If you want to see lively times once more just go to the lumber yards of Ed. Steves & Sons, and your eyes will behold a scene of activity nowhere else to be found in San Antonio. This firm are liberal and enterprising, and believe in advertising, and their motto is quick sales and small profits, giving their customers the benefit of low prices and turning goods over faster than they can buy money for themselves. This firm, for the past week, has received from 25 to 30 carloads of lumber and other building material daily. They are selling and shipping equally as fast. Ed. Steves & Sons have set a good example for the way of doing business in San Antonio. They will sell goods at reasonable prices, and advertise the facts, and will sell a little less than their own price.

Rice & Ryan.

These gentlemen are the successors of Sessions & Co. They are both well known as good business men. Their card appears in to-day's issue, and the Locomotive appears to all who are in need of hay, grain, feed, coal, salt and oyster post. Their office and warehouses are at 230 Houston street.

INTERESTING between public men and alleged newspaper correspondents are about as uncertain as to know when lightning will strike. Last summer several Texas Congressmen got into a pickle and were made to say things they did not want, and went at length to counteract the statements made, and now Mr. Wash Jones is the last to repudiate an interview, and his letter published in the Locomotive yesterday should at least receive the consideration of fairness for he says in all his political life he has never been so outraged, and considering Mr. Jones' experience in the past, this is saying a good deal.

J. H. KAMPMANN.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY OF SAN ANTONIO.

The Kampmann Block - A Description of the Bank-Safety Deposit Vault.

In all parts of the United States constant complaint is being made of late at the depression of commercial interests. In our city of San Antonio this spirit of complaint is especially prevalent, pessimists say the town is doomed and that it is too apathetic to ever make much progress. If a careful comparison be made between San Antonio and other Texas towns and even in most Northern cities, it will be found that there is no sign of substantial and progressive element in this city that any other at the present time, and this assertion means a great deal in a time as at present, when the whole world is suffering from commercial depression. Buildings it to adorn any city in the States are continually springing up among us—structures that are the result of thrift, perseverance and untiring industry. Possibly the greatest example of this in San Antonio can be found in the Kampmann block at the corner of Commerce and Soledad streets. This magnificent erection, the greater part of which is occupied by Lockwood & Kampmann, was commenced in 1883 by Major J. H. Kampmann, the owner, he being his own architect and builder. The building is about 100 feet high, and has four stories, and the style of architecture rather inclines to the decorative.

The bank premises occupy the basement and first story, from the corner of Commerce street, the other portion is built for two large stores. In entering the bank the most striking object is the beautiful and artistic brass work which encloses the clerks and cashier. The office is fitted up with the most modern inventions, the floor being isolated with coiled wire. The entire building is fireproof. The ceilings and floors are divided into arches, made by rafters, of iron, placed at certain distance apart, and these are braced with bricks and asbestos cement. In the basement are the safe vaults, each having two locks, the key to the inner one being held by the renter, while the outer lock, which is held by the proprietor, is held by the proprietor.

The rents of the deposit drawers vary, according to size, from $5 to $15 per year. There is also convenient storage for boxes, trunks, etc., which will deposit plate, silver and bulky articles of value. In the basement are the safe vaults, each having two locks, the key to the inner one being held by the renter, while the outer lock, which is held by the proprietor, is held by the proprietor.

In addition to the safe vaults, there are also lockers for the deposit of jewelry, watches, etc., and the proprietor is prepared to receive and store any articles of value.

The building is a fine example of modern architecture, and its completion is a great credit to the city.

74TH ANNIVERSARY.

SOCIEDAD MUTUALISTA MEXICANA CELEBRATION.

Procession of Mexican Citizens From Military Plaza to the Springs-Fireworks, Etc.

Last night was the 74th anniversary of Mexican independence. On September 16, 1810, 12 o'clock midnight, the Curate Hidalgo, in the town of Morales, Mexico, gave the battle cry of freedom, "Viva la Independencia de Mexico y Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe." Before that battle cry was given the Spaniards had overrun the greater part of Mexico, and a large force was then near the city of Morales, and the town was garrisoned by a Spanish force. When the curate arose and the other side through the streets iterating and reiterating the cry of freedom, and the populace followed him, arming themselves with weapons of every description. The curate led them and they marched to where these Spaniards were garrisoned. With cries of "Viva la Independencia," the Mexicans fell upon the invaders with such fury that the Spanish force was completely subdued.

The news of this bold step for liberty and the progress of the curate and the people of Morales spread like wild fire throughout the land, and awakened a new and different interest for the independence of Mexico. The consequence was that the dominion of Spain in Mexico was overthrown and thus that cry of "Viva la Independencia y nuestra Señora de Guadalupe" is the legend of Mexican independence, and the Curate Hidalgo is the father of that independence. To-day, no matter where he be, whether rich or poor, the Mexican will celebrate this anniversary, an anniversary fraught with such heroic memories by a gala fiesta or the like, whether he live in Yucatan, Buenos Ayres, Chili, Peru or even in Spain itself. The sequel of the curate's cry was the establishment of another republic in this vast country, and the Mexican of to-day reveres the heroic spirit and energy of the Curate Hidalgo. The history of Mexico has two sides—one side of its banner being smeared and stained with blood, and the other side of its banner being the stars typical of the lives and characters of those men who poured out their hearts' blood on the altar of liberty. The celebration of this anniversary is a striking proof of the Mexican's patriotism and his love of liberty. It is respected by America, and all Americans yield to the innovations and customs of the Mexican people on this occasion.

In San Antonio preparations have been made for some time by the Mexican Mutual Aid Society to celebrate in a becoming manner this anniversary, the celebration of which will continue until the 17th and 18th of September. Last evening about 7300 members of the Mexican Aid society met on Military plaza and a large concourse of Mexicans assembled to witness and take part in the celebration. Before the procession started a fireworks display by Katterly lit up the plaza, showing a set of faces. The procession being formed it marched in the following order:

City police.

United States silk flag.

Chief Marshal J. F. Cassiano.

Mexican band.

Carriage containing Alderman Juan Cardenas, President of the society, and the Mexican consul, Dr. Plazares Ornelas.

Members of the Albert Sydney Johnston camp.

Confederate war veterans and other societies, invited by the Sociedad Mutualista Mexicana.

Marching in Antonio Rivera, Thad. W. Smith, J. Firmin Cassiano, Oscar Bergstrom, Melchior Torres, Charles Crawford, Domingo Flores, F. N. Sanchez, Lino Sanchez, Tiburcio Garza, Felix Jurcanelo, and the various bands, including the Gallardo, Ygnacio Casiano and others.

Eight United States Cavalry band.

Committee of Arrangements in carriages.

Members of invited societies in carriages.

The members of the Mutual Aid society and other societies, invited by the Sociedad Mutualista Mexicana.

The route the procession took was from Military plaza to West Commerce street, thence to the corner of Commerce and Laredo street to Dolores street; thence down Dolores street to Main street; thence down Main street to Alamo plaza; thence North to Houston street; thence along Houston street to Acuña street; thence up Acuña street to the Mexican Consulate, where it halted and Dr. Ornelas delivered a brief address of welcome, when the procession proceeded on to San Pedro spring where a large crowd had congregated to receive it.

When the procession arrived at the springs, the glare of hundreds of torches, combined with the lanterns, created a splendid effect, and the various torch-bearers formed in a line on either side of the stage, which was tastefully decorated with the flags of the two Republics and festoons of evergreens. The springs presented a gay sight to the thousands of people, at least 5000, who came to witness the occasion. Hundreds of all descriptions had been fitted up, draped with the national tricolor, the owners of these vending stalls Mexican dealers in the various by collections, etc. The electrical machinery, lighting gallery and orthodox shows of monsters, in the shape of a billed heron, despoiled chickens, etc., including vendors of stain-removing compounds and other wares all there, each stall and show having its fair share of customers.

A salute of United States artillery in honor of the occasion, after which the presentation of the new banner to the society took place. The banner, introduced by Benito Maria de Magallon, Cardista Garcia and Ruse Cardenas, when they presented the banner, Benito Cardenas giving the presentation speech, a suitable reply to which was given by the society's President, Colonel Juan
