

DODSON STOPS SALE OF CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" is Taking Place of Dangerous, Sickening Chemical, Say Druggists

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.—Adv.

TRAVEL OF FOODSTUFFS BETWEEN RAILWAY AND ULTIMATE CONSUMER

A Glimpse of the Long and Costly Route Which Most of Our Foodstuffs Travel Between the Railway and the Consumer.

A line from a popular song—"There's a Long, Long Trail A-winding"—applies to at least one of the many and devious paths which old man H. C. L. treads in his effort to make living complex and expensive for the average person.

The particular byway referred to is that which wholesale shipments of food follow in their costly travel from the railway car to the retailer. A carload of fruit or vegetables can be sped half way across the continent in a day or two, but on arriving in the city where the food is to be retailed, the shipment starts on a winding trail which too often adds little but unnecessary costs and delay.

Eliminating Expensive Carting.
This expensive shunting and hauling of foodstuffs from point to point in the cities and the spoilage which the unnecessary handling causes are the big items centralized wholesale terminals eliminate. The bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, has been on the trail, literally, following shipments step by step to determine how much expense is added to the cost of food by unnecessary handling between the shipper and the retailer. The route followed by a carload of peaches entering a middle Western city over a railroad not provided with team tracks well illustrates this phase of the distribution problem.

This car had to be switched from the railroad on which it entered the city, through the crowded switch yard, to another track which is accessible to teams. Here it stood until the receiving wholesalers' teamsters could finish another job. After this delay two wagons were drawn up beside the car. In turn, and were loaded with the peaches. Thereupon they started for the wholesale house which was two miles away.

The teamsters' route lay through the most congested part of the city, the wholesale district being close to the busy retail section. The wagons were a full hour and a quarter making the trip. Meanwhile, the sun beat down on the peaches and the city's dust, and dirt filtered in through the crates so that the fruit was far from being as fresh and attractive as when taken from the car. Moreover, the journey so jostled and bruised the fruit that some of it had to be sold at a discount.

Though the wholesalers were particularly anxious to get the peaches delivered to their sales room on the day of arrival, because of the favorable market, only about one-third of the shipment came in by closing time, and it was noon the next day before the remainder was delivered.

The long, winding trail did not end at the wholesalers'. Once unloaded, the peaches were put on display for the benefit of various jobbers, some of whom purchased a few dozen crates and some larger amounts. Some of these men were situated within two or three squares of the wholesaler and their purchases were delivered on hand trucks. In the case of other jobbers another wagon transfer was necessary.

Next in this process which economists call distribution, came the retailers to look over the lots, in the end buying small quantities such as they could sell in a day or two. This, of course, necessitated another handling and carting over the city's rough pavements.

Cartage Is Costly.
This instance is no exaggeration. A very large part of the foodstuffs brought to American cities goes over some such devious trail. One Washington (D. C.) wholesale merchant has stated that he spends $20,000 a year for cartage which could be saved if the city had a wholesale terminal where cars could be unloaded directly into premises occupied by the wholesalers. Following an investigation in New York city it was estimated by a local organization that the saving in handling costs which would result if adequate terminal facilities were established would be $2,000,000 annually by the borough of Richmond; $8,000,000 by Queens; $16,000,000 by the Bronx; $21,000,000 by Brooklyn, and an even vaster sum by Manhattan.

Marketing experts admit that there are many baffling aspects to the high-cost-of-living problem, but contend that the remedy for the phase of our costly distribution system just described is plain. Cities which will provide modern wholesale terminals, where shipments can be delivered from the railroad cars direct to wholesalers a few feet away, will make possible the saving of immense sums of money now charged up to the consumer.

TO USE FINE MORGAN SIRE IN EXPERIMENT

To Further Study of Breed for Saddle Purposes.

Two-Year-Old Stallion Lucky Sent From Vermont Farm to Famous Ranch in Texas—Breeders Are Much Interested.

To further the study of the Morgan as a saddle breed, the United States department of agriculture has sent the two-year-old Morgan stallion Lucky from the Morgan horse farm at Middlebury, Vt., to the Santa Gertrudis ranch at Kingsville, Tex. This is the "home ranch" of the famous King ranch, one of the largest and best-known cattle and horse breeding establishments in the United States. The bureau of animal industry is paying close attention to the saddle possibilities of the Morgan horse. The King ranch will breed Lucky to some of its high-class mares.

Lucky is a brown stallion 14½ hands high and weighs 925 pounds. He was sired by Hugo. Hugo was sired by Meteor Morgan and is out of Calve by General Gates. The dam of Lucky is Eunice by General Gates and out of Caroline by Daniel Lambert. Lucky, his sire and dam, and one of his grand dams were bred at the government farm at Middlebury.

FAVOR UNIFORM CONTAINERS

First Essential to the Most Profitable Marketing Is Standardized Products.

One of the first essentials to satisfactory marketing arrangements is standardized products. Cans, jars and other containers should be uniform in pack, appearance, quality and condition. Every container which is fully up to the standard represented by the label or brand will then be an advertisement in itself and often a guaranty to further purchases.

Harvesting Oats.
Oats should be harvested when in the dough stage, since at that time they give a maximum yield and the greatest weight.

Avoid Smutty Seed.
Do not use seed from smutty fields without treating. Smut can be prevented by treatment with formalin.

Buying Purebreds.
Buyers of purebred live stock should insist upon pedigrees being furnished at the time the stock is paid for.

BOYS SURPASS THEIR ELDERS

Total Purebred Stock in Idaho Community Increased to 25 Per Cent by Young People.

It is estimated that only 3 per cent of the cattle in the United States are registered, and experts say that an increase of 2 per cent accomplished in from five to ten years is a mark well worth aiming at.

Out in Ustick, near Boise City, the boys have shattered this record, according to a report brought in by a United States department of agriculture field worker who recently visited the community. These boys, acting upon their own initiative, and aided by agents of the department and the State College of Agriculture, bought 19 head of purebred stock, thus increasing the total for their community 25 per cent.

MITES AND LICE INJURIOUS

Little Pests Sap Vitality of Fowls and Prevent Growth or Lessen Egg Production.

Mites and lice frequently sap the vitality of the fowl and prevent growth or lessen the egg production. A thorough cleaning of the house, regular applications of disinfectants to the roosts and nests, and a frequent dusting of the fowls will control these pests.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Store your grain.

Keep weeds from seeding.

If your soil is sour add ground limestone.

A big increase is coming in the number of silos in the middle West.

Millet is customarily seeded at the rate of three or four pecks per acre.

Boards or paper are good materials for bleaching celery at this time of the year. Dirt is apt to cause decay of the stems.

Want to wear your tractor out quickly? Stopped tubes that do not carry grease to the journal and loose cup covers are both excellent ways.

A woodlot without a good stand of young trees coming up to take the place of the old ones is like a family without any children. What is going to become of it?

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

HALF-BIRTHDAY.

"It does amuse me," said Mr. Moon, "the way people love to sleep out-of-doors."

"Why should that amuse you?" asked a little star. "Don't you like to sleep out?"

"Ha, ha!" laughed Mr. Moon. "I should say I did."

"Then why does it amuse you that others should like to sleep out?" asked the little star. "We all like to be outdoors. We would be wretched inside. In fact I cannot imagine what a star would do if it had to go to bed in a bed instead of in the sky where all night long it can dream behind the clouds if it is a cloudy night, or if it is a fine night we can beam and shine and keep wide awake."

"I simply cannot imagine what a star would do if it wasn't in the sky. But why do you seem so amused at people sleeping out-of-doors?"

"You cannot understand that?" asked Mr. Moon.

"I cannot understand it," said the star, "for of all creatures I should say you would be the last to be amused at such a thing."

"I am amused," said Mr. Moon, "because they think it is such a lark and such a treat. I've seen them down on yonder porch getting ready to go to bed and they're so happy about it. They all simply love going to bed. And they look up at me and say good-night to me, and oh, they are so very happy."

"But does that amuse you?" asked the star.

"It amuses me," said Mr. Moon, "because as I said they consider it such a lark and such a treat. Now here I am and here you are and here are the other stars and we're so used to being out-of-doors at night that we don't think it is any treat at all. Of course we would be miserable if we were indoors, but we cannot feel being out-of-doors is a lark because it is where we always are. So they do amuse me as they laugh over sleeping out-of-doors and as they talk over the great, great treat it is."

"Oh," said the star, "I see now why you are so amused."

"Did you know I had a half birthday party tonight?" asked the moon.

"A half birthday party?" asked the star. "What in the world is that?"

"Don't you know?" asked the moon. The star blinked her eyes and shook her head. "I don't know," Mr. Moon said. "I've never heard of a half birthday party before."

"Well," said Mr. Moon, "you see that I am a half moon. Tonight don't you?"

"Yes," said the star.

"And before I came out this evening I put on my red robe which I wear on my birthdays—or the days I call my birthdays—just as Mr. Sun wears his on his birthdays. I didn't wear it as I usually do—covering myself with it—but I just draped it or hung it near me so I would get the glow of the color. And as I'm only a half moon these nights of course I call a birthday at this time my half birthday."

"Do you see now?"

The star was shaking with laughter.

"Of course, I see now, Mr. Moon, how stupid of me not to have understood before."

"And," said Mr. Moon, "that is something I can have that all creatures can't have. A child can't have a half-birthday for a child is never a half-child."

"That is where Mr. Moon has a sort of birthday no one else has."

"Well," said the star, "maybe children are glad they don't have half-birthdays for half-birthdays might mean half presents and I'm sure they wouldn't like that so much."

"True, true," said Mr. Moon. "Yes, I fancy it is just as well only Mr. Moon has half-birthdays for Mr. Moon wants no presents, only he wants smiles from grown-ups and children and twinkles from his friends, the stars."

"You'll have all of those things always," said the star.

Many Shades of Opinion.
"Hiram," said Mrs. Coratossel, "you haven't said anything about politics lately?"

"What's the use?" rejoined her husband. "No matter what I happen to be thinking, I know that somebody else is saying it just as emphatically as I could say it, and with a much bigger audience than I could command."

The Excuse.
"Yes, my husband was downtown very late last night."

"What excuse did he have to offer?"

"A ten dollar bill. I accepted it."

Willing to Double It.
Bobby (aged six)—Please give me a nickel, Uncle Jack.

Uncle Jack—Why, little pal, I thought you were too big to beg for a nickel.

Little Bobby—That's so, Uncle Jackie. Make it a dime.

Bearing False Witness.
A little girl at Sunday school, being asked what it meant to bear false witness against one's neighbor, replied: "It is when nobody hasn't done nothin' and somebody goes and tells it."

SEEMED LIKE AN IMPOSITION

Parvenu Couldn't Understand Why Musician Hadn't Come With Instruments Tuned.

HAD HIGH AMBITION FOR SON
Father Wouldn't Be Satisfied Until He Saw Him in a Really Proud Position.

Herman Finck, the noted English composer, tells the following amusing story of a somewhat ambitious attempt of a member of the newly rich to grasp matters musical. He said: "My grandfather used to direct a small orchestra of about half a dozen, which could be hired for dances, parties and weddings, and even (on one occasion only) for funerals, but that's another yarn. Well, the orchestra one night made its appearance at the house of the type of parvenu we should call nowadays a war profiteer. The guests were assembled and the fiddlers and so on were crowded up in the usual corner with the ferns and things. Suddenly the host approached. "Whatever's this horrible noise you're making?" he said. "Rotten piece, I call it!"

"This isn't a piece," replied my grandfather; "we're tuning up, that's all!"

"Tuning up? I engaged you over two months ago, and you're tuning up now?"

Marital Spite.
"I'd like to see my wife go to the polls to vote."

Well Acquainted.
Mrs. Bacon—How long since your new neighbor moved in?
Mrs. Egbert—Two months.
"And do you know them yet?"
"Oh, my, yes. They began borrowing things the first week they moved in!"

Just So.
"Can you give me an outside room?"
"I can give you a hammock in the alley or a cot in the yard," said the hotel proprietor.

"The grass doesn't quit because it is stepped on."

"I see. All outside rooms."
