Another accident has been caused by horses becoming frightened on the approach of fifth street bridge over Barron's Branch. A negro attempted to drive R. C. Green & Co's baggage wagon over the bridge yesterday afternoon when one horse became frightened and ran upon his mate with such a shock that he was knocked down and fell against the parapet braking it down. The harness was quickly loosed and the horse got up but in doing so he lost his balance and fell over the edge of the embankment falling fully twelve feet to the ground.

THE GRAND JURY.

A Remarkable Document Reviewed By a Citizen.

To the Editor of the News:

The charge of the grand jury as published Sunday morning contained some very remarkable statements, of which the following is the most striking: "In regard to the sale of lottery tickets, to which your honor directed special attention, the grand jury finds that there is considerable traffic in lottery tickets, and without any effort at concealment. The individuals engaged in this traffic are not of the class usually known as law-breakers and claim that their transactions are entirely legal. The grand jury has, therefore, in the exercise of its discretion, presented only a few bills for this offense, being assured that if on trial it is found that the law is being violated, the persons engaged therein will desist of their own will."

Which being interpreted reads: Your honor has instructed us that selling lottery tickets is a direct violation of the law, but we differ with your honor on that point because "there is considerable traffic in lottery tickets, and without any concealment," and moreover, because "the individuals engaged in this traffic are not of the class usually known as law breakers, and claim that their transactions are entirely legal." Yes judge, we know the law better than you do, but we will bring a "few" indictments against these parties just to show you how quickly the cases will fall through when brought up for trial. But if you prove to us and these gentlemen indicted that you do know the law better than we do and insist on punishing them, we believe that they will go out of business.

Then follows another remarkable statement:

"The city has jurisdiction of the laws against gambling, and violations of the Sunday law, and a force of nine or ten policemen for enforcing the law, and yet these laws are not enforced."

The Sunday law and the laws against gaming are state laws and to county officers is given the work of seeing these laws enforced. There are nine justice courts in the county and one county court, nine constables and about as many deputy sheriffs, a grand jury and a county attorney, elected to carry out these laws, and yet the grand jury says they "are not enforced." Why is the county attorney not instructed to use the gigantic machinery of the state to enforce these laws? The police are not detectives, nor are they deputy sheriffs, strictly speaking, but their principle business is to keep the streets quiet, and prevent the cows from eating the new city hall.

The grand jury is again wrong in accusing Bob Simmons of treachery in the jail delivery. He was a prisoner, and it seems from the evidence given by the jailer that Bob Simmons did attempt to warn him of the danger, but his signals were misunderstood. Moreover the real cause of the jail delivery, which has been explained by the newspapers and the sheriff, was that there was no guard employed to assist the jailer, and the operation of the jail is exceedingly dangerous where there is only one man employed to look after it.

FIVE SNAKE STORIES.

A farmer in Ashton, Miss., recently ran across a five foot gopher snake which was pure white in color.

A horned snake, eighteen inches long, with a horn one and a quarter inches, was killed last week in Rockwood, Tenn.

Mr. Meelne, of Pittsburg, caught, while fishing at Atlantic City the other day, a snake of very curious shape, strongly resembling the famous jabberwock. He will preserve it in alcohol for the curiosity of future generations.

Mr. Jordan, the section boss, and his hands, while cutting the bushes from the right of way near Osage, Ga., killed sixty-seven innocents. Mr. Jordan struck at the sixty-eighth and cut off his tail, remarking that it was not a good day for snakes.

Mrs. M. B. Shultz, of Bonfont, N. Y., while picking some berries recently, heard her little dog, which had followed her, yelp and bark peculiarly. Rushing to the spot Mrs. Shultz was horrified to find a large black snake wound tightly around the dog's body. With great difficulty Mrs. Shultz killed the reptile, but the little dog remained prostrate with fear for several hours. The afternoon of the same day Mrs. Shultz killed another snake of the same variety.

STRANGE MARRIAGES.

Peter the Great married a peasant, who was his best counselor and trust friend. M. de Lessop married at the age of 63 Mlle. de Braga, who was not quite 19 years of age.

The wife of Jeremy Taylor, the great English divine, was the natural daughter of Charles I.

The countess of Waldegrave has been married four times. Her present husband is the famous Lord Collingford.

Shakespeare's marriage to Anne Hathaway was an example of inequality, both in age and in intellect. He was 19 and she 25 when they were married.

Milton married unfortunately, and his wife's temper was not unlike that of Mrs. Wesley's, the wife of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism.

John Howard, the philanthropist, married, out of gratitude, a lady twenty years his senior. She died in a few years, and he married again, this time for love.

Lady Bunsford was thirty years older than Disraeli, but the great premier did not realize any difference in age, so remarkably suited were they to each other.

The poet Browning has recently stated the fact that Elizabeth Barrett was six years older than himself at the time of their marriage, she being 40, he 34 years.

Samuel Johnson at 21 married a woman of 48. They lived together twenty-two years, and when she died Johnson refused to be consoled. He never married again.

George Eliot married Mr. Lewes, although his first wife was living and he had but a limited divorce from her. Soon after Lewes died she married John Walter Cross, who was much younger than she was.

Baroness Burdett Courts forfeited her interest in Courts' bank by marrying William Ashmead Bartlett. He is an American by birth, and at the time of his marriage was 31 years of age and his bride was 67, and the richest woman in the world.

A most unequal marriage which turned out happily, was that of Charles, second Duke of Richmond and Sarah Cadogan, which was a bargain to conceal a gambling debt between their parents, Lady Sarah being a co-heiress. The duke was 18, the bride was 18.

A marriage that was unequal as to years, was that of Mohammed and his wife. The latter was twenty years older than the former, but the union was a congenial one, as the prophet had predicted it would be. He outlived his wife and mourned her loss until he died.

The present Bonaparte family have made some strange matches. Prince Pierre married Mlle. Kiffin, a poor sewing woman. Three times the marriage ceremony was performed, and each time at a different place, so as to baffle Napoleon III, who had it twice annulled.

The Princess Louise of England married her social inferior and a gentleman younger than herself. Lord Lorne, it is claimed, had royal blood in his veins, but the Duke of Argyll, his father, made no such pretensions, though the house of Argyll is the most aristocratic in England.

The beautiful widow, Fitzherbert, who became the wife of George IV, when Prince of Wales, was 32 years of age when she was secretly married to him. The inequality of this marriage was in the difference of station and not of age, the husband being a prince of the blood and the wife a subject.

Hon. Caroline Elizabeth Sarah Norton, the granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan and sister to the Duchess of Somerset and the Countess of Dufferin, was the divorced wife of the Hon. Chappell Norton. At 80 years, when confined to her chair by rheumatism, she married William Sterling Maxwell, twenty years her junior. Strange to say the match was a happy one.
