

THE DALLAS CONVENTION.

Nominations Made Yesterday—A Lively Episode.

The second day of the democratic convention yesterday at Dallas dispatched business rapidly. There were no dissents from the report of the committee on credentials and no contests for seats. The nominations and elections of state officers went through almost without dissent.

Col. R. M. Wynne, of Fort Worth, nominated Ross, and Senator Bell and Bally, of Cooke, seconded the nomination. Ross was nominated by acclamation by a rising vote. The governor was called for and made an appropriate speech.

Nominations for lieutenant-governor were then declared in order. Judge McLeary, of Bexar, nominated Hon. John Wood, of Lavaca. Col. Tate, of Wood, nominated Lieutenant Governor T. B. Wheeler. The first ballot resulted: Wheeler, 527; Wood, 294, lacking one vote of nominating. Second ballot: Wheeler, 586; Wood, 292-23-30.

Judge Wheeler was declared the nominee for lieutenant-governor.

Nominations for the judges of the supreme court being next in order, Chief Justice Statton was nominated by acclamation. For associate justices, Judges John R. Henry, of Dallas; Gaines, of Paris and Walker of Austin, were placed in nomination. First ballot: Gaines 674; Walker 428; Henry 480. The nomination of Judge Gaines was made unanimous by a rising vote. A second ballot being ordered, the result was as follows: Walker 340; Henry 442. When ballot had been announced, Hon. A. W. Terrell took the stand and in a brief and eloquent speech withdrew Walker's name. Sawnie Robertson moved that John L. Henry be nominated by acclamation. The question was put and Judge Henry was declared the nominee. The convention then adjourned until this morning at 9 o'clock.

An episode occurred during the vote for associate justice in which Russel Kingsbury of Waco played a conspicuous part, in an effort to secure the nomination of Walker. The convention was in great disorder before ballot so that order was about impossible. The following is the Dallas News' account of the episode in which Kingsbury seems to have come out all right at last:

The chair appointed D. P. Gay of Runnels, J. L. Joiner of Robertson, assistant sergeants-at-arms, to aid in suppressing disorder, and the ballot commenced amid the turmoil which attends the birth of the judiciary. The vote stood Walker 428; Gaines 674; Henry 480; Gaines was then nominated unanimously by a rising vote, and the convention proceeded to ballot again, Vice-President Grace of Fannin in chair. At the outset a clerical confusion was encountered from some person voting for Walker whenever a county was called. The secretary would say, "please repeat the vote of the county," and this third party would cast its vote for Walker, sometimes giving that candidate a double vote. At length presiding officer Grace exclaimed with seeming meaning: "They claim this man Kingsbury from McLennan county, is bothering this convention. Take him out; will some of the sergeants-at-arms take him out? I care not to where." Acting under this authority three assistant sergeants-at-arms proceeded to bounce Delegate Kingsbury, but he did not propose to submit to any such treatment and a scuffle ensued in the course of which while Sergeant-at-arms McDonald was holding on to his collar, he got in a lick at assistant Sergeant-at-arms Bill Smith just then Assistant Sergeant-at-arms Joe Record came to the rescue and gave Delegate Kingsbury a push ahead, causing the demolition of a chair. Just then the band struck up a ringing air, and the circus was complete with the judiciary in the heart of the menagerie. After a protracted struggle Delegate Kingsbury, who had struggled like a Trojan, was taken out. Just then a Paris man, slightly out of the perpendicular, strolled in and screamed, "I want to vote for Lubbock, and give the lie to the man who accused Jeff Davis of stealing, and then I'll be ready to leave the d—d town and never come back."

Having thus delivered himself, he climbed up on the platform and started to make a speech about Lubbock, but before the leading sentence had passed his lips, two assistant sergeants-at-arms fired him over the fence, the order of his flight being head down and heels up.

At that moment a voice was heard saying:

"I rise to a question of personal privilege."

That announcement came from Delegate Kingsbury, who had returned to assert his rights. After some squabbling he was invited to the platform, where he proceeded: "Gentlemen of the convention, and ladies, if there be any present: I came here as a delegate from one of the grandest counties in the state—McLennan. I was selected by a committee to represent that county in this and other conventions. I have not had one particle of animosity in my heart toward any party who occupies the arena which I see spread out before me now. [Applause.] When I was accosted by those gentlemen who facilitated my exit there breathed not a man in this building who could have been more surprised than I was." [Laughter.] Mr. Kingsbury reminded the convention that he was the man who had borne the Texas banner in St. Louis when Cleveland was nominated and he planted that self-same banner on the platform amid the applause of his friends, who appeared to be many and who then escorted him to his seat.

STATE CONVENTION

Of the Colored Christian Church.

To the Evening News. The Colored Christian State Convention assembled at 9:15 a. m., Aug. 15, in the Christian church with a very appreciative audience.

Owing to the absence of the president Elder F. Collins of Palestine, the assistant secretary, M. T. Brown, called the convention to order, and Elder H. S. Howell, of Dallas, was appointed president pro tem.

There seemed to be some dissatisfaction among the delegates as to the propriety of holding the convention on the east side, and after a warm discussion in favor of the west side a committee was appointed to see the proper authorities for getting a hall on the west side. I may say that the sentiments of the audience generally were in favor of the west side, and it is hoped that the committee will be successful so that a large hall may be opened free to all.

After the report of various committees the audience listened to a well prepared paper on temperance by Elder M. T. Brown, after which the morning session adjourned till 1 p. m., when promptly at the hour the convention was opened by devotional exercises. The subject of Pastoral Theology was then discussed at some length. The next discussion on the need of missionary work. This discussion seemed to lay heavy on the delegates, who seemed to lack life and energy in their debate until Elder Wood from Matagorda gained the floor, when he held the audience spell bound for at least thirty minutes, and when the speaker left the floor all were eager with excitement. Elder Taylor then delivered the closing remarks in a very fitting manner. X

Arrested for Train Wrecking.

Two parties are in custody charged with wrecking the Texas Central train in which wreck the engineer, Moses, was killed. The first is Tom Poe, a man well known in Waco, and who lives near the place of the wreck. His arrest was peculiar and there is, in the opinion of good judges, nothing in the case. About midnight on Tuesday night one J. K. Daniels, of Ross, went to County Attorney Blair, charging Poe with being the wrecker. Capt. Blair sent him to Justice Sleeper, at whose residence he arrived about two o'clock on Wednesday morning. Here he made an affidavit against Poe, and a warrant was issued for Poe's arrest, and Daniels was commissioned to arrest him. Daniels went back to Ross and arrested Poe, and yesterday came back to Waco with him in custody and turned him over to the officers. Daniels and Poe are said to be neighbors and to be at outs. This is, however, mere rumor. Poe was at the jail to-day in a condition which did not admit an interview, and is said to have been half crazed by his arrest. Subpoenas were issued for witnesses this afternoon and the preliminary hearing, set for two o'clock, but the witnesses are mainly at Ross and the hearing at that hour is hardly possible.

Poe, while somewhat dissipated and frolicsome, is said to be a good man, wholly incapable of such a deed as wrecking a train and killing women and children. He served through the war side by side with brave men, being in the troops with Gen. Ross and Bill Harris. He is himself a brave man and of his courage and good heartedness officers and others speak highly.

LATER—At 4 o'clock neither witnesses nor Daniels were to be found, and the case was dismissed. A good deal of indignation was expressed that it should ever have been begun.

On Tuesday Capt. J. M. Waller, of the Hall & Waller, detective agency, arrested one Jim Jones, a colored man living close to the place where the train was wrecked, and brought him to the city on Tuesday night keeping him closely secreted till last night when he was turned over at a late hour to the officers and is now in jail. Capt. Waller kept his prisoner in profound secrecy until the moment of placing him in jail. What the evidence against the negro is, is not known, but from the known ability of the gentlemen who conduct the detective agency, by which he was captured, it is pretty certain that the arrest was not made for nothing.

Tried on a Charge of Subjary.

Jim Sterlin, colored who was arrested and jailed by Constable Lee Jenkins, was up for hearing before Justice Makeig, to-day. Sterling was first arrested on a charge of entering the buggy house of Mrs. Sam Sanger about the 6th, of last July and stealing a set of harness valued at about $25. Some time after the man's confinement in jail it was discovered that circumstance pointed to him as also being the party who burglarized the buggy house of Capt. T. A. Blair and stole two sets of harness valued at $45. He was to have a preliminary hearing in both charges but on account of the necessary absence of Mr. John, Winfrey a witness in the case the trial was postponed until to-morrow.
