CAMPAIGN WILL BE COSTLY AFFAIR
ESTIMATED RACE FOR PRESIDENT WILL ENTAIL ENORMOUS EXPENDITURES.
$25,000,000 IS THE ESTIMATE

Claimed That Preparations Are Being Made By Both Parties To Open Huge Barrels—Investigation May Not Be Made.

Washington. — Twenty-five million dollars is the estimate of the amount of money that probably will be spent by all political parties in order to elect the next president of the United States.
This figure—considered an underestimate, at that—embraces every class of expenditure not only in the national, but in the state committees. The writer is assured by the persons who are likely to be in on the financing of the national campaign when the conventions have nominated their candidates that in all probability the national committees themselves will not spend more than a few millions each. Indeed, it is questionable whether the Democrats or Republicans will show on their official records more than $5,000,000 each.

But throughout the union in the states it is fully expected that many millions of dollars will be spent and there is no real way to get at the facts, because the federal government has no jurisdiction over state elections. It is in making the canvass for state officers that money is spent for the top of the national ticket and for congressional candidates.

The truth is that the present investigation of expenditures in the primary campaigns is making the seasoned financiers of political campaigns smile. A mere half million dollars is nothing compared to the big sums that will be spent in these identical states.
Preparations are being made for the most lavish expenditures in the history of American political campaigns. The investigation thus far shows that large sums of money are being spent for publicity and advertising, but that fabulous amounts are put in the hands of "party workers." Some states have laws which limit the expenditures in state campaigns; but the laxity of the more populous states, where the big electoral votes come from, enables the politician to lay his plans so that he does not come under the jurisdiction of the federal government.

But if anybody supposes that all of this is going to happen without some spectacular intervention, such as came in the primary campaigns, he is very much mistaken. The senate committee may not have made up its mind as to what it will do during the summer, but it seems certain that as soon as the conventions have chosen their men, and an extra session of congress is called, there will be pressure to continue the investigations.
Some Republicans have said that it would furnish a splendid opportunity to investigate the Democratic nominee, inasmuch as too much publicity has already been given the financial efforts of the various Republican aspirants for the presidential nomination.

But it is hardly likely that the Democrats, who are in possession of an other investigation branch of the government, would let the matter rest there. If Attorney General Palmer is not the Democratic nominee, or if he resigns to make the campaign and another attorney general is appointed, the chances are that the Democrats will do a little investigating, too.

WILSON VETOES THE BUDGET BILL
PRESIDENT OF OPINION IT TAKES AUTHORITY FROM EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
HOUSE FAILS TO OVERRIDE

Chief Executive in Sympathy With General Purpose of Measure, but Part of It Conflicts with Constitution.
Washington.—President Wilson vetoed the bill establishing a national budget system and an unsuccessful attempt was made in the house to pass the measure over his veto.
Notifying congress that he was returning the bill without his signature, President Wilson in his veto message said:

"I do this with the greatest regret. I am in entire sympathy with the objects of this bill and would gladly approve it, but for the fact that I regard one of the provisions contained in section 363 as unconstitutional. This is the provision to the effect that the comptroller general and the assistant comptroller general, who are to be appointed by the president, with the advice and consent of the senate, may be removed at any time by a concurrent resolution of congress after notice and hearing, when in their judgment the comptroller general or assistant comptroller general is incapacitated or inefficient or has been guilty of neglect of duty, or of malfeasance of office or of any felony or conduct involving moral turpitude. The effect of this is to prevent the removal of these officers for any cause except either by impeachment or a concurrent resolution of congress. It has, I think, always been the accepted construction of the constitution that the power to appoint officers of this kind carried with it, as an incident, the power to remove. I am convinced that the congress is without constitutional powers to limit the appointing power and its incident power of removal derived from the constitution.

"The section referred to not only forbids the executive to remove these officers, but undertakes to empower the congress by a concurrent resolution to remove any officer appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate. I can find in the constitution no warrant for the exercise of this power by the congress. There is certainly no expressed authority conferred and I am unable to see that authority for the exercise of this power is implied in any expressed grant of power. On the contrary, I think its exercise is clearly negated by section two of article II. That section, after providing that certain enumerated officers and all officers whose appointment is not otherwise provided for shall be appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate, provides that congress may by law invest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the president alone, in the course of law, or in the heads of departments. It would have been within the constitutional power of the congress in creating these offices to have vested the power of appointment in the president alone, in the president with the advice and consent of the senate, or even in the head of a department. Regarding as I do the power of removal from office as an essential incident to the appointing power, I cannot escape the conclusion that the vesting of this power of removal in the congress is unconstitutional, and therefore I am unable to approve the bill.

"I am returning the bill the earliest possible moment with the hope that the congress may find time before adjournment to remedy this defect."

SAY EDUCATION IS DELAYED
House Committee Charges Inexcusable Delays and Recommends Board Under Treasury Department.
Washington.—The federal board for vocational education was charged in a formal report by the house committee with "inexcusable delays" in the rehabilitation of soldiers. The report, however, noted "a general improvement in the work" and commended the increasing efficiency.

Establishment of state offices to speed up the placing of the veterans in training was recommended by the committee, which also urged congress to appropriate $200,000 to be added to a similar fund by the Order of Elks for loans to disabled soldiers while in training. The committee also recommended that the vocational board be made a bureau of the treasury department.

Wage Decision Soon.
Chicago.—Judge R. M. Barton, chairman of the United States railroad labor board, announced the board would try to make a temporary decision on wage demands within a week. The board then adjourned indefinitely.
