to take the burden of housekeeping off mother's hands, and my brother wants her to wait on him as if she were a servant—he knows better than to ask me to do anything for him—says I'm spoiled—and you just bet I'm glad I'm the youngest girl!"

Too often the eldest daughter is made a drudge, and there is not the proper amount of respect and regard for the girl whose labors take the place of a maid. She is expected to run errands, help with the care and amusement of the children, teach them lessons. What wonder that such a girl will take the first opportunity for work as a means to escape from these unpaid labors, or accept an offer of marriage in order to live apart from a family who do not even try to make her home life comfortable and pleasant.

But I am glad to say that not always is the position of "elder daughter" such an unappreciated one; in some households she is beloved and respected, at the same time expected to fulfill whatever duties may fall to her lot. Her sisters and brothers are taught that they must return any service she may perform for them with due appreciation, if nothing more, and they soon learn that her place is an honored one, instead of being unenviable.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.
